Catholic senator after catholic senator, mostly from Heflin's own party, rose to defend the "noble catholic church" and merely to deny that the million dollar K. C. fund will be used against Mexico. Senators Bruce, Reed of Missouri, Ashurst and Walsh rose one by one to belittle talk of the war and defend the Knights of Columbus.

The republicans, for the most part, staid out of the debate. It was clear to everyone that the speeches against Heflin being made by members of his own party, was objective support to the administration's Mexican dealings. The so-called "insurgent" republicans were silent.

Nicaragua Drowned Out.

The question of Nicaragua is being drowned out. The marines are still there. The merciless blockade of the Sacasa liberals still continues.

NEEDLE WORKERS UNITE AGAINST NEW EXPULSION

Protest Against A. F. of L. Ouster of Furriers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 19. — A great demonstration of all the workers of New York to express their solidarity and protest against the illegal and undemocratic policy of the A. F. of L. in expelling the entire joint board and four locals of the I. L. G. W. U. and officers of the furriers' union, has been called by the joint board of the cloak and dressmakers' unions and the joint board of the furriers' union. The demonstration will take places on Thursday, January 20, after work, and is expected to fill six meeting halls.

Against Traitors.

"Raise the mighty arm of class solidarity against the spies and traitors of the labor movement," is the slogan of the meetings which will be held at the same time as meetings called by the international. The campaign of vilification and frame-up before the entire labor movement of America against the progressive leadership of the furriers and the garment workers will be fully exposed.

A "manouver to fool the workers" is seen by C. S. Zimmerman, manager of the dress division of the joint board, in the announcement of the international that conferences with the sub-manufacturers in the dress industry have been broken off without arriving at an agreement.

Fool Workers.

"This is a mere manouver to fool the workers into thinking that the international is bargaining for a good agreement," Mr. Zimmerman said "We have reliable information that they have practically reached an agreement which gives away to the employers several important points. The best proof of the dishonesty of their statement is that they cannot

Minnesota Farmer-Labor Conference Takes Firm Stand Against American Imperialism and for Independent Political Action

"IMPEACH KELLOGG!" IS DEMAND OF BIG MINNESOTA FARMER-LABOR CONFERENCE MEETING AT ST. PAUL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 19.—Impeachment of Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, St. Paul corporation lawyer and former United States senator from Minnesota, was unanimously demanded by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Conference meeting here. The farmer-labor ticket last November received a quarter million votes. The resolution that sets forth the position of the conference on the whole question of imperialist aggression in Latin-American countries is as follows:

HIT PUPPET PRESIDENT, DIAZ.

"BE IT KNOWN, that the national administration, thru Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, has flagrantly violated the sovereignty of Nicaragua thru interference by armed invasion with the internal affairs of that nation and has set up a puppet president in opposition to the duly elected chief executive, and is rendering every assistance that the naval forces of the United States can give to sustain the imposter Diaz in

General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

THE Farmer-Labor Conference held in St. Paul January 17 and 18, marks a big step forward for independent political action for the class interests of the workers and farmers. The conference repudiated all propaganda that the Minnesota workers and farmers were ready to go back to the policy of picking good men on the republican and democratic tickets. It took an uncompromising position against American imperialism. It declared for a movement forward to build a national labor party for the 1928 presidential election.

Conference Is Representative Gathering.

The conference was called by the legal state central committee of the Farmer-Labor Association, the state committee of the Farmer-Labor Association, three legislative boards of the organizations of railroad workers and the state committee of the Non-Partisan League. The final report of the credentials committee showed something over 200 delegates present, representing trade unions, farmers' organizations, co-operatives and other workers' and farmers' organizations.

During the last election campaign, which culminated in November, a certain group in the Farmer-Labor Party, led by one Quigley and supported by Emil Holmes, who had won the Farmer-Labor Party nomination for lieutenant-governor, and a number of lawyers, small business men and politicians had retired the issue of the liquidation of the Farmer-Labor Party and led a movement back to the democratic and republican parties, with the object of substituting the non-partisan policy of picking "good men" on the old party tickets in the primaries for independent political action. The conference in a certain measure was called to answer these deserters and to devise the ways and means for strengthening the Farmer-Labor Party.

The mood of the workers and farmers of Minnesota was indicated in the fact that the delegates sent to the conference were those committed

MINNESOTA WORKERS AND FARMERS TAKE FIRM STAND IN FIGHT FOR INDEPENDENT POLITICAL ACTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 19.—The firm and determined stand of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Conference held here declaring for independent political action was as follows:

FOR INDEPENDENT POLITICAL ACTION

"WHEREAS, the past experiences of the workers and farmers with the republican and democratic parties have proven conclusively that both these parties are the servants of the special privileged interests which profit from the labor of the workers and farmers; that these parties use the legislative power to place the burden of taxation upon the workers and farmers to the benefit of the specially privileged interests; that they refuse legislation for relief of the farmers, who face a crisis in the agricultural industry resulting in part from the exploitation of the railroads, marketing combinations, the food trust, grain elevators and banks; that they manipulate the tariff for the profits of the special tinuous dates in all important cities of the country. It is the third observance of the great leader's death.

The largest possible halls are being secured and the raising of the slogan of anti-imperialism is attracting exceptional interest among the workers who feel a natural alliance with the exploited victims of the new colonial aspirations of American finance.

Huge N. Y. Meet.

The huge new Madison Square Garden in New York, capable of seating a veritable city of people, will be none too large to accommodate the thousands of workers who wish to do honor to the memory of the great revolutionist, Lenin, and to express their opposition to the invasion of Latin-America and China. Detroit Memorial Meetings to Have Addad Features.

DETROIT, Mich.—The cancellation of the Armory for the Detroit Lenin Memorial Meetings by the military authorities will result in two huge meetings instead of one.

At a special membership meeting of the party over 200 were present and plans for two successful Lenin demonstrations completed. Twenty-five thousands leaflets announcing the new halls will be distributed and every possible form of publicity is being put out. The splendid enthusiasm and determination shown by the members of the party is a fitting reply to the attack on the party by the Detroit militarists.

Arrangements were made to have Foster and Rebeca Grecht appear at both of the meetings and additional halls have been secured for the expected overflow crowds.

The huge painting of Lenin now completed will be shown at both halls. A number of first-class additions have been made to the musical program.

In addition to the Finnish Workers' Band, Ukrainian Workers' Chorus, Pioneer Chorus and Stefan Kozickevitch, baritone, the following additions have been made: The Finnish Workers' Chorus, the Jugoslav Workers' Orchestra and two leading baritone singers whose names will be announced shortly.

The meetings will take place at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, Jan. 23rd, at the Finnish Labor Temple, 5969 14th St. (near McGraw) and the newly completed Workers' Home, 1343 E. Ferry Ave (near Russell). The admission to the meetings is 25c.

The several thousand tickets already sold for the Armory will be accepted at the two new halls.

Banquet for Foster.

A left wing banquet has been arranged for Wm. Z. Foster for the evening of Jan. 23rd at the Jewish Labor Temple, 9179 Delmar Ave.

No Reply on Furriers.

President Green said he probably would not return to New York until after Feb. 1, to confer with the auto officials there regarding the report of the Weil committee charging Communist dominance and bribery of the police in the furriers' strike.

Neither Mr. Green nor any other member of the executive council would comment on criticisms of the report made by Ben Gold, head of the joint board which directed the strike, or Joseph Ryan, president of the Central Trades Union.

The council members declared themselves ready, however, to turn over to the authorities all the information they have collected regarding the graft charges and to cooperate in every way.

Announcement has been made here of the resignation of Charles Moyer, president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smeltermen with headquarters in Denver. President Green stated that new officials would be chosen at a convention of the organization now in session in St. Paul.

The resignation of Moyer comes as the climax to a long period of internal struggle during which the union membership has dropped from 4,000 to 6,000.

tion hauled the southerner over the coals. These indignant senators, catholic and protestant, indulged in fervid praise of patriotic patriotism and denied that the Knights of Columbus had any designs on the peace of Mexico.

EVERYBODY who reads the papers knows quite well that the K. of C raised a million dollar fund to equip the reactionaries in Mexico with arms with which to overthrow the Calles administration, but neither the capitalist press nor the politicians dare antagonize the powerful catholic political machine by telling the truth about the situation. None with the exception of blatherskites like Senator Heflin of Alabama, whose courage can be attributed to the fact that he depends on the K. K. K. vote for his seat in the senate.

IN all probability the matters at issue between the United States and Mexico will be submitted to arbitration. Washington was unable to find a reasonable excuse for declaring war on the southern republic. The task of subjugating Mexico would be a costly one and Wall Street, perhaps, decided that the brandishing of the big stick may have served the purpose of making the Mexican government listen to "reason."

SWAMP KELLOGG WITH DELUGE OF SHARP RIDICULE

Press Criticism of His 'Red' Scare Mounts

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Not since Mitchell Palmer attempted to terrorize the American public by his "red raids" and fanatic stories of bomb plots into making him president has a cabinet officer come under as heavy a fire of press ridicule and spoken contempt as has Secretary Kellogg with his "Bolshevist Aims" document, offered in explanation of his Nicaraguan-Mexican attacks.

Thick and impervious as is the skin of the former corporation lawyer, the printing in the Congressional Record of editorials from leading metropolitan newspapers, condemning his arrogant and overbearing bile mentality, has made an impression. Kellogg now wants the country to understand that in that secret meeting with Sen. Borah's committee he told the history of Nicaraguan intervention. He even claimed that he did not know that his "red scare" document was to be made public.

There was no comfort for Calvin Coolidge in the editorials dealing with Kellogg's literary effort. The New York World was cruel enough to analyze it, starting off with the sentence: "Contemptible as the document is in its spirit, its purpose, its substance and its reasoning, it is necessary to pause over it and analyze the character of the evidence on which the secretary of state has put his seal."

Nor could Coolidge be flattered by the inferences contained in this sentence in the Baltimore Sun's editorial: "For we doubt seriously whether ever before in the history of this nation has the head of the state department appeared in public in a state of such utterly indecent intellectual exposure."

Finally comes a cablegram to the Pan-American Federation of Labor from Secretary Treving of the Mexican labor movement, quoting his letter of protest to Kellogg, in the name of his organization, against the "lack of truth in your declarations before the foreign relations committee of the U. S. senate." Treving says that Kellogg quoted from his speech in the Mexican chamber of deputies in a way that distorted its meaning.

make public the points upon which expulsions failed."

Condemn Gangsterism.

A membership meeting of Cloak and Dress locals filled Manhattan Lyceum to overflowing on January 17. Continued gangsterism of the International was condemned at the meeting, the latest unrestly inspired by Sigmanism occurred on Thursday when Harry Grossinger of Local 2 and P. Greenberg of Local 35 were brutally attacked by members of the "Greenberg" gang. This gang has been riding thru the garment section for days, and wherever it can single out a group of isolated pickets or workers loyal to the joint board, it attacks, leaving its helpless victims to be care for by passersby. Grossinger and Greenberg were attacked while they were picketing the G. and E. Dress shop. The gangsters escaped.

Respond to Bond Issue.

The protest of workers of the entire organized labor movement of America against the policy of expulsion of members of unions for alleged political beliefs and the terrorist methods now being used by Morris Sigman, president of the I. L. G. W. U. to enforce such expulsions, is seen in the quick response to the bond issue of the joint board, which is seeking funds to carry on a fight "for democracy within trades unions."

In a statement issued by Julius Portnoy, secretary of the bond issue, on the results of the campaign up to date, he declared that an unprecedented interest had been shown in the present dispute and that workers all over the country were investing in the joint board bonds as a protest against Sigmanism.

Pledge $100,000.

At a big conference of New York workers held in the city last week, $100,000 to be raised within three weeks was pledged by the workers attending, who come from 63 Workmen's Circles, 7 locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 14 locals of the International, 4 locals of painters, 3 locals of fur workers, and four carpenters,' longshoremen, shoemakers,' jewelry workers' and fancy leather goods workers' unions. The conference was called without authority upon personal invitation of Portnoy, with the result that nearly 300 people from 125 organizations attended to pledge their efforts to sell the bonds.

A similar conference was held recently in Philadelphia with 700 workers in attendance who pledged $30,000 to be raised within 3 weeks.

Socialists Propose An Amended Slavery for the Victims of Imperialism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

THE socialist party has at last issued what purports to be an official declaration on U. S. imperialism's aggressions against Mexico, Nicaragua and China.

The contents of the statement are interesting, in that they further reveal the milk-and-water liberalism of an organization that still cries to hall under the name "Socialist."

For instance, the Socialist Party, in the homeland of American imperialism, demands the "immediate revision of the unequal treaties against which Chinese anger is rising." The Chinese national revolution, under the leadership of the Kuomintang, is demanding the complete abrogation of all these treaties. Thus the Socialist Party, which still claims to be a party of social revolution, demands less than the Chinese nationalists. In fact, the American, British and Japanese imperialists would be very happy if the Cantonese revolutionists would agree to the mere revision of the "treaties" imposed under the guns of warships and at the points of bayonets. But this is not the first time that the Socialist Party has acted as a propaganda agency of the imperialists.

It is also of great interest, however, to note that it took the socialists officialdom more than two weeks to act in the Nicaragua-Mexico-Chinese situation, and that the product of the collective brain appears, not in the official organ of the party, The American Appeal, but in the columns of the New Leader, published in New York City as the expression of the Hillquit-Hillman-Cahan wing of the party.

It was during the Christmas week-end that Brig.-Gen. Smedley Butler, appointed dictator over Nicaragua by the Coolidge-Mellon-Morgan regime in Washington, began landing the marines, loyal imperialist soldiers, on the shores of the Central American republic. But the New York socialists were so busy clustering up the reactionary attack on the left wing and the Communists in the needle trades, that the New Years week-end passed and half of January was gone before the socialists finally issued their statement in the Saturday, Jan. 15th, issue of The New Leader.

This emphasizes again that the socialists have three centers around which their party revolves. The national office is still maintained in Chicago, evidently for lack of initiative to dump it elsewhere. The local socialist movement in the nation's second city has disappeared. But the Chicago office is very clearly isolated from the other two centers, that maintained by the socialist congressman, Victor L. Berger, in Milwaukee, around his daily, The Leader, and the eastern group that takes its leadership from Abraham Cahan and his weekly, The Daily Forward. The Chicago editor writes his own views on American intervention in Nicaragua, Berger is all set both in congressional and daily speech, while the New York clique has difficulty issuing the statement actual. The Socialist Party in whose the plea appears that

"Every war of peace, as well as every labor of American honor, must be prominently connected to oppose the ruthless policy of economic imperialism backed by the use or the threat of force upon which the Coolidge administration has embarked."

This appeal would doubtless include Goldfish, Kellogg, Latimer and even J. Pierpont Morgan, himself, since they all claim to be "lovers of peace." Coolidge said so in his speeches at Kansas City, delivering a memorial to the victims of the last great slaughter, and also at Trenton, N. J., commemorating the victory of the colonists in the revolutionary war of 1776. The whole pronouncement is also strong for "American honor." That is why, they claim, a great section of the American navy is now humming in Nicaragua waters both its western and eastern coasts, to "protect life and property" in the name and for the glory of American honor.

But this is only to be expected from the socialists who prefer the capitalist state of the profiteers to the Soviet State of the workers and farmers (see testimony of Louis Waldman at the Albany trial of the expelled socialist assemblymen), or who vote liberty arches in honor of those who fought in Morgan's war (refer to wartime stand of socialist members of the New York board of alderman). When the socialists joined in the LaFollette campaign in 1924, they adopted the slogan of "Back to 76!" But the honor of a revolution 150 years old, as well as its traditions, while comfortably placed in history's pages, have little application today, especially in Nicaragua, Mexico and China, except as inspirations for new and greater struggles.

Socialists who seek an alliance with the "lovers of peace," manting themselves in "American honor," are always found on the side of the moneyed crowd, and the socialist party confesses this in its desire for an amended imperialist slavery for the peoples of China.

Even the Federal Council of Churches and other pacifist organizations would hardly be guilty of claiming that American diplomatic policy is now "alienating historic Chinese friendship with America." Because the Chinese masses, until the past two years, have been yoked and forced to their knees by foreign imperialism, in which the Wall Street brand has played its brutal part, that does not mean that China can be so admitted any friendship for the United States. In fact the Chinese place the American imperialists in the same category with their British, French and Japanese foes. The socialist party statement infers that if American gunboats were withdrawn from Chinese waters, and if the American diplomatic policy would dull the spikes on the club of its "Dollar Diplomacy," then the oppressive rule of the American dollar would be acceptable and the phantom Chinese friendship would be restored. This is to take the false position that imperialist oppression can be adjusted satisfactorily upon the backs of subject colonial peoples. It is an echo of the American Federation of Labor theory that the capitalists and workers, thru class collaboration schemes, can co-operate together harmoniously in the production of super-profits, with the troublesome class struggle never disturbing the reign of "class peace."

The trouble with the whole theory of the socialist party leaders, which is not a socialist theory, is that the situations in Nicaragua, Mexico and China give the lie full in the face to the socialist party nonsense.

American "Dollar Diplomacy" has developed in harmony with the aims of the Wall Street imperialists. This development is directly contrary to the interests of subject peoples, and the inevitable conflict arises. When socialists urge "constructive co-operative foreign policy" on the imperialist robbers, they place themselves in the ranks of the latter, only to be laughed at, especially when they urge that their measures constitute "the road to honor and peace."

It may be taken for granted that American workers and farmers, who still smart under the enforced participation in the last war, will not be disdammed by this rainbow offering of the socialist party. Workers and farmers, as we have already seen in the actions of the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Denver (Colo.) Trades and Labor Assembly, and in the Minnesota Farmer-Labor conference, instinctively reject the "honor of peace" path under capitalism, offered by the socialist sirens, and launch their attack directly against the profit monster. The fight against the socialist saporific is part of the struggle to unite American labor with the peoples oppressed under "Dollar Diplomacy," for the common conquest of imperialism.

to maintaining the Farmer-Labor Party as a party of the workers and farmers. So strong was this sentiment that not a single voice was raised during the conference for any other policy than that of building a party which would fight for the interests of these two economic groups and represent them in the struggle against the two old parties.

Build the Farmer-Labor Movement.

The resolution on the main issue of independent political action, which is printed in another column, does not only decisively repudiate the desertors from the Farmer-Labor Party and their policies. It brings out more clearly than has been done heretofore in the statements of the Farmer-Labor Party that it must be a party which fights for the class interests of the workers and farmers. In the past there has been a strong third party current in the Minnesota movement, that is, that the party should be a general opposition party in which lawyers, small business men and professional men would play their role, and in the leadership these groups played an important part.

While the support of these groups is not repudiated, the resolution is decisive in declaring that the party must fight for the class interests of the workers and of the farmers.

A second resolution, of great importance, relates to the building of the Farmer-Labor Association. The leaders of Minnesota narrowly limit the form of organization of the legally organized Farmer-Labor Party. In order to overcome the difficulty which this creates the Farmer-Labor Association has been organized as a directing force within the legal Farmer-Labor Party. The Farmer-Labor Association is based upon the affiliation of the units of the workers' and farmers' organizations of the state, thus creating the organization basis for the exercise of their influence upon the policies and candidates of the Farmer-Labor Party.

The conference adopted a resolution calling for the strengthening of the Farmer-Labor Association and recommended that the association hold a convention in March of this year for this purpose.

A further step in the same direction is contained in a resolution demanding that all candidates on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket conduct their campaign on the basis of the platform of the Farmar-Labor Party and not on issues which they may personally favor, which has been one of the evils of the Farmer-Labor Party campaigns in the past. All candidates are also expected to designate themselves as Farmer-Labor Party nominees, even when the election is non-partisan in accordance with legal provisions.

Move for National Labor Party in 1928.

The conference took steps for the formation of a national labor party for the 1928 presidential election. It recommended that the Farmer-Labor Association initiate a conference of all existing bona fide farmer-labor parties and that in the conference the Farmer-Labor Association take a stand for a movement to build a national party.

The resolution declares that the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party cannot achieve its full strength without the support of a national movement along the same line, and therefore these steps are necessary. There was some sentiment in the conference against this move, but this was swpt aside by the overwhelming support of the delegates and the resolution was finally unanimously adopted.

The Struggle Against American Imperialism.

The position taken by the conference in relation to the invasion of Nicaragua, the threats against Mexico, the mobilization of American naval forces in Chinese waters is of particular importance in view of the present crisis, threatening to involve this country in a new war. It indicates the attitude of the American workers and farmers toward the imperialist policy in support of Wall Street investments followed by the Coolidge administration.

Three resolutions were adopted on this question. The first denounces the policy of Coolidca and Kellogg in relation to Nicaragua, Mexico and China and brands it as contrary to the interest of the workers and farmers. This resolution defends the Union of Socialist Republics against Kellogg's charges, and declares these charges to be merely a smoke screen to hide the action of the government in support of American and foreign investors. The second resolution calls upon the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to join the fight aguist America imperialism by rallying the organized workers against it. The third supports the stand taken by Senators Wheeler and Borah and Representative Huddleston in congress in relation to the invasion of Nicaragua and calls upon them to take a similar stand against the threatening war against Mexico and imperialist intervention in China.

The conference, in these resolutions, has sounded a keynote which the workers and farmers thruout the country may well follow, and undoubtedly these resolutions will have an important influence in building a powerful movement against American imperialism.

Nationalization of the Railroads.

A legislative program was adopted by the conference, calling for the nationalization of the railroads with workers' control, against the renewal of the charter of the Federal Reserve system and for issuance of all money by the treasury, for a bank guarantee law which will safeguard the farmers against bank suspensions, for reclassification of the taxation so as to relieve the workers and farmers and increase the taxes of the railroads and mining corporations, against the proposed statute of limitations law, with a number of other similar demands in the interest of the workers and farmers having relation to the situation in Minnesota.

The seating of Emil Youngdehl as a member of the state legislature was demanded. Youngdahl, a former member of the Workers (Communist) Party, had been counted out in the election. A recount showed he had been elected over his opponent, Rutledge, who had been seated in the legislature. Rutledge was ousted but Youngdahl was not given his seat. The question is now pending in the Minnesota supreme court.

Attempts to Separate Workers and Farmers.

There was an undercurrent in the conference which, while it did not come into the open upon the floor of the convention, nevertheless aimed to separate the farmers from the workers in the farmer-labor movement. This move was led by so-called representatives of the farmers, lawyers, small town bankers, etc., but was not supported by the bona fide farmers themselves. It unquestionably represented a flank movement on the part of groups who are against a party fighting for the interests of the workers and of the farmers.

It expressed itself in opposition in committee meetings to a resolution calling for direct affiliation of workers' and farmers' associations with the state organization of the Farmer-Labor Association, in place of thru county organizations. The supporters of this resolution argued that such direct affiliation would greatly sfrenzthen the Farmer-Labor Association. The opposition raised the cry that it would put the farmers at the mercy of the workers in the conferences, because there were so many more units of workers' organizations.

Rather then give the enemies of the Farmer-Labor Party a weapon thru which they could separate the farmers from the general movement, and possibly organize them separately on the basis of non-partisan action, the supporters of this resolution withdrew it.

The results of this farmer-labor conference may be summarized as a movement toward the left by the Minnesota workers and farmers—that is, a movement for a more definite fight for their class interests.

Coming at a time when the general labor movement is going toward the right it represents a fresh new wind blowing which undoubtedly will have an influence outside of Minnesota. The development of the Minnesota farmer-labor party along the lines laid down by this conference will make it a real, effective fighting movement for the workers and farmers. The fact that the conference was unanimous in all its decisions, and attempts to side-track it from its main work of strengthening the farmer-labor party by minor attempts to create an anti-Communist scare were promptly squelched, indicates that a healthy period of growth lies ahead of it.

MINNESOTA SUPPORTS MOVE FOR LABOR PARTY IN THE 1928 ELECTION

Endorse Building Farmer-Labor Association As Workers' and Farmers' Organization to Direct Farmer-Labor Party

THE legal Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota is controlled by state laws limiting the organization form. In order to crystallize the influence of the workers and farmers inside the legal party, the Farmer-Labor Association, with which the workers' and farmers' organizations are affiliated, has been organized. The Farmer-Labor Conference endorsed the building of the Farmer-Labor Association in the following resolution:

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that this conferance hellavas tha Farmar-Labor Party can be best strengthened and mainteined as a party of the workers and farmers thru building as the guiding and directing organization of the Farmer-Labor Party, the Farmer-Labor Association, and that the Farmer-Labor Association should be built up thru the affiliation of all workers' and farmers' organization with it, and

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that this conferance calls upon the Farmer-Labor Association for an immediate, energatic campaign for affiliation of all units of workers' and farmors' organizations and for the holding of a state-wide conferance of the Farmer-Labor Association in March, 1927, before the adjournment of the Minnasota state legislature."

privilaged interests and to place more burdens upon the workers and farmars; that they refuse legislation for adequate compensation to workers injured in industry, and to safeguard the lives and health of the workers; that they use the executive power and the judicial power thru injunctions to make ineffective the struggles of organized labor for higher wages and working conditions; that the power of the government in their hands is used to back the great Wall Street banking houses in their imperialist exploitation of other countries, creating the danger of new ware in which the workers and farmers are called upon to fight for the profits and investments of special privileged interests, and

"WHEREAS, the workers and farmers of the State of Minnesota are and farmers of Minnesota to organize tha Farmer-Labor Party in order to carry on the political struggle for their interests and against the exploitation of the specially privilaged interests which the government of state as well as that of the nation serves when in the hands of the republican and democratic partias, and

"WHEREAS, a small group of former supporters of the Farmer-Labor Party, made up of persons whose record shows that they have no interest in the struggle of the workers and fermers, have in recent months daserted the Farmer-Labor Party, and have called upon the workers and farmers to give up the Farmer-Labor Party and return to the bankrupt policy of supporting candidates on the ticket of the republican and democratic parties, which have proven themselves the enemies of the workers and farmers. Now, therefore, be it

DENOUNCE RENEGADES AND DESERTERS

"RESOLVED, that this conference of representatives of the workers' and farmers' organization of the state of Minnesota denounces these persons who would lead the workers and farmers back to the republican and democratic partice as betreyers of the cause of the workers and farmers and repudiate their policies as in the interest of the special privilaged interests; and be it furtahr

"RESOLVED, that this conference calls upon the workers and farmers of the state to stand by the great achievement they have made in building a party which represents their interests; and to answer these deserters by building a stronger and more powerful organization of the Farmer-Labor Party, which will be able to carry on the struggle against the special privilaged interests, represented by the republican and democratic parties, until the power of the government is wrested from the hands of these interests and a Workers' and Farmers' government is established in this state and in the nation."

office against the wishes of a majority of the people of Nicaragua and the rights of the duly elected President Sacasa; and

"Be it further known, that in order to justify the outrageous course taken, Secretary of State Kellogg has charged without warrant or proof that representatives of the Soviet government are working thru the Mexican government to foment antagonism to American intervention in Nicaragua, thereby threatening the present and future interests of the United States in Central America. Facts show that this charge has been made to bolster up an infamous proceeding in Nicaragua and to arouse prejudice against Mexico in the interests of American and other foreign investors; and

"Be it further known, this proceeding is calculated to destroy the friendly relations now existing between the United States and Latin-American countries, and is fraught and period with violent conflict and war in view of the dangerous and unjust course pursued by Secretary Kellogg. Be it

SEND PROTEST TO WASHINGTON.

"Resolved, that this state conference of Farmer-Labor and other progressive forces of Minnesota in meeting assembled at St. Paul on this 18th day of January, 1927, thus hereby register a vigorous protest against the course taken by the state department in this matter and petitions congress to impeach Frank B. Kellogg, that he may be tried for violation of his trust and removed from office: be it further

"Resolved, that copies of this protest be sent to the president of the United States, to the president of the senate, to the speakers of the house of representatives, and to United States Senator Shipstead and United States Representatives Wefald, Quayle, Carse and Kallar."

DEMAND ACTION BY A. F. OF L.

"Whereas, the Nicaragnan Federation of Labor is affiliated with tha Pan-American Federation of Labor, of which the American Federation of Labor is a part, and

"Whereas, at the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor and at the convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor which followed it, pledges of brotherly aid and co-operation were made to the labor movement of Mexico and Latin-America, and

"Whereas, the Coolidge administration, acting in accord with the wishes of Wall Street, the leader of the open shop movement in the United States, has sent battleships and marines to aid a dictator in Nicaragua against the duly elected head of the Nicaraguan government, and

"Whereas, the constitutional government of Nicaragua is supported by the Nicaraguan Federation of Labor, and

"Whereas, at the same time the American goveromant in support of the same Wall Street interests is threatening Mexico and sending American warships to China, and all the governmental actions carry the threat of a new imperialist war in support of Wall Street investments: now therefore be it

"Resolved, that this Farmer-Labor Confereeco calle upon the executive council of the American Federation of Labor that it protests emphatically against the invasion of Nicaragua, the threats against Mexico, and intervention in China, and calls for the immediate withdrawal of American military and naval forces from these countries; and be it further

"Resolved, that the conference calls upon congress to pass the Wheeler-Huddleston resolution, also supported by Senator Shipstead, now pending for the withdrawal of American naval forces and marines from Nicaragua."

WITHDRAW U. S. MILITARY FORCES!

Resolution adopted at the state conference Jan. 17 and 18 in St. Paul of the Farmer-Labor Association heartily endorses the action of Senators Shipstead, Borah and Wheeler, together with Representative Huddleston, in their efforts toward securing the withdrawal of the American military forces from the territory of Nicaragua, and we also urge that the same influence be used towards refraining from interference into internal affairs of China and Mexico.

TROOPS CLOSE IN ON WARRING CHURCH LEADER

Capture of Archbishop Momentarily Expected

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 19.—The Mexican war department has issued a bulletin saying that Archbishop Ornaso y Jimines has been entirely surrounded by federal troops in the hills of Jalisco and that the capture of the churchman and his followers may be expected momentarily.

The chief of staff of the army, Gen. Jose Alvarado has answered a pastoral letter issued by the catholic episcopate several days ago declaring that the hierarchy has nothing to do with the revolts in the outlying states.

Proof of Connivance.

Alvarado declares he has positive proof that the clergy not only fomented the present uprisings in consultation with foreign reactionary powers against the Calles government, but that prominent members of the clergy have conspired with reactionaries touching this end.

The mere fact that one of the foremost archbishops in Mexico has himself taken up arms and that the leader, Capistran Garza of the largest catholic lay organization has declared himself "provisional president" is considered enough proof of itself that the clergy is an intimate party to the present reactionary revolt, this is the opinion of prominent Mexico City papers.

Go to Court.

Most of the American oil companies with are involved in the dispute over the Mexican oil laws have filed injunctions at Tampico, seeking to restrain the government from interfering with production while the cases are carried thru the courts No interference with oil activities have been reported so far.

Practically all of the foreign companies outside the big American Mellon, Doheny, Sinclair and Standard Oil concerns, all American firms, have complied with the requirements of the laws.

SMITH RAPS AT SENATE'S DOOR; BATTLE IS ON

Insull's Man Scored for Fraud

ticipate in senatorial activities until his case is finally settled. Deneen drew out of the ninety files of the senate a series of precedents in which senators-designate and senators-elect were given their oaths even though election contests were filed against them.

Frank's Virtues.

"In the case of Colonel Frank L. Smith there is no charge that he lacks the qualifications specified in the constitution. He is thirty years of age, is a citizen of the United States and has been for over nine years, was an inhabitant of the state of Illinois when appointed, and has never violated the inhibitions of the fourteenth amendment. Therefore under the precedents he is entitled to take the oath of office," said Deneen.

Deneen stressed the precedent established in 1849 when the senate gave the oath to Major General Shields, whose election by the state legislature had been contested. Douglas at length defending the seating of Shields, whose election by the state legislature had been contested. Douglas demanded that Shields be sworn and the contested election waived. The senate then gave Shields his oath, Deneen said.

Stain of Fraud.

"Fraud in the election," Senator Reed of Missouri said, "puts its stain on those elected thereby."

Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, asked him whether he thought the senate had any power to judge of Smith's qualifications until the Illinois man finally became a member of the senate. Reed said it was the first time the question ever had been raised. Replying to Reed, Senator Borah (R) of Idaho declared the Missourian "had been led astray." He declared the framers of the constitution did not intend to give congress unlimited power over the membership. He said the states had intended to keep the supreme power in their hands over their representatives in congress.

Cites Nye Case.

The most recent precedent was called to the senate's attention by Senator Shipstead (FL) of Minnesota. He referred to the case of Senator Nye (R) of North Dakota, in December, 1925, who was denied the oath of the office for two weeks until the senate voted to seat him.

No Hope For Him.

The day's debate indicated no material change in sentiment in the senate against Smith. A poll showed that the Smith would be denied him by a vote of about 65 to 32, with his credentials going to the elections committee for investigation. In the meanwhile, Smith would be denied admittance to the senate

'CLASS PEACE' IS MENACE TO LABOR—WEISBORD

By a Worker Correspondent.

SEATTLE, Jan. 19.—"The selfishness of 'key' workers in dominant industrial nations has been used to wreak their fellows of more backward countries as well as the unskilled in their own."

This, directed particularly at skilled wage earners of America, was the point around which Albert Weisbord, Passaic strike organizer, mustered his forces in a scathing attack on the theory of "class peace," delivered before a capacity audience at the Eagle's Auditorium here.

"The working class of America has not yet abandoned class collaboration as a principle," he said. "Until this theory of class peace is destroyed and the doctrine of class struggle permeates the mass mind we shall have our Coolidges, our Fords and Greens, our cowardly American Federation of Labor and social-democratic advocacy of an impossible inter-class harmony, our confusion of issues and ideas which cannot disappear, except with the obliteration of class lines."

Church and Atheists Work Together in L. A. Anti-War Conference

By L. P. RINDAL,
(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—Thirty delegates, representing various organizations, including the Workers (Communist) Party, attended an anti-war conference here. The conference formed a temporary organization, electing Rev. E. P. Ryland, member of the Church Federation, chairman, and Queen Silver, secretary of the Devil's Angels, atheist organization, secretary. Thus church and atheists are working together on this. James Eads How, Ryland and Editor Russ were chosen for a committee to draft resolutions and plan another meeting.

MINNESOTA FARMERS ARE FORCED TO MAKE LIQUOR TO STAVE OFF STARVING

HOLDINGFORD, Minn., Jan. 19.—Farmers in this section are being forced to make moonshine liquor in order to starve off starvation. So many are doing this now that the price is forced down so that even this is bringing little relief.

One farmer, whose farm and crops were seized by a Little Falls bank, was forced to "sell" his property altho it was mortgaged by the bank. The bank prosecuted him, but the jury would not convict.

Navy Fight Up Again as Senate Provides for Three Cruisers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Appropriation for the three navy cruisers, which was defeated in the house navy bill at the request of Pres. Coolidge, has been included in the senate navy department supply bill. The senate bill provides for the initial amounts necessary to construct the battleships that formed the center for heated debate in the house several weeks ago.

This action on the part of the senate will be the signal for another debate on the navy armaments. It is seen as another direct slap at Coolidge on the navy question.

Mexican Consulate Reports Unemployment Among Its Nationals

The Mexican vice-consul, Armando C. Amador, is authority for the statement that many Mexicans in the Chicago district are out of work because of slack business conditions, and that in very many cases, to his personal knowledge, the Mexicans who are at work are very generously helping out their less fortunate countrymen.

Amador states that he is quite sure the unemployment among Mexicans has no political significance and that they are not in any way discriminated against because of the controversy between the two governments.

Rolled Up Wrestling Mat.

SEATTLE, Jan. 19.—In the corridor of the Labor Temple a group of union men were standing around waiting for a meeting to begin. On the floor was a padded wrestling mat rolled up.

"What is that," asked a man coming up to the group.

"That's the A. F. of L. in the class struggle," came the answer from a left wing machinist, "a soft place for the class-collaborationists to light on."

Capture A. W. O. L.'s After 12 Years.

PARIS, Jan. 19. — Theophile and Felix Barthalon, aged 43 and 45, who deserted the French army more than 12 years ago have been captured by gendarmes. Since mobilization in August, 1914, right after which they escaped, the two brothers have been living in the mountains near Cap. They were captured after hot pursuit in the peaks, when their whereabouts were discovered.

Remember Lenin! Young Comrade Section Join the Pioneers!

WHO IS LENIN?

What Does He Mean to the Workers and the Workers Children?

LENIN was the organizer and leader of the Russian workers in the fight against the Czar, the landowners and the capitalists.

LENIN told the workers that in order to win freedom from their oppressors they must unite with the farmers and overthrow the Czar's government (which was a government of the rich) and set up their own Workers and Farmers Government.

LENIN formed the Russian Communist Party, the Bolshevik Party, made up of the most intelligent and bravest of the Russian workers. This party led the Russian workers and poor farmers in the fight against the rich landowners and bosses.

WHEN the war broke out Lenin and the Bolshevik Party told the workers that the war was for the benefit of the bosses and that the workers must not fight against workers of other countries who were brothers. Lenin said the workers should fight against the bosses and their government.

IN the year 1917 the workers overthrew the Czarand then the bosses and set up their own government, Lenin was made head of the government The new government gave factories to the workers, the land to the poor farmers and stopped the war.

THE bosses and landowners of Russia, together with the bosses and rich men of other countries, hated Lenin very much because he had led and was leading the workers against them. So they hired some wretches to try to kill Lenin. In August 1918 Lenin was shot and seriously wounded. But he was very strong and soon recovered. He went back to work but he grew worse. Finally, in January 1924 he died.

LENIN was the greatest leader the workers and poor farmers of the world ever had. Now he is dead. But he left us his teachings on how to fight the bosses and free ourselves. We must follow the way of Lenin! Lenin lives in the hearts of every honest and militant worker, and workers child! Hold aloft the flag of Lenin!

Here's a New Puzzle

Can you tell us what places these are?

1. A place where all the workers went on strike to support the miners but went back to work because their leaders betrayed them.

2. A place where workers went out on strike and are now winning because they had leaders who were faithful to the workers.

3. A place where the workers are being oppressed and murdered with the help of a black shirt organization which is the tool of the bosses.

Paterson Members of Party Show Interest in Russian Situation

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 19. — The situation in the party in the Soviet Union was the subject of discussion at the monthly general meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party here. Comrade Markoff came from New York to make the report and a lively discussion followed which showed that the members in Paterson are interesting in the opposition and majority in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

A significant feature of the Paterson meetings at the present time is that many members of the old language branches "who couldn't speak English" are forgetting that now and are joining in on the discussions.

ORGANIZE SACCO-VANZETTI FIGHT IN LOS ANGELES

By DAVE RAPO
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 19.—With 38 delegates representing 24 organizations, of which 14 are unions, a Sacco-Vanzetti conference was held Sunday, Jan. 9, in the Labor Temple.

This enlarged conference was called together by the existing Sacco-Vanzetti Conference organized by the International Labor Defense some time ago.

The new conference elected new officers and started work on a broader scale, especially among the trade unions of the city.

In the report of the past activities of the conference it came out that many mass meetings, picnics, and open air meetings had been held. Thousands of petitions were forwarded by many organizations and individuals to the governor of Massachusetts demanding a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti.

A sum of $477 was collected, of which $300 was sent direct to the Boston Defense Committee, $155.30 spent for bails, advertising, leaflets, etc., and $21.70 was turned over to the new conference.

Among the newly affiliated organizations are large local unions of painters, carpenters, mechanists, plasterers, and others; the Anti-Fascist Alliance, some Mexican workers' organizations, I. L. D. branches, Workmen's Circle branches, etc.

The conference elected an executive committee of twelve which will meet every Sunday morning at twelve at Labor Temple.

A resolution is being prepared to be sent for endorsement to all local unions and central bodies of the city demanding that the supreme court grant a new trial to Sacco and Vanzetti.

"Only the workers can prevent this judicial murder," stated Tom Lewis at the conference.

SIGMAN TACTICS IN CLOAKMAKERS' STRIKE EXPOSED AT CHICAGO MASS MEETING BY HYMAN OF JOINT BOARD

Before one of the largest meetings of cloakmakers and garment workers in the city of Chicago, gathered to hear the facts on the situation in New York in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Louis Hyman, manager of the joint board of the cloakmakers and dressmakers in New York, presented the story of the attempt of the right-wingers, under the leadership of Sigman, to gain control of the union and oust the left wing leadership. Schoenhofen hall was packed for the meeting, 1000 workers being present.

Sigman "Too Busy" to Come.

Sigman, who was invited by the Chicago joint board to attend and present his side of the case, did not show up, and instead wired that he was "too busy."

The meeting was held despite repeated attempts of Chicago right wing gangsters to break it up. An attempt to have the use of the hall denied the joint board was frustrated when the plot was discovered in time. Right wing gangsters were present at the meeting, but the meeting was so overwhelmingly left that they did not dare make a move toward disruption when the speaking was under way.

"Exposes 50 Cent Books."

The 50 cent "registration books" being given out by Sigman, who has sold the workers they will be freed from their past dues, is a trick, Hyman pointed out. The joint board, he said, is now in debt for about $700,000 and this money will have to be paid some time. Sigman's plan is to have the workers leave the ranks of the left wing, using the cancelling of back dues as a bait, and when they are once in, assess each member at least $25 to pay the debts. This will amount to as much as the dues, Hyman said.

Replies to "Illegal" Charge.

Replying to the charge of the Sigmanites that the cloakmakers' strike was "unconstitutional and illegal," Hyman reminded the right wing that all during the strike Sigman was a member of important committees, and that Sigman's supporters were on all committees.

Strike Was Victory.

The agreement gained by the joint board thru the strike was a decided victory, Hyman declared. The concessions won from the bosses were greatly in excess of the recommendations made by the governor's commission. Of course, he said, the agreement was not in every way what the workers could desire, but taken as a whole, it was satisfactory and the workers were the winners.

Tells of Tactics.

Hyman recalled some of the strategy used by the right wing to discredit the left leadership and to bring defeat of the strike to gain their end. At first the right wing, he pointed out, pretended to be "radical" and pressed for demands from the bosses which they knew were impossible. They asked for these demands to make victory impossible. They attempted to place the strike leaders in such a position, he said, so that they could not compromise with the bosses in anything, and thus prolong the struggle.

Sigman Prevented Settlement.

At one time during the strike victory was near, Hyman said, but the chicanery of the right wing was such that they egged the bosses on to resist the strikers and thus prevented the ending of the strike until it was finally brought to a close.

Issues Challenge.

Hyman challenged Sigman and his followers to submit the question of leadership in the New York joint board to the membership, as the left wing and impartial elements have advocated. Hyman declared that the left wing was willing to let the rank and file decide whether they should be continued in power.

Union Coal Miners in Four States Face Drastic Wage Cut in April

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 19.—Unless coal miners in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Western Pennsylvania agree to accept a cut in wages they will face a complete shutdown affecting 50,000 men in this state, it was declared here today as operators from the four states gathered for the wage scale conference.

The operators, it was said, will offer the miners the competitive wage scale, which is from 10 to 15 per cent higher than that paid in non-union fields but about 20 per cent less than the scale which expires in April.

CHURCHES TALK OF SOLUTION TO LABOR PROBLEMS

"Money Is God-Given," Says Baptist

This is "industrial week" in many Chicago churches. The clergy are discussing the question "The Church and the Labor Problem" under the auspices of the Chicago Church Federation and the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The motive of most of the speeches delivered is that the church and the labor movement should co-operate to solve industrial evils.

Davis, Yale, Urges Cooperation.

One of the chief speakers brought here is Jerome K. Davis, head of the Yale University social service department. Speaking at First Unitarian Church, south side, he said that the church should approve of and cooperate with the existing system of unions. "There are bad labor leaders in certain unions," said Davis, "but there is no more reason for rejecting the union system on that account than there would be to reject the public school system because there are bad principals.

"In New Haven, where I live, there are women working full time for $9 a week. Anybody with sense knows that such wages are unjust and a menace to good morals."

"Money God-Given."

Rev. John W. Elliott, director of social education of the American baptist society, speaking at Garfield Park Baptist church, offered a sample of the "miracles" on the problem he preaches. "Life, time, talents, personality, and money are God-given," says the reverend.

Negro Workers Told Race Problem Really Is Class Struggle

"The race problem is more a problem of class struggle," William Thomas told his audience at the American Negro Labor Congress Open Forum this week. "We need to organize ourselves as workers," he emphasized, "to fight our common enemy, the capitalists. For that we have to fight as workers, regardless of color."

Thomas warned the Negro against bosses who stirred their race prejudice against unions so they would not join. "The ultimate step of emalgamation of unions is emaigemation of forces," he said.

An interesting discussion was held. The Open Forum is held every Sunday afternoon, 4 o'clock, at 3518 S. State street. Admission is free.

Employe "Ownership" of Stocks Shown to Be Slight Quantity

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Only 4.26 per cent of the stock of the 20 largest corporations that have tried to sell stock to their employes is owned by these workers, according to a study made by Princeton university. The telephone trust has sold only 5 per cent of its stock to its employes, who have paid in $50,000,000.

Wattenberg Speaks on Jewish Colonization Progress in Russia

The story of Jewish colonization in Soviet Russia will be brought home to the Jewish population of this city in a report to be delivered by Dr. Elias Wattenberg, who has just returned from an extensive trip in the new colonies. The report will be given at a mass meeting, Thursday, Jan. 20, at Mirror Hall, Western at Division.

Was Delegate.

Wattenberg was one of the few American delegates at the world congress for furthering Jewish colonization in Soviet Russia, held at Moscow in November. He represented the "ICOR" Holding corporation, an organization having for its aim the creation of funds for financial, credit, and other assistance to the Jewish colonists in Soviet Russia.

At the congress in Moscow representatives of the Soviet government pledged the fullest support of the government in the work of alleviating the economic stress of the Jewish population thru the settling of large numbers of Jews on land. The work has been going on a large scale during the past two years when over 100,000 Jews of the small towns of the Ukraine and White Russia have been settled. This colonization movement of the Jewish people in Soviet Russia has stirred the deepest interest and sympathy among the Jews all over the world.

Women Urged to Make Articles for Bazaar In Chicago, Feb. 25-27

Mrs. Ella Brown, wife of Bishop William Montgomery Brown, has offered her aid in getting out over the $10,000 workers' carnival bazaar in Chicago. Comrade Brown has written to the committee in charge in Chicago from her home in Ohio, offering to sew articles for display and sale at the bazaar.

The bazaar will be held at the Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren, on Feb. 25, 26 and 27, for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER, the Jewish Daily Freiheit and part of the proceeds will be given to International Labor Defense for its work. Thruout the hall will be distributed a number of booths which will contain thousands of articles, large and small, and among them will be the handiwork of Comrade Brown, whose offer was accepted promptly by the committee.

Women comrades and sympathizers are urged to emulate this example by contributing articles of their own handiwork to the bazaar. They are urged to get together in little groups and in this manner co-operate to the benefit of the three working class institutions that will gain from the success of the bazaar.

Federal Employment Bureau Reports Many Workers Out of Jobs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — Part time operations are generally in effect in the major industrial districts, Francis I. Jones, director general of the U. S. employment service, Jones, however, predicts that the workers will soon be recalled, adding a Coolidgean touch to an otherwise gloomy report.

"The automobile factories and accessory plants have laid off thousands of employes, maintaining small forces only for inventory purposes," he reports, continuing, "It is expected that many of these workers would be recalled in January."

He reports a decline in employment in Illinois industries. Metal and machinery plants were noticeably affected, he said. Clothing manufacturers curtailed production.

Gabo Miner Dies.

GEBO, Wyo., Jan. 19. — William Knowles, member of the United Mine Workers of America, is dead here. Members of the union mourn the death of this worker. His death was due to heart disease and to lung trouble, contracted from working in the mines. He was 35 years old. A wife and two children survive him.

Knowles had been a check-weighman, but two weeks before his death lost that job in a union election by a few votes.

The Manager's Corner

"IT IS BETTER TO BE A SOCRATES WITH A HEADACHE, THAN A PERFECTLY HEALTHY PIG," said Dr. Jesse F. Williams of Columbia University at a health conference held recently. The professor has uttered a profoundly stimulating thought, a thought which will jar some people uncomfortably.

Marx has pointed out that the dominant ideas of a given period in society are the ideas of the ruling class of that particular period. Society today, for instance, is governed by the ideas of the bourgeoisie. This is seen on every hand, whether it be in the movies, literature, manners, dress or the thousand and one elements that enter in the life of the day.

The main purpose of the bourgeoisie is to free himself and his family from all cares of this material world, to establish a life of physical comfort and ease at the expense of someone else. The more lavish this comfort and ease becomes, the more ostentatious and showy it is, the higher is the place of the individual in bourgeois society. And so the capitalist press, which is merely an echo of the voice of the bourgeoisie, cuts in strongly to the physical and personal wants and whims of its readers; and, on the other hand, plays down the important element, the broad, social problems, which are of greater importance to society. For, in the long run, a newspaper should be essentially an organ of society, and should consciously cultivate the idea that its readers are first and foremost members of society, with a definite responsibility to it. The capitalist press on the contrary is full of cures, beauty hints, get-rich quick stories and the like, each making its appeal to self-love and the anti-social qualities.

If every worker became a Socrates with a headache as a result of his thought upon the things which count, the real problems which are facing his class, then indeed the exploiter would soon find how uncomfortable it is to be a perfectly healthy pig.

"Singing Jailbirds," Dramatization of I. W. W. Harbor Strike, Next Production of N. Y. League

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—"Singing Jailbirds," Upton Sinclair's impressionistic play of the I. W. W. harbor strike in California, will be the second production of the Workers' Drama League here. Rehearsals have already begun under the direction of Jasper Deeter, formerly director of the Hedgerow Theater near Philadelphia and now with the Provincetown Players of New York.

Is First Production in U. S.

This will be the first production given "Singing Jailbirds" in America, altho it was written several years ago. The Provincetown group was on the verge of producing it at one time. It was produced by laborites in England, where it was received with acclaim. Among the stirring scenes in Sinclair's play are a series of wobbly mass scenes in which many of the famous wobbly songs are sung. The play will also give the Drama League artists, Hugo Gellert, Louis Lozowick, William Gropper and Lo Hartman, an opportunity to introduce modern impressionist scenery.

Still Playing "Boob."

The league is still giving occasional performances of its first play, Karl Wiitfogel's "The Biggest Boob in the World," a labor farce. The production of the workers was lauded by many New York dailies.

"The Biggest Boob" will be given again at the I. W. W. entertainment and dance of the Marine Transport Workers in Webster Hall, 125 East 11th street, Friday, Jan. 21.

It is the aim of the league to encourage and produce plays by young American writers.

RUSSIAN WORKER CORRESPONDENT WRITES OF SOVIET NATIONALITIES

Here is another letter from a Russian worker to his comrades in America, in which the interesting problem of many nationalities in Russia is discussed. This is one of a series of letters being published by The DAILY WORKER as part of the program of developing closer contact between the workers of the world by means of direct worker correspondence.

DEAR COMRADES: The U. S. S. R. unites a great number of nationalities. All these nationalities in the czar's time were crushed by heels of the great Russians, who thought that only they were human beings. The other nationalities were not considered as men, and they were treated accordingly.

A weapon for oppressing a nation was the use of ignorance. The czar's government did not wish even to think about schools in Turkestan or Siberia. One "culture" was allowed; that was religion, industriously planted by the bribed crowd of priests who led the people in the opposite direction to the class struggle.

THE most oppressed were the Jews. They were forbidden to enter the capital towns and the large cities. In the schools they were not admitted. The government and the police did not protest against the persecution which the Jews had to suffer. On the contrary, it is an established fact that the initiators of the pogroms were the police and the ministers.

Czar Used Race Hatred.

This enmity of one nationality toward another was used by the czar's government as a weapon to fight the revolution. It excited the people against the Jews, thus the czar hoped to distract the attention of the christians from the revolutionary movement thru the pogroms of the Jews. The massacre amongst the tribes in the Caucasus was the route by which the czarist government saw a way to escape from the revolution. But the people's conscientiousness became victorious and the czar, with his whole clique, was overthrown.

Caused Difficulties.

FROM the very beginning the Soviet government met difficulties in dealing with the national question. It was necessary to use great efforts to convince the quarreling peoples that their struggle each against another is absurd. Even at present the matter is not quite settled. But about this I shall mention later on. The greatest difficulties were in this: that in certain regions in the boundaries of one government reside several groups of different nationalities. Such an obstacle was overcome in the following way. Each of the nationalities was granted autonomy.

How They Are Solved.

In each republic, or in each autonomous district, the official language has to be the language of the respective nationality. The books, the newspapers, the schools and government offices must use the language of the nation to which the republic or the district belongs. But it is impossible to strictly distribute all the nationalities in the districts and in the republics accordingly.

For instance, in the Ukraine reside many Jews, Germans and Russians. But here also a solution had been found. While in Ukraine the Ukrainian language is the principal language, there are in many Ukrainian towns Jewish courts of justice. The professional unions are using a language according to the majority of their members.

Raises Culture.

SO it can be seen that the Soviet system in settling the national question, is securing the rising of the cultural level of the nationalities. Towards this direction at present the Soviet authorities are aiming their main efforts.

In all of the most remote paris of U. R. R. S. appear schools. Even where the relicion forbids the literary education (as do the Gilikai new schools can be seen. It proves that the cultural level of the small nationalities has been raised.

Many Books Now.

Thanks to the enormous effort of the Soviet government, every nationality has books and school books printed in their own language. But most important, every representative of every nationality can obtain a high school education. How could he think about it in the czar's time, when the lack of knowledge of the Russian language tied him to his village? At present there are even in remote places institutes, and in Moscow and in Leningrad there are universities. The universities for the eastern nations. We can see now in our universities the Samoieds, the Giliaks and others. This was never dreamed in the czar's time are done away with. For instance, the unkind treatment and persecution by the czar's government forced the Jews to reside in the towns and to undertake a trade, or small cool shops. The Soviet government wants to turn them from the trade toward labor, and therefore is giving them land, hoping to make of them agriculturers. This campaign has had great success. Thousands of the Jews applied for land. The immigrants are getting land, they are loaned money and all necessary help with which the government is able to attend these newly created peasants. The experiment was a good one, and the Jewish peasants, in their management, are on the same level as are the Russian peasants.

Gypsies Aided.

THE nomad gypsies have won also it is well known that, being oppressed and turned out by everyone, they were forced to beg and to steal.

Now they are enjoying autonomy. There are schools for the gypsies as well as in the cultural centers.

It is true that many who do not understand the significance of the national division begin to criticize it. They say that it is unnecessary that every nation has to use its own language. They say that the common language must be the Russian language.

That we have many languages in the U. S. S. R. does not matter. But the cultural level will be high.

With comradely greetings,

M. Ivanov.

Wall Street Whips Its Agents Into Line

The essentially imperialist character of the democrat party leadership, differing little if any from that of the republican party, has made itself clearly apparent in the clash over American policy in Mexico.

Southern democrat planters and northern middle class, republican spokesmen, to put the division in its crudest form, are lined up against big industrialists and bankers of both north and south. The division takes place also along religious lines—northern catholics splitting with southern protestants on the Mexican question.

Heflin, a southern democrat and a protestant; Wheeler, a northern democrat and a protestant; Borah, a northern republican and a protestant, are in opposition to Walsh, a northern catholic democrat, and to Reed of Missouri, a protestant, both leaders of the democrat party.

But the religious division serves only to obscure the real issue. The forces aligned for and against aggression in Mexico and Latin-America are divided on the basis of economic interests. The cotton growers of the south, whose enterprises are not yet dovetailed into the rising industrial structure that is being erected in that section, on the foundation of coal, iron and water power in close proximity to each other, see little benefit for themselves in the southward drive of Wall Street imperialism. Like the middle class agricultural, trading, small professional and industrial elements of the north, the southern democracy, especially with a market crisis on its hands, feels disinclined to share the additional taxation burdens of militarism.

But the Wall Street leadership of the democrat party, in which must be included Reed of Missouri, in view of his speech in support of Coolidge and his attack on the Coolidge critics, has got its instructions. Reed said, according to dispatches:

> . . . . . in the difficult situation that now presents itself I do not propose to interfere with the efforts of the executive . . . . I do not want to weaken his hand in the efforts he is making. . . .

Reed, like Walsh of Montana, also rose to the defense of the catholic church. Walsh, including his rosary beads, is owned by the Anaconda Copper Mining company—a subsidiary of Standard Oil.

The acceptance of the resolution providing for arbitration of the Mexican dispute, presented by Robinson, democrat from Arkansas, by Kellogg, and the statements of democrat leaders defending the catholic church and criticizing the opposition to the Wall Street Coolidge program, means two things:

1. That Wall Street has decided that the time is not yet ripe for more open aggression in Mexico and Latin-America. It has sounded out popular sentiment and discovered that progressive increase of forcible measures will get little popular support and that it risks raising a serious religious issue which would tend to weaken its control.

2. Wall Street has served notice upon the democrat party leaders that the democrat opposition has gone too far in its criticism of Coolidge on the Mexican question and encouraged popular disapproval.

On a question of such importance to imperialism as the use of armed force to compel obedience to its mandates, Wall Street is unwilling to allow thirst for office and opportunity to score points for the 1928 campaign to develop into open and continued criticism during the course of which many unpleasant truths might be told.

Both democrat and republican parties are instruments of Wall Street and this fact has not been shown more clearly for a long time, than by the sudden change of front in the senate on the part of democrat leaders. Its sham opposition turns into support of Wall Street the moment it gets instructions.

The labor movement, the workers and farmers of America, can easily make a serious mistake by taking the arbitration proposals accepted by Kellogg as the end of aggression in Mexico and Latin-America. They are nothing of the sort and are intended only as a means of allaying popular discontent until Wall Street can better organize its forces.

The demand for withdrawal of all armed forces from Latin-America must continue. The threat of war has not disappeared; it has merely been concealed for the moment.

Organization in the Auto Industry

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor has authorized a conference of union heads to consider organization of the automobile industry.

The conference will be held in Washington, D. C., and is to include representatives of all unions having jurisdiction over various departments of the industry. The jurisdictional issues which will arise at the conference assure that it will be wrecked if they are allowed to determine its policy and program.

The jurisdictional disputes between national and international unions wrecked the steel organization campaign and they will effectually prevent any substantial organization of the auto industry unless the unions pool their interests.

The automobile industry can be organized if the campaign begins on an industrial basis and no jurisdictional disputes are permitted to interfere with the main objective—the establishment of a powerful union in the industry.

Such a campaign will enlist the loyal support of thousands of unionist workers who will take but little interest if it degenerates into a struggle between union heads for jurisdictional rights.

The left wing of the labor movement will watch closely the coming conference in Washington and is already prepared to give its complete cooperation for a genuine organization campaign.

Lenin As Philosopher - - -

By D. Kvitko

LENIN is usually extolled as a great leader, as a far-sighted revolutionist, as the incarnation of Marxism in practice. As for his merits in the theoretical field of Marxism, they are so immense that he may be considered as one of the greatest theoreticians of Marxism. Such works as "Materialism and Empirio-Criticism" and "State and Revolution" (this "booklet," since its appearance, has been a thorn in the side of the leaders of the Second International and of the anarchists) are of unusual breadth and insight.

Lenin realized that there is no sharp line of demarcation between theory and practice, that they are links of the same chain of life. The great leader was therefore far from being indifferent to what philosophy Marxism is to hold, for theory is not divorced from life, from human activity, but it cuts into it and directs its march, since it is a reflection of objective reality. A correct philosophy, in his opinion, must of necessity lead to successful struggle just as a correct hypothesis leads to practical discoveries.

Yet Lenin was so much engrossed in "practical" questions that even such abstract work as "Materialism and Empirio-Criticism" had a definite relation to the state of affairs of the Russian Marxists at the period of 1906-1908.

After the revolution of 1905 was drowned in the blood of the workers, a part of the Russian Intelligentsia, disappointed in social life, took to the "evaluation of values" of culture. The interest in one's own soul, sex and God superseded social interest. This resulted in decadence in literature, mysticism, and idealistic wanderings in philosophy. This spirit of pessimism and decadence infected many Russian Marxists. Beclouding to question themselves about the future of the Russian and international labor movement, they went on to question the philosophy of Marxism, in social and practical affairs they still adhered to Marxism, but its philosophic part they began to regard as "obsolete" which had to be "revised" or changed.

In the philosophic circles of the west there was in vogue at that time the empirio-critical philosophy (which takes as its starting point the elements of "experience" and "criticism"), disregarding the question as to the reality of spirit and matter, and to this fashion all philosophical revisionists resorted as to the last word of philosophical wisdom. Some of the representatives of this tendency were renowned men of science, but in philosophic matters they were quite confused. The philosophic reactionaries were shrewd enough to realize that their discredited idealistic philosophy (which does not regard matter and force as ultimate reality, but Spirit or Mind, that is, a divine element) would regain its position, if certain representatives of science could be made to join their band wagon. It became imperative to ornament and perfume the philosophy of priesthood so that it would not have the ill smell of the church.

Disguised under a verbal cloak of a new terminology, the idealists thought they would pass unnoticed. They would simply have to declare themselves adherents of the doctrine of "pure experience" (that is, to repudiate metaphysics or the search after what is not given us in "experience," namely, the essence of matter). They would have to insist that we can deal only with real elements of what is experienced (we may remark in passing that the American product pragmatism is very much akin to that empirio-critical tendency). The prestige of sciences which is supposed to reflect objective reality will then be undermined, degraded to a mere utilitarian set of rules and not at all to a body of laws applying to the universe. Therefore the claim of the scientists that science operates in a material world, is subject to casuistry, has no theoretical validity. We have a right to seek "real" life elsewhere than in science, namely, in the realms of religion, for since faith is a part of experience which "satisfies" the religious person, since it yields results and promises a future life, it has a legitimate right to existence and priesthood may be given the benefit of the doubt.

The bourgeois professors knew very well whither such philosophy leads. Only a few Russian Marxists were naive enough to fall to detect the socialistic trap contained in that philosophy.

Lenin, with his characteristic clarity of vision, saw that the road of such a philosophy leads to the church. He therefore took upon himself the immense task of examining the foundations of that philosophic tendency and looking for its origin. He found that this "new" philosophy can be traced back as far back as Bishop Berkeley's (1685-1753) idealism (a theory which makes every manifestation of life depend upon God, and declares the material world to be a phantom). He proved that in the "new" teaching there are elements of "skepticism" (a philosophy which refuses to answer the question as regards the objective reality of matter and spirit but takes the immediate data of consciousness as the only reality known), the founder of which was David Hume (1711-76).

In 1908 in the volume "Materialism and Empirio-Criticism" Lenin proves that this confused philosophy is but a revival of played out theories. For such a research philosophic sagacity coupled with a thoro knowledge of the subject-matter was needed. It was essential to posses the ability to steer clear thru a sea of details; not to lose one-self in the labyrinths of science. Lenin had to show the relation between science and philosophy, and to analyze them from the standpoint of dialectical materialism or the so-called orthodox Marxian method. And the philosophic part of Marxism is by far not a finished product.

As it is well known, Marx, tho a different student of philosophy, could not spare time to write about it, for the foundation of political science and scientific socialism took up all his attention. Therefore we meet in his works only scattered statements about philosophy itself. This task Engels took upon himself. In his "Anti-Dühring," "Feurbach" and the article "Historical Materialism" he expounded the fundamentals of dialectical materialism. But neither could he spare the time to go into details. We therefore meet quite often in their works a statement so pregnant with ideas that more than one volume could be written on it.

With this dialectical measuring rod Lenin approached the deviations of the Marxists on the philosophic field, showing into which camp they are being led. In this work ("Materialism and Empirio-Criticism") the whole varasatility of Lenin's mind reflects itself. Here is the agility with which he delves into the philosophic depths, the thoro mastering of the subject-matter, his brilliant polamical style, his erudition. The scientists he attacks with their own weapon (science) and shows how the latest discoveries confirm the truth of dialectical materialism. But all this he did, not by merely repeating the Marxian theses, but by enriching and developing them thru the latest discoveries on the field of science, for Marxism is not a dogma but a live method, whose truth must be revealed and applied in all manifestations of knowledge. Therefore, the ability to apply dialectics in philosophy, as well as in social questions, by far excels the construction of some mechanical system, where only terminology is changed.

Lenin never pretended to found a new system. In fact, he never tired of repeating that he was simply a disciple of Marx and Engles. But if we compare his power of thought and his theoretical achievements with the pretenders to the philosophical throne, then the "follower" of the dialectical materialism certainly contributed more to philosophy than the philosophers of both old and new systems. That the bourgeois world has ignored his theoretical works may be explained by the fact that one of the weapons of bourgeois defense is silence. As for the proletarian world it is beginning to recognize in Lenin a thinker of first magnitude, as it has already acknowledged his incomparable genius of leadership.

Russian Workers "Patrons" Over Peasants

By ALEXAI POGONTCHENKOV
Moscow Worker Correspondent

THE alliance between the urban workers and the peasants is one of the most important conditions for the final victory of the Soviet system and for socialist structure. In order to bring about this alliance in the best way possible, factories and workers' organizations accept patronage over a given village, rural district, etc. The aim of such patronage is on ants, (the workers of the given factory, for example, make the "adopted" districts a present of a tractor) on the other hand, it aims to raise the ideological level of the peasants. The workers send agitators to the villages, supply the one hand, to render economic assistance to the poor and middle peasants with books, papers, and arrange cinema and theater performances, install radio receiving stations, etc.

COMRADE KOSIAKIN

Borodin Rural District.

Our factory is patron over the Borodin rural district. Here there are 72 villages with 12,000 inhabitants. We have been the patron of this district for more than a year.

The workers' correspondents' circle decided to see whether everything was going well, and appointed three to make a journey to the district.

When we arrived in the little village we knocked at a little house that nestles under the high walls of a monastery. This is where the Communists live, 6 in all. These fellows are workers in the country district—a cooperative worker, agitator, secretary of the rural district executive committee and others.

"Oh, it is you, the Moscow comrades!"

We go in. The others, still very sleepy, begin to wake up. While the samovar is warming in the kitchen we begin talking.

"Why have you not joined up to a monastery for?"

"Look here, don't you get any wrong ideas. Surely you are not afraid we youths are also monks? We landed on a "There is no longer a monastery here now, but an agricultural commune. Things are going well, and the farm is tip-top."

"Well, how do you manage, and who runs things?"

"Things aren't so bright here. We have elected a Soviet for form's sake, but in reality it is the superior who make everything go round."

"Why do you look so surprised?"

"It's impossible to do anything else, old fellow. If we were to put the screw on the monks, we might get in a mess. For, after all there are many who are still believers. We are arranging things so that they themselves give it to their monks and priests in the neck."

"Well, how do you do this?"

"It's done in this way. We have talked with many monks and they are already saying this sort of thing:

"'We work like horses,' they say, 'and we are ill-treated. We have no clothes and nothing to eat, we never hear of meat, and have to put up with cucumbers and a bit of cabbage.'"

"They are grumbling. Once there is discontent, this is just where agitation comes in. We do not dawdle, but set to on with the job, and shake them of land a little. We tell them what a commune is, and what it should be like. Formerly they used to turn a deaf ear. Now they are beginning to listen more attentively."

"Well, where shall we go now, and who is going?"

The tasks are distributed amongst us. I had to go to a distant village, to collect material about an agricultural artele organized among the poor peasants, and to see the attitude of the peasants towards the Soviet system. The workers, and our patronage committee.

A frosty wind cuts the face like so many needles. Fir trees cast a bluish tint, and the gaunt aspen woods look dark and threatening. There is nothing to disturb the quiet but the sleigh sliding over the frozen snow.

Every now and then we run behind the sleigh to unbend our frozen limbs. At last we arrive at tiny village. The street is empty.

Communa Makes Progress.

We call at the house of the chairman of the agricultural artel. They will move to new quarters in the spring, in the meantime they stay in the village. The chairman relates:

"We are 11 families, 36 workers, in all 63 people. We till the land collectively, we are introducing the 7 crop system. We have 115 desiatins of land, 52 desiatins tilled. We have already bought 7 ploughs, 4 iron harrows and a 4-horse power threshing machine. We have ten horses and 12 cows. We intend to use 4 desiatins of land as an experimental field on which we will work under the guidance of the agronomist. This will be profitable for us and for the people. We will learn thereby. Good varieties of seed are highly valued and we will gradually go over to the higher forms of cultivation. If we succeed in getting credit in the spring we will buy a tractor. Our patron must help us with respect to credit."

"Comrades, why are you so hard on the priests?" said his mother, a woman of 60.

"How are we hard on them?"

COMRADE MIASZOV
One of the eldest Worker Correspondent of the Building Trades of Saratov, U. S. S. R.

"You have taken away the land from the priest."

"Since he does not till the land what use is it to him? You did not have enough land, so we gave it to you."

"But you are paying him for his services and that should be enough for him. How much do you have to pay him for a wadding?"

"Six roubles."

"What a lot. This should be enough for him."

She agreed with us about the priest, but began to bother us with god, and to tell us how it will be in the other world.

"The first to enter the kingdom of heaven, will be the czars, then the priests, then gentry, and last of all the peasants."

"Well, what about us Communists, where will we go?"

The old woman was taken aback, she demurred and then said:

"You . . . you will go to hell."

We burst out laughing.

"Well, when we get there we will set up a Soviet government."

The old woman looked at us, and agreed.

"When you are, I am sure you will set up your Soviets there," and she cackled.

From there we went to another village, where elections were taking place to the peasant committee of the Mutual Aid Society.

From conversations I gathered that the relations between the peasants and the patron are good. The only complaint is that he does not visit them often enough. This is not so easily remedied. There are 72 villagers it is not possible to visit them all.

Oil A NEW NOVEL Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair.)

To Bunny that seemed a pathetic thing about the Socialists. Take a man like Chaim Menzies; he had the long vision, the patience of the elderly worker; with acres of toil behind him, and acres ahead of him, he did not shrink from the task of building an organization. But he was never allowed to finish the building; the masters would knock it down overnight; they sent in spies, they bribed the officials and police chief, and in time of strikes their police and gunmen raided the offices and jailed the leaders and drove the workers back into slavery. So here was a curious situation: the masters in their blindness were making allies of the Communists. Weare and his old operators and the rest of the open shop crowd police and the working people. "We don't listen to the Socialists, they are a bunch of old fogies. The Communists are the ones to tell you."

One thing Bunny had felt certain about the week's visit to determine their tactics without bitterness and hatred inside. But now he was beginning to doubt if ever that could be possible. The dispute between the two factions was implicit in the nature of the problem. If you believed in a peaceable transition, your center of action would be one thing, and if you didn't so believe, it would be another thing. If you that you could persuade the masses of the voters, you would be cautious and politic, and would avoid the extremists, whose violent ways would repel the voters. So you would try to keep the Communists out of your organization, and of course that would make them hate you, and denounce you as a compromiser and a class collaborator, and insist that you were in the pay of the bosses, who hired you to keep the workers under their yoke.

And then the Socialists would counter with the same charge of bribery; when Menzies never failed to declare that some of the Communists were secret agents paid by the bosses to split the movement. And above it to raids by the police Bunny, a retired farmer, from talk he heard among his father's associates, that these big business men had elaborate secret agencies for their dirty work. Labor movement. And these agencies would work either way; they would brand the leaders to sell out the workers, start cut strikes, or calling premature strikes that couldn't win; or they would send in spies to pose as reds, and spur the organizations and tempt the leaders into crime. Then there was the military secret service, under that great patriot, Barnes Brockway, was up to the neck in such work. At the end of one group of Communists the federal judge presiding remarked that apparently the whole direction of the Communist Party was in the hands of the United States government.

IX

Bunny was always having the beautiful dream that his friends were going to be friends with one another. Now he took Rachel to call on Paul and Ruth; and he liked them so, and they must share his feelings. But alas, they didn't seem to! Both sides were reserved, and avoided talking politics as carefully as if they had been visiting in the monastery. But Bunny wanted them to talk politics, because of his own inner debate, and he felt that they were members of the working class, while he was only an outsider. Perhaps one might convert the other; but which one he wanted to be the converter, and which the converted, it would have been hard for him to say.

Bunny questioned Paul, and learned that he had given up his carpentry job—the Workers' Party was paying him a small salary to give all his time to organizing. Paul had met Joe and Issy Menzies, the young "left wingers", and Bunny told about how Joe and Rachel had helped to put Ben Stutt out of business at the trial. How he wished the Socialists and the Communists might work together like that, instead of making things easier for the enemy.

ILLINOIS FARMER GETS $355 FOR YEAR'S LABOR, COLLEGE SURVEY SHOWS

URBANA, Ill., Jan. 20. — The average farmer of the state does not receive more than $355 for his year's labor, according to R. R. Hudelson, farm management specialist, at the "farmers week" held by the agricultural college of the University of Illinois. Hudelson based his figures on accounts kept by 1,000 farmers in 1925.

"This sum received by the farmers is about half they paid their hired man," he said, "in some sections of western Illinois the average labor and management per farm operator was $928, while accounts from east and central Illinois in the corn and oat section showed nothing left to pay operators' wages."

INSULL'S MAN SMITH BARRED FROM SENATE

Record Vote Shuts Out Utilities Tool

BULLETIN

Smith Barred.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.— The senate today barred Col. Frank L. Smith (R) of Illinois from taking the oath of office as a United States senator. By a record vote, the senate denied Smith his oath and closed the doors in his face. The vote was 48 to 33. The vote against Smith by parties was: 15, republicans; 32, democrats; 1, farmer-Laborites.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—With backers of Frank L. Smith, Samuel Insull's senator designate from Illinois, citing precedent and getting acrimonious in their forensic displays and his opponents quite as acrimonious and hauling out even more precedents against him, the debate over Illinois election "slush" drew to a close with a vote nearing that, so far, is against the applicant.

The debate ranged back and forth between issues of law and morals, with Senator Watson contending that the senate was bound constitutionally to admit any qualified senator-elect "even if he were a leper."

"Does the senator (Watson) contend that the senate must admit a leper if he comes here with unquestionable credentials?" asked Robinson.

"I do," Watson replied. "If the majority of voters in any sovereign state send him here, the senate must recognize him."

"Or if a man is an idiot?"

"Yes, if an idiot can take an oath."

Dame Pools Get In.

"Well, of course we all know that fools, damn fools, sometimes get into legislative bodies," replied Robinson.

Watson was subjected to considerable heckling by democratic senators.

The debate grew hot when Robinson charged that Watson's "manifest intention was an effort to line up the forces in this chamber according to politics." This Watson hotly denied.

Question of Politics.

"This is now a question of politics," Watson declared. "If Smith is rejected, Illinois has a republican governor who will appoint another republican. I was opposed to Smith's coming here and did all I could to prevent it."

"Why?" shouted Robinson.

"That's my private business and none of the senator's from Arkansas nor of the United States," retorted Watson.

"That's a remarkable statement," commented Robinson.

"But perfectly proper," Watson answered.

This followed a statement by Senator Curtis, of Kansas, republican leader, that "for years election contests in the house were decided with purely political consideration."

JAPAN NOTIFIES POWERS WILL NOT TAKE PART IN ARMED ATTACK ON CHINA

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 20.—The text of an address by Foreign Minister Baron Shidehara to the Japanese diet has been published here by the Japanese embassy. The speech was a polite warning to the rest of the powers that Japan could not be relied upon to aid in invasion of China, she would probably try to keep her concessions of small places of Chinese territory.

Shidehara summarized Japan's policy in China as: (1) No intervention in, or further partition of, the country; (2) economic approachment; (3) assistance to China in her "just aspirations"; (4) patience and tolerance in China's internal difficulties, but protection of Japan's interests.

Baron Shidehara also commented on the friendship developing between Russia and Japan, and denied that their interests would clash in Manchuria. He regretted that relations with the United States were not perfect.

YAQUI INDIANS QUIT; REACTION LOSES ALLIES

Say Gen. de la Huerta Deceived Them

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 20.—The bottom has fallen out of the revolutionary aspirations of the reactionary exiled Gen. de la Huerta, who hoped with the support of the Yaqui Indians, to launch a drive of dangerous proportions against the Calles government—the Yaquis have surrendered.

"They have been carrying on a fight of five months from their embattled native hills in Sonora. Egged on by de la Huerta and also by the opposition against the government displayed by the catholics and other reactionary forces, the Indians, who have always been rebellious and the easy victims of counter-revolutionary intrigue, have carried on a staff warfare against federal troops.

Draw Iron Ring Tight.

But in the past several weeks a strong concentration of federal forces in the Yaqui country and the drawing of an armed ring around their district, supplemented by the bombardment of airplanes, has caused the Yaquis to give up the fight. The surrender was dictated by news that leaked through to the Indians that the government was planning a blanket operation that would scour every nook and cranny of their hills.

The minister of war, General Amaro, received the petition of the Yaqui and conferred immediately with President Calles. The decision was reached to accept the surrender of the Indians and appointed General Obregon to carry on the final negotiations for peace.

Furriers Shatter Attack By Woll; Seek Retraction

Letter to Green Exposes Disruptive Machinations of Right Wing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—"The joint board will not permit any individual or group to involve its members in intrigues and frame-ups such as those attempted by Brother Woll and his colleagues. The joint board is of the opinion that the methods employed by Brother Woll and his associates play into the hands of the enemies of the organized labor movement. We are confident that when we place our case before the tribunal of the American workers, their verdict will be support and approval of our actions."

In these words the New York joint board of the Furriers' Union has issued a defiant challenge to the attempted frame-up engineered against it by Matthew Woll, head of the American Federation of Labor "investigating" committee that charged the joint board with bribing the New York police force during its recent strike.

Altho these charges have fallen to the ground thru the desertion of Joseph Ryan from participation in the Woll deal because the bribery charges implicated his Tammany friends, the Joint Board is demanding a complete retraction of the charges and censure of Woll and his assistants. One of the participants in the frame-up, as the letter that follows will show, was Hugh Frayne, New York A. F. of L. organizer who has been for months past engaged in a united drive with the discredited right wing elements in the needle trades unions to wreck the New York joint board.

The statement was in the form of a letter to William Green, president of the A. F. of L. It follows in full:

WORKERS! TURN TO LENIN!

FROM the reports that are coming in from every part of the country, it is becoming apparent that the Lenin Memorial Meetings organized by the Workers (Communist) Party will be real demonstrations against American imperialism and of the determination of the American workers and farmers to stand together under the flag of Lenin in the bitter struggle against Wall Street and its government.

From New York City, where the new Madison Square Garden, the largest hall in the city and one of the largest in the country, has been hired and where world-famous speakers and artists will appear before the assembled thousands of workers, down to the small industrial towns where the meetings will be held in some labor hall in spite of all threats of the American Legion and the Ku Kluxers, the spirit of the Lenin Memorial demonstrations will be the same: Lenin shows us the way to fight Imperialism! Fight American imperialism under the flag of Leninism! Honor the great proletarian leader by carrying on the battle against capitalism and imperialism!

NEW YORK LENIN MEET PROTESTS WAR ON MEXICO

NEW YORK — The danger of a war against Mexico is looming nearer. The invasion of Nicaragua and the threats against Mexico expose the imperialist policy of the United States in all its nakedness.

Latin-America has been made a happy hunting ground for the bankers and industrialists of this country. Any attempt on the part of the workers and peasants of Latin-America to free themselves from exploitation by American imperialism will be resisted to the utmost, and the American workers may soon be called upon to sacrifice their lives for the interests of Wall Street. That is the meaning of President Coolidge's message and the report of Secretary of State Kellogg to the senate committee on foreign relations.

The workers of New York, the seat of American imperialism, must not allow this threat of war to remain unanswered. They must demonstrate their opposition to intervention in Nicaragua and Mexico.

A huge protest meeting has been arranged by the Workers Party to take place on Saturday evening, January 22, the third anniversary of the death of Lenin, at the new Madison Square Garden, 50th St. and 8th Ave.

Lenin was the great anti-imperialist, the leader of all oppressed peoples, of the liberation movement in Latin-America against American imperialism. There is no more fitting occasion for the New York workers to raise the slogan of "No war against Mexico, hands off Nicaragua," than the Lenin Memorial Meeting.

The workers of New York must come in masses to demonstrate their solidarity with the workers and peasants of Latin-America. Madison Square Garden must resound with the demands for the immediate withdrawal of United States military forces from Latin-America.

Admission is 50c, 75c, and $1.00. Tickets in advance may be had at 108 East 14th street, and at all Workers Party newspapers.

REALTY 'EXPERT' TELLS OF HUGE CHI GRAFT DEAL

Merigold Got $577,000 Split With 'Bosses'

How he collected huge sums from the city as a "real estate expert" and then was forced to give various politicians a "split" was told by Arthur S. Merigold testifying in the suit to recover excess money paid to him and two other "experts." Merigold was employed as an expert by William Hale Thompson in 1920 when he was mayor of Chicago.

Court records in the trial reveal that Merigold collected $577,000 in one year, 1920, from the city. Merigold said that he gave $65,490 for "political campaigns," or 15 per cent of his fees, which was the amount assessed him.

Those named by Merigold as being in on the "split" were Arnold H. Brautigam, former assistant real estate expert, who received $150,630 from Merigold, and Charles M. Nichols, another assistant, who got $27,000. The remainder of the money was "just spent," said Merigold, who claims he is now insolvent, and cannot return any money to the city.

"Big Bill" Thompson Charged.

Included among other defendants in the trial are: William Hale Thompson, George F. Harding, former city comptroller, Michael L. Faherty, former president of the board of local improvements; Percy B. Coffin, former assistant real estate expert; Nichols, Brautigam, and Edward C. Waller, Jr., another real estate expert.

Asks Increases for Teachers, Provided They Can Get Money

A plan to increase the pay of elementary and high school teachers of Chicago, provided an increase in school taxes is obtained, was presented to the board of education by Supt. McAndrews. McAndrews' plan provides that raises be given over a period of five years, elementary teachers to finally receive $4,200 and high school teachers $4,500. McAndrews estimated that this would mean $23,000,000 more in taxes over the 5-year period.

The matter has been referred to the finance committee. Charles T. Byrne, chairman, has already voiced his protest to the increase.

5,000 Barge Workers in Constantinople on Strike; Troops Called

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 20—Five thousand barge workers here have gone out on strike. Commerce in the harbor has been at a standstill as a result. Government troops were called out to stop picketing of the strikers, and more than 100 have been arrested.

Several skirmishes between strikers and police have occurred, with casualties on both sides.

Report U. S. Sending More Troops to P. I. to Suppress Liberals

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 20. — Rumors are widespread here that the United States government is planning to send more troops to the Philippine Islands as a gesture against activity here for independence.

Officials have denied the reports but they continue. A contingent arrived here last month, but these were said to be for filling vacancies caused by expiring enlistments.

N. Y. PAPER BOX STRIKERS AWAIT BOSSES' ANSWER

First Demand Is for Union Recognition

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(FP)— Arbitration of the four months' strike of paper box workers is acceptable to the strikers, if the employers agree, union representatives told the Citizens' Committee of 100 which met to hear both sides of the story. One of the three paper box manufacturers present offered to bring up the arbitration issue at his association's meeting. If the employers are willing, each side will choose five representatives to meet with five from the citizens' committee. If the employers are willing, each side will choose five representatives to meet with five from the citizens' committee for discussing strike demands.

Want Recognition.

Recognition of the Paper Box Makers Union is essential, Fred Caloia, manager, told the citizens' committee. Ca'ola and Union Attorney William Karlin had prepared a case to present to the meeting, including testimony on brutality of employers' thugs and police. Chairman Jacob Billikopf deferred the workers' arguments when agreement to arbitrate was secured from the union. State Labor Mediator Forteser was present, with a number of rabbis, ministers and other citizens.

Aid Needed

Financial aid from other unions is much needed by the paper box strikers. The organization is making an appeal to all unions throughout the country to tide the strikers over until the busy season brings chances of settlement closer. The union demands originally were for recognition, 44-hour week, sanitary shops, minimum wage scales, and wage increases. It is the only organization in the paper box trade.

WOODS LIKELY TO BE NAMED AS C. C. HEAD

Slush Dispenser Has Not Enough Votes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — Unless forced to postpone it because of the Smith case, the senate today will pass upon the nomination of Cyrus E. Woods of Pennsylvania as a member of the interstate commerce commission. Woods was the Mellon "slush" dispenser in the primaries there.

Confident of Roll.

A confidential poll showed 56 senators opposed to confirmation of Woods and but 36 ready to approve his appointment. The vote probably will be taken behind closed doors, however, there were indications that these figures might be overthrown. Both senator Reed (R.) of Pennsylvania, leading the fight for confirmation, and Senator Goff (R.) of West Virginia, leading the opposition, predicted victory.

The poll, however, showed twenty republicans lined up against Woods, including Senators Borah, Couzens, Edge, Ernst, Frazier, Gof, Howell, Johnson, LaFollette, McMaster, McNary, Norbeck, Norris, Nye, Oddie, Pine, Sackett, Schall and Stewart. But three democrats were reported favorable to Woods, Senators Hawes, Mayfield and Underwood. If the same lines are maintained on a secret ballot, it was apparent that Woods would be rejected.

The fight over Woods found the senate in a series of complicated factions. The groups opposing him included friends of the "open shop" raises in Tennessee, Kentucky and West Virginia, along with the whole insurgent bloc. The factions friendly to Woods included most of the conservative bloc and senators from states having union mines.

I. C. C. Places Low Value on Railways

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Interstate commerce commission has placed the final value of the Delaware and Hudson railroad at $98,834,979, as of June, 1916. The company's capitalization on this date was $106,127,600, and the book investment account as he it to be $131,145,330.

A valuation of $35,905,000 was placed on the Northwestern Pacific railroad in California. This road's capitalization is $52,775,000 and book investments show $65,884,000.

The Minneapolis Journal Fears Growing Solidarity of Workers and Farmers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE vicious attack of the Green officialdom in the American Federation of Labor against the left wing and the Communists has found it many friends among the employers. This support finds an expression in the kept publications of the great "open shop" interests.

An editorial that has just appeared in the Minneapolis, Minn., Journal is typical of the applause and the approval that comes from the enemies of labor in support of Green's war on labor's militants.

The Journal rushes to the assistance of "Nervous Nellie" Frank B. Kellogg, secretary of state, defending his attack on the Communists and the Communist International. It supports Kellogg's theory that Communists are fomenting all the trouble in Mexico, Nicaragua and other Latin-American countries. It ridicules all those who refuse to accept the Kellogg viewpoint declaring:

"Well, then, what of this declaration by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor at Tampa, Florida, the other day:

"'Organized labor today is battling continuously with a force (Communism) which has pitted itself against not only labor, but against all other groups of society and even the American government.'

"Will these scoffers now vote Mr. Green into the Nervous Nellie Club? Have they the crust to intimate that perhaps Mr. Green, who works 365 days a year to advance the cause of the American workingman, does not know his onions?"

It is only In one direction that The Journal can see any "advance" for labor, and that is an "advance" backwards. The Journal fights the organization of the miners on Minnesota's iron range. It glories in every setback suffered by the railroad workers. It aids in every assault on those who toil, organized and unorganized, and it is the worst enemy of the farmers, being the spokesman of the railroad owners, banking interests, the chamber of commerce crowd and the rich landlords. Like Green it, too, "works 365 days in the year to 'advance' the interests of the workers and farmers backwards.

Yet The Journal isn't directly concerned, in this instance, with the policy by "Dollar Diplomacy" in Mexico, Nicaragua, China, or any other oppressed country. It isn't to be bothered, in this instance, so much with the attack of Mr. Green on the furriers and the ladies' garment workers in New York City. It has more pegs on which to hang its program of struggle at home. The Journal "knows its own onions" and it has an immediate enemy to perform right in its own front yard.

It realizes, right now, more than ever that its class is being pressed and by the growing independent political action of the workers and farmers. It stands at bay before the brilliant achievements of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor conference just held at St. Paul, where all the productions of The Journal, and its fellow capitalist sheets, concerning the future of the Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota, went into the scrap heap.

Therefore, it howls, and calls upon both Kellogg and Green as its allies in the anti-Communist war that it seeks to develop as the driving wedge of its attack on the Minnesota Farmer-Labor movement.

It is clear that the workers and farmers of Minnesota will not be frightened by The Journal's attack. The edge of this form of assault has been blunted by frequent use for many years, in fact, ever since the Non-Partisan League entered the state nearly a decade ago.

The fact that all forms of red baiting were absent from the very representative Farmer-Labor gathering marks an historic event for the whole American labor movement, not less important than the strong stand for the development of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, and the vicorous attack on "Dollar Diplomacy," especially as it is operating at the present time against Mexico, Nicaragua and China.

The whole attack of the Minnesota capitalist press, during last fall's congressional campaign, was directed in an effort to divide the ranks of the Farmer-Labor movement. It found some enemies within the party, anxious and eager to do its dastardly work. They were typified in Quigley, Holmes and similar elements. But the effort was doomed. Election day found a quarter million workers and farmers going to the polls, an inspiring outpouring. The Farmer-Labor Party challenged the power of the republican party and the democratic party was pushed far into the background.

But this did not end the attempted disruption. The kept press jeered at the workers and farmers because they had not carried the election. A new campaign was launched, the object of which was to lure labor into dropping independent political action and enter the republican, instead of the democratic, primaries. This kept press spread the lie to the nation that the Farmer-Labor movement in Minnesota had "failed."

The reply has just come, however, from St. Paul. Minnesota labor decides to build stronger than ever upon the firm foundation that it has laid for a "more powerful organization of the Farmer-Labor Party, which will be able to carry on the struggle against the special privileged interests, represented by the republican and democratic parties, until the power of the government is wrested from these interests and a Workers' and Farmers' Government is established in this state and in the nation."

Labor over the nation should be especially interested in the movement for the calling of a conference of Farmer-Labor elements "willing to subscribe to the principles and declarations of our bona fide Labor party, with the view of working out a common program of action in the interests of the Farmer-Labor political movement."

In this conference the Minnesota Farmer-Labor forces will urge the development of independent political action by building state Farmer-Labor parties "with a view of laying the foundation for a national party and a national ticket and campaign in the 1928 elections."

It is this developing unity of the workers and farmers that is driving the Minneapolis Journal into hysterics. That is the best testimony possible that this movement is in the interests of those who toil, and why all who labor should support it. Communists will continue to be the staunchest and most energetic promoters of this working class effort to develop labor's power independent of the capitalist class and all its allies.

Mrs. Bishop Brown Aids in Gathering Material for Bazaar

Mrs. Ella Brown, wife of Bishop William Montgomery Brown, has offered her aid to put over the $10,000 Workers' Carnival Bazaar in Chicago. Comrade Mrs. Brown has written to the committee in charge in Chicago, from her home in Galion, Ohio, offering to new articles for display and sale at the bazaar.

The bazaar will be held at the Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren, on February 25, 26 and 27, for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER, the Jewish Daily Freiheit and part of the proceeds will be given to the International Labor Defense for its work. Thruout the hall will be distributed a number of booths which will contain thousands of articles, large and small, and among them will be a booth handiwork of Comrade Mrs. Brown, whose kind offer has been accepted promptly by the committee.

Women comrades and sympathizers are urged to emulate this example by contributing articles of their own handiwork to the bazaar. They are urged to get together in little groups and in this manner co-operate to the benefit of the three working class institutions that will gain from the success of the bazaar.

LEFT WINGERS PRESENT CASE TO CITY CLUB

While Sigman Slings Mud on Another Eve

By MARGARET LARKIN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The appearance of Louis Hyman and Julius Portnoy of the joint board of Cloak and Dressmakers and of Morris Sigman and Julius Hochman of the International in the staid meeting hall of the Civic Club of New York City this week offered a clear demonstration to the liberal members of the club of the difference between militant and honest left wing leadership and the reactionary "keep our jobs" attitude of the right wing leaders.

The two opposing forces in the present garment dispute in New York addressed the members of the Civic Club on two different nights, because of the refusal of Morris Sigman to speak at the same meeting with Hyman. Both meetings jammed the hall, and on "reactionary" night it was further jammed by a large delegation of Sigman's followers who acted as a "claque" for their leader.

Mud Slinging.

Repeated questions from the floor on pertinent matters brot only evasions from Sigman and Hochman, until prominent members of the audience, including Arthur Garfield Hays, labor attorney, protested that nothing was being gained by the discussion.

Mr. Hays attempted to bring out the attitude of the International in regard to allow a referendum on the workers on the issues involved in the present dispute, but only succeeded in getting a vague reply to the effect that the International's "registration," or what workers pay dues, never called for fifty cents, is being substituted for a secret vote at the polls. Other questions requested information on the policy of taxation and political views adopted by the International as part of its peace treaty when defeated by the left wing leadership in the fight of 1925. This question was evaded, as were others on proportional representation, responsibility for framing of strike demands, agreemants, and so forth.

Fully Discussed.

These issues, on the other hand were taken up and fully discussed by the two left wing leaders, Julius Portnoy, treasurer of the joint board, recounted his eleven years' service in the union and emphasized the train of events that had led up to the present struggle. The speech of Louis Hyman also dealt with the policies of both right and left leadership as a background for what is taking place in the union today.

He told of the long series of expulsions from the union whenever progressive elements attempted to oppose the power of the international. He explained the issues of the fight of 1925 in which three locals were expelled on the charges of Communism and were finally reinstated upon their own terms. Particularly valuable to his hearers was his explanation of the problems in the industry which resulted in the present strike which were at issue in the strike.

Issue is Unionism.

Mr. Hyman was questioned at length by members of the club and replied to the questions in straightforward, clear cut answers. Right wing picketers attempted to fasten the charges of Communistic interference upon his cause. He replied by pointing out that not Communism but trade unionism was the issue in the garment industry.

The interest of the members of the Civic Club in the discussions was great, since it has been impossible to obtain accurate information thru the press, and the "Committee for the Prevention of Trade Unions" has hid the struggle sharply to their attention.

Opposes Graduation Exercises in Public Schools; Too Elaborat

William McAndrews, superintendent of Chicago schools, is beginning a fight to abolish the awarding of diplomas and the custom of elaborate exercises and gift-giving connected of the eighth grade. McAndrews says that the fact the hundreds of students are disappointed and saddened because their parents cannot afford the luxury of graduation is enough reason to abolish the custom.

Graduation exercises act as a stimulant to children to leave school feeling they have "completed their education," he said, rather than act as a means of keeping them in school.

SACCO, VANZETTI WITNESS GIVEN SECOND RESPITE

Madeiros Spared for Re-hearing

BOSTON, Jan. 20.—Gov. Fuller has granted a further respite to Celestine Madeiros, confessed Wrentham bank murderer, witness in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The respite will extend until April 27.

The action by the governor was on the recommendation of retiring Attorney General Jay R. Benton. Madeiros has confessed to the murder for which Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were convicted of committing in South Braintree when they are alleged to have robbed a factory paymaster.

Counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti shewed that Madeiros is a necessary witness for their clients in a new trial if one is granted.

A previous respite granted Maderios would have expired Jan. 27.

"Mystery Man" in Norris Murder Takes Stand for Defense

COURT ROOM, AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 20.—D. L. Redmond, "mystery man" who showed D. E. Chipps, lumberman, the way to Rev. J. Frank Norris' study in the First Baptist Church at Fort Worth, where Chipps was shot to death by the pastor, was witness for the defense in the trial of Rev. Norris.

Redmond showed Chipps the way, he said, and followed the lumberman into the church building. Chipps opened the door to the study and entered, while Redmond went into an adjoining office, he testified. He heard several pistol shots, he declared, and ran to the study, where he saw another man picking something from the floor of the ante-room.

Teaching on the story told by Mrs. Rosie Parker, state witness, that she was near the study door and saw Rev. Norris shoot Chipps as the latter was leaving, Marvin Simpson of defense counsel asked Redmond if he saw a woman in the corridor at any time. Redmond said he did not.

28 Illinois Miners Killed During December; 2,633 Meet with Injury

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 20.—A total of 8,454,777 tons of coal was produced during December, 1926, by the 227 mines reporting in Illinois, according to the report issued by A. D. Lewis, director of the state department of mines and minerals. These mines averaged 20 working days during the month and include 14 strip mines. The average number of men employed during the month was 71,955.

Twenty-eight miners were killed in accidents during that period, the report states, while 2,633 were injured so that they lost one or more days' work.

COMSTOCK IS OUTDONE; CENSORS BAN ALL 'TRAGIC, LOVE, DETECTIVE TALES'

The limit in book censorship "in order to preserve the morals of the youth" has probably been reached in the recent decree of the reactionary Chihli (China) provincial educational bureau.

No love, tragic or detective stories are to be sold in the future, the report states. The education bureau believes that such tales are "harmful to the young generation."

The police are instructed to warn all book sellers "to clear all such gaudy publications" from their shelves.

It is the opinion of the educational bureau that "novels are exerting an evil influence on the youth of China, inciting the young to robbery and other crime."

Cantonese Get Ready for Last Shanghai Drive

sympathy with the nationalist cause.

Protest Shantung Troops.

Great protests have been staged in Shanghai against the bringing in of Fengtien troops from Shantung province in the north to aid in the defense of the city.

Information from Wuchang state that the nationalist armies have begun a movement to the north of that city with a column of 10,000 men supported by other battalions. The object of this drive is evidently to force the northerners to defend themselves in the upper provinces so they will be unable to reinforce the defense of Shanghai.

The foreign population of Shanghai is continuing in an apprehensive move.

Foreign business concerns, especially the British, view the invasion of the nationalists with extreme reluctance. The gathering of a large naval force at Shanghai with an available landing force of over 3,000 men cannot be explained merely on the basis of protecting foreign lives and property. This is especially true in view of the fact that more forces are being concentrated here daily.

Reports of "atrocities," "unrestrained soldiers" and "coolie mobs" continue to be sent out of the country at a rapid rate to prepare some opinion for the landing of inexcusably large naval and land forces in an attempt to thwart the successes of the Cantonese. "Refugees" continue to pour into Shanghai on board warship and Standard Oil river boats. Not one instance of violence against the persons of a foreigner has so far been substantiated.

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

noted if not notorious Ethel Roosevelt. But this did not prevent the United States from going to war with Germany in defense of Morgan's loans to the allies. And the war sent the kaiser to Holland and made a royal hum out of the present crown prince. A hmm, it is true, with lots of money to spend but a hum nevertheless.

THE sweet nothings that were transported by electric current across the ocean uttered by American and British officials dwelt on the traditional good feeling between our rulers and those of Great Britain. Millions of human beings will take this diplomatic lying seriously but just as soon as the interests of American capitalists and British capitalists clash sufficiently serious to warrant a war, American officials will call up the British foreign office on this same telephone and declare that a British ambassador would be more popular in London than in Washington. Then the capitalist press will cut loose and dig up every skeleton put away for future service in the anti-British graveyard and rattle them on the front pages.

THE diplomacy of revolutionary governments is quite different. Every speech delivered by Eugene Chen is good for a few hundred thousand converts to the Cantonese cause, and does the foreign imperialists more harm than the shooting off of a thousand howitzers. In a recent statement Chen stated that England was the first foreign power to subject China to "political and economic domination of the West." He tells how England drugged China with opium, while sending missionaries in with their bibles. And he enumarates the ways in which British imperialism fastened the shackles of slavery on the limbs of China.

THE Chinese simply want their country to run as they see fit, and the Cantonese wish to run China in the interests of the masses, that is, the workers and peasants. Is there anything wrong with such a policy? Where is the boasted American "spirit" that was supposed to sympathize with the efforts of all subject peoples to emancipate themselves? This spirit did exist before the United States started on an imperialistic rampage but today the U. S. pot cannot say anything nasty to the British kettle. They are all in the same boat.

THE revolutionary peoples' movements of Asia and Latin-America and the revolutionary government of the Soviet Union are developing a new force against the evil of imperialistic diplomacy. The diplomats of those countries talk for the benefit of the masses everywhere as well as for the benefit of the imperialistic statesmen. When Eugene Chen of Canton threw the hooks into British imperialism he was propagandizing the Chinese masses as well as the workers in the capitalist countries.

FOR one whole week the natives of the mid-western metropolis have been developing kinks in their necks looking at the sky. Something for a predatory hawk whose exploits in killing pigeons won him the front pages of the capitalist press. Strange to say, this bird was branded as an outlaw because he did what the capitalist class of Chicago are doing in their line; he lived at the expense of other birds, just as the employers are living at the expense of the workers. It is true that the hawk likes an honest murderer pounced on his victim and devoured him on the spot. The capitalists take their victims into the factories and wring money out of their bona and sinew.

WHILE this hawk was killing and devouring peaceful pigeons and the capitalist papers sent their best sob writers to describe his warlike movements the naval hawks of American imperialism were scouting the coasts of Central America protecting the capitalist hawks of Wall Street who are robbing the people of those countries of their inheritance. The hawk and the capitalists have one thing in common: they live by claw and beak.

plain. The liberals will not consent to recognize Diaz as president because he was not elected to the post. He was made president by the chamber under the muzzles of marine guns. In the second place, the United States "supervised" elections on two previous occasions and upon both of which Diaz was elected.

In the meantime the liberal forces are battling on against great handicaps and hardships caused by the treachery of the marines, who have thrown a complete blockade around the country and have disarmed a large number of liberal supporters.

Diaz Forces Demoralized.

But despite all the assistance he is receiving from the United States in the form of arms, money and military support in so far as the marines disable the military maneuvers of the liberals, despite all this, the usurper, is unable to rally a strong enough army to defeat the very much weakened liberal forces.

Diaz has been driven to conscript Nicaraguans to fight for him. The conscripts are naturally not dependable and desert almost as rapidly as they are armed. It it were not for the presence of the marines, the liberals would control the country in several days.

More Marines Land.

The liberals have recently had successes in the Segovidite river valley, driving the Diaz forces out of San Pedro in confusion. Following this victory, Admiral Latimer, in charge of U. S. forces here, landed marines at Bragmen's Bluff to proceed into the interior to assist the demoralized Diaz force.

Speaking of the American policy towards Nicaragua, Dr. Sacasa said in a recent statement, "it is not an American national policy for the benefit of Americans, but rather a national policy for the exclusive benefit of a certain group of bankers. The dollar policy, perfectly evident in the recent political technique of the United States, has occasioned them more harm than their greatest competitors."

ILLINOIS SOLONS DEMAND RELIEF FOR U. S. FARMER

Congress Memorialized by State House

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 20.— The senate of the 55th general assembly is expected to pass the joint resolution memorialising congress to pass relief legislation for the farmer. The resolution offered in the house by Rep. A. Olin Wood of Quincy was adopted by unanimous vote after a debate of an hour, during which republican and democratic members voiced approval.—some members even wanting to go further and include President Calvin Coolidge. While no particular legislation is mentioned, the McNary-Haugen bill is the desired objective of the assembly.

Daley Committee.

Members of the assembly are complaining because committee assignments are ready in neither branch.

It has been definitely determined, however, that Rep. Reuben G. Soderstrom of Streator will be chairman of the public utilities committee, which will handle the terminable permit bill. Rep. A. L. Stanfield of Paris will be chairman of the election committee again, while it is understood Rep. Clynesmith of Decatur, will head industrial affairs.

Bills Ready.

Several senate bills are ready for committee whenever they are announced. These measures include: Reapportioning the state in senatorial districts on the basis of the 1920 census. It specifically outlines no districts. Appropriating $500,000 for construction of a bridge across the Illinois river at Peoria. Authorizing cities to purchase or lease land for airplane landing fields. Providing for payment of taxes in semi-annual installments. Placing burglary, attempted burglary, robbery and attempted robbery in the section of the criminal code which deals with treason, murder, rape and kidnapping.

Europe Swept by Flu Epidemic; League Is Investigating Cause

GENEVA, Jan. 20. — Serious outbreaks of influenza thruout Europe has caused the league of nations to launch an investigation to determine the extent and causes of the epidemic. The United States, Australia and other overseas countries have petitioned the league for such an investigation. And what happens when any letter displeases the censor can be seen from an incident that took place a short time ago. A student of Shantung University received a letter from somebody in the south. What was in the letter nobody knows. But the student was immediately arrested and taken to the martial law office where he was mercilessly beaten. Then he was "released" but his wounds were such that he died the day after. Police agents frequently break into students' quarters in the middle of the night and make these searches and even if they find nothing they beat up the students.

The students are not remaining quiet under such inhuman treatment. There is a deep protest against the dark and reactionary regime of ignorance and oppression. The students' movement is growing under the greatest difficulties and appeals for the nationalist government everywhere.

FIRESTONE TELLS PLANS ABOUT LIBERIA; BOASTS OF SPEED-UP PROFITS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

AKRON, Ohio — "In 1927 there will be close to 10,000 acres of Liberian land cleared and planted by a force of 5,000 directed by an American staff of 66 men." This plan was made public at the recent stockholders' meeting of the Firestone Tire and Rubber corporation.

In his report as president, Firestone pointed out that the huge profits of the corporation were made possible by "the lower production cost," that is, by speed-up and the like. In closing, Firestone concluded, "I believe the prospects for 1927 are splendid and the year should see even greater improvements made in the industry as a whole."

Canton Rickshaw Labor Opens 7 Club Schools

The value of organization is well understood by the rickshaw, workers (the workers who draw the passenger carts in Chinese and Japanese cities) of Canton. There are over 8,000 of them in the city and they have always been among the most ignorant workers. In order to combat illiteracy among its members and to give them political and revolutionary education the Rickshaw Pullers' Union of Canton has recently organize seven club schools. A campaign against gambling and opium smoking has also been initiated.

What was in the letter nobody knows. But the student was immediately arrested and taken to the martial law office where he was mercilessly beaten. Then he was "released" but his wounds were such that he died the day after. Police agents frequently break into students' quarters in the middle of the night and make these searches and even if they find nothing they beat up the students.

The students are not remaining quiet under such inhuman treatment. There is a deep protest against the dark and reactionary regime of ignorance and oppression. The students' movement is growing under the greatest difficulties and appeals for the nationalist government everywhere.

and that they paid this amount to the police as a bribe for protection during the strike. The Executive Council charges further that the Strike Committee could not account for over $600,000.

Unfounded Charges.

The Joint Board is amazed and totally fails to understand how the Council could make such wholly unfounded and irresponsible charges. We therefore take the liberty to bring to your attention the facts of the matter.

The accountants who were appointed by the so-called investigating committee are well known as socialists and bitter opponents of our progressive union leadership. We officially protested against the employment of these accountants, and we proposed to Brother Matthew Woll to engage accountants who are not prejudiced against our political beliefs and affiliations. Our objections were overruled by Brother Woll, but we accepted the committee's ruling under protest.

The Joint Board then placed all the records and vouchers at the disposal of the accountants. We then discovered that the accountants attempted to conceal a receipt. We again informed and protested to the committee. Our objection was once more overruled, and we accepted this ruling also under protest. The accountant returned, but refused to continue the audit in the presence of a Joint Board observer, altho such an arrangement was made with Brothers Woll and McGrady.

Have All Vouchers.

The vouchers for the $604,000 paid out in strike relief are still in the possession of the Union. We gave an accounting to the committee for every dollar expended during the strike.

The charge of Brother Woll that the General Strike Committee bribed the police is a ridiculous and clumsy frame-up. The Joint Board expresses its vigorous protest and indignation against the employment of such irresponsible methods against a bona fide trade union.

Permit us to recall several facts which will establish beyond a shadow of doubt that a frame-up was planned by Brother Matthew Woll and his committee.

Object To Frayne.

When the investigation of the strike was ordered by you, the Joint Board objected to the personnel of the so-called investigation committee. We especially protested against Brother Hugh Frayne. You will surely recall that at our conferences at the Cadillac Hotel we proved to you that Brother Frayne was participating in the conspiracies of our international officers for the forcible overthrow of the strike leadership. We also brot to your attention the fact that Brother Frayne had presided at the famous Carnegie Hall meeting, where well known sluggers, scabs and underworld elements acted as the door and door committees.

You directed us to present our objections to Brother Woll, which we did. We drew Brother Woll's attention to a public statement made by Brother Frayne that if he desired to the New York hospitals will be wounded furriers, he would be able to hold the Carnegie Hall meeting. We charged Brother Frayne with suspicious behavior at our conferences with the manufacturers, at which Brother Frayne presided. We adduced evidence which gave much weight to our charges. Brother M. Woll nevertheless insisted on retaining Brother Frayne as a member of the so-called impartial committee to investigate our conduct during the strike.

Demanded Public Hearing.

The joint board demanded that the hearings of the so-called investigating committee be public, and open to the membership, in order to provide against a possible frame-up. But Brother Woll categorically refused to hold public hearings.

The attitude on the part of Brother Woll and the committee confirms us in our opinion that the committee had premeditated a frame-up of the General Strike Committee. What other reason could have motivated Brother Woll's refusal to hold public hearings?

The joint board also demanded that three of its members be present at the sessions of the committee. This was not granted, and instead we were confronted with "affidavits" taken without our knowledge. The facts regarding these so-called affidavits will throw much light on the entire proceedings of the committee.

"Affidavits."

The committee, and to its one of these "affidavits" signed by one Mr. Charles Zorenberg. We pointed out to the committee that this Mr. Zorenberg is well known to all fur workers under the names of "Chasa Charlie" and "Cut-him-up-Charlie"; that this individual has a police record; that he is well known as a slugger, and is under graft charges in the union. We pointed out that he was a member of the official "slugging committee" of the former union administration which received the support of the New York Daily Forward. We informed the committee that since the former administration of the union was defeated in May, 1925, this notorious Mr. Zoronberg has been out of the union.

We further informed the committee that during our recent strike this Mr. Zorenberg was a strikebreaker and a scab agent. We requested an appointment with the committee in order to present our statements respecting Mr. Zorenberg, and we asked for an opportunity to examine the other "affidavits." In reply to this request, Brother Woll informed us that in view of the brilliant record of one of the signers, he considered the other affidavits worthless, unless all of the fifty-eight signers of "affidavits" were brought to the committee for cross-examination. Nevertheless, the so-called investigation committee deems it proper to use these "affidavits" as the basis for their charges against us.

Mostly Gangsters.

The joint board is convinced that if the committee had permitted us to examine the signers of these "affidavits," we would have been able to prove that the majority of them are the sluggers, strikebreakers and other notorious characters who, under the leadership of the international officers and Brother H. Frayne, were in charge of the Carnegie Hall meeting, where you were announced to speak.

We present these facts to you as proof that the proceedings of the committee were of a scandalous nature, and offer ample ground for our declaration that this frame-up against the officers of the joint board were prearranged and premeditated.

Our representatives who had been entrusted with the leadership of the strike categorically and emphatically deny that they ever charged the police with bribery. We accounted for every dollar spent during the strike. We explaining items of expenditure made during the strike. The joint board is therefore amazed at the irresponsible and malicious accusations made by your committee against us.

Woll Backs Out.

We desire to bring to your attention the fact that Brother Woll made the charges against us in N. Y. York at a meeting at Cooper Union called by Mr. M. Sigman even before he rendered his report to the executive council of the A. F. of L. When, however, the joint board of the Furriers' Union held a meeting at Cooper Union for the purpose of submitting a financial report to the membership, and invited Brother Woll to present and prove his charges against us or our membership, he strangely failed to appear.

We are very glad that you have refused to explain that the executive council is not responsible for the false accusations against the police. But the joint board repudiates the attempt to foist upon it the blame for the treachery and irresponsibility of Brother Woll and his colleagues, who are responsible for the malicious and false charges against the joint board of the Furriers' Union, that they bribed the police, employed sluggers, and squandered union funds.

Exposa Motives.

The joint board is determined (and will not rest until it does so) to uncover and expose the hidden and suspicious motives that actuated Brother Woll and his committee to resort to such mean methods which cover with shame the leaders of the A. F. of L. These tactics are intended to discredit and injure the strongly organized and militant New York Furriers' Union which has distinguished itself by its recent achievements. The New York fur workers have offered stubborn resistance to the attempt of the Jewish Daily Forward and the group of grafters and sluggers who imposed themselves upon the union in May, 1925.

The New York Furriers' Union has succeeded in organizing Joint Council for workers who never before belonged to the union. And we conducted a splendid and victorious strike which resulted in the establishment of the 40-hour, 5-day week, in which achievement the last connection of the Forward group with the fur workers' union was severed. Moreover, the union donated $60,000 to the Lockmakers' strike immediately after our own long struggle with the employers.

Good Record.

The joint board will not permit any individual or group to involve its members in intrigues and frame-ups, such as those attempted by Brothers Woll and his colleagues. Our organization will not be made the foothall of political adventurers. We are interested in the economic welfare of the thousands of fur workers. We demonstrated this by organizing the unorganized workers in our trade, by eliminating trade evils which under mined union conditions and by increasing the average wage of the fur workers by thirty-seven per cent. All of this we accomplished during the brief period of twenty months in spite of all the obstacles and intrigues of the Jewish Daily Forward and of the officers of the international union.

In view of the situation created by the dishonest attempt at a frame-up, the joint board considers it imperative to the prestige of the organized American labor movement and the highest duty of the executive council of the A. F. of L. to elect a reliable committee which, jointly with the committee of the joint board, shall immediately make a thoro investigation into the reasons that motivated Brother Woll and his associates in the conduct of the New York joint board.

Investigate Frayne.

We further recommend that such investigation shall also investigate Brother Frayne's conduct during the strike, in order to inform you thoroughly of the facts presented to make a decision as to whether Brother Frayne deserves the confidence of the A. F. of L. in the capacity of a representative of the executive council in the New York joint board.

Fraternally yours,
Joint Board, Furriers' Union

Plumbers' Helpers Begin to Organize; Seek Affiliation

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(FP)—Plumbers' helpers, the only group of building tradesmen in New York outside of the union field, are beginning to organize and have formed the United Association of Plumbers' Helpers. James F. Walsh is leader, with Ed. Lezin of the late subway strike as organizer. Biweekly union meetings and weekly mass meetings are getting a good response.

The new association seeks admission to the plumbers and steamfitters' international to which the steamfitters' helpers belong. The steamfitters' helpers, thru their union control, get $9.25 a day, whereas the non-union plumbers' helpers have to take three to five dollars, or whatever the contractor will pay them.

How's This Puzzle?

Comrade J. Kovacek of Flat Rock, Mich., has sent in a new puzzle. See if you can guess what he says:

3—15—13—18—1—4—5—19 12—5—20—19 14—15—20 5—15—7—5—20 13—5—14—9—14

To solve this puzzle, write down the alphabet and then put numbers for each letter as, for instance, 1 for a, 2 for b, 3 for c, 4 for d, and so on. Then find the letters for each number in the puzzle. Write us what you get to the Young Comrade Section, Daily Worker, 1113 W. Washington, Chicago, Ill.

Got a better one? Well, then, send it in.

Answers to Puzzles.

These comrades have answered the picture puzzle in the issue of December 28th:

Dear Comrades:

I read The DAILY WORKER of which I do not forget to read the Young Comrade Section. I saw a picture of rich people trying to take the poor workers' money.

Rich people think they can get workers out of the way by taking all their money, but the workers do not stand for it. Instead they give them a good hard blow with a heavy sledge hammer. For my part they should give them two.

Bennie Caruso, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Comrade:

The meaning of the picture in the Young Comrade Section is this:

The rich are trying to take from the workers everything they can but when the workers are organized they give them with their hammer over the hands.

Solomon Kayak, San Francisco, Cal.

Here is the answer to the number puzzle in the issue of January 4th.

The workers own Russia.
Russia has no child labor.
The following have answered the puzzle correctly:

Saimi Saiminen, Waukegan, Ill.
Louise Pellegrino, Chicago, Ill.

NEARLY TWO MILLION NEED OLD AGE PENSIONS IN U. S.; SURVEY REVEALS FUTILITY OF SYSTEMS NOW IN VOGUE

HARRISBURG, Pa.— (FP) — Only about 90,000 of the 1,800,000 dependent persons 65 years of age or over in the United States are receiving pensions from their former employers. The average industrial pension is only $485 per year.

This is the fundamental fact on which a declaration for public old age pensions in America is made by the Pennsylvania old age pension commission in a special report on The Problem of Old Age Pensions in Industry.

Jas. H. Maurer, president of the state federation of labor, is chairman of the commission. The other signers are Mrs. Mary V. Grice, David S. Ludlum and John F. O'Toole.

The study of American industrial pension problems conducted by the commission discloses that private pensions are unlikely ever to touch more than a handful of the veterans of industry. A vital defect in private industrial pensions, the commission finds, is that they are not really guaranteed. In most instances the company does not lay aside reserves to meet the obligation of pension payments in future.

NORTHWEST LUMBER WORKERS WARNED OF THE ORGANIZATION OF BOSSES WHO THREATEN EVEN PRESENT CONDITIONS

By a Worker Correspondent.

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 20.—The northwest is a lumber country, and the lumber industry is unorganized. Tacoma is by far the biggest saw-mill town, and centrally located. It has the largest percentage of workers in its population of any city in the west, its newspapers declare. Wages are low, living is high. Work is not steady. Tacoma is the logical place to begin the organization of the lumber industry. And the time to begin to organize the workers is NOW.

The bosses are advocating sabotage, a cutting down of production in order that prices of lumber may be forced upward. This means more profits for the bosses, less work, even at present low wages for the workers, and more expensive lumber for building homes for the working class.

Bosses Organize.

The organization of the bosses is under way, and the most important mills in Tacoma are to be in this combine of sixty lumber firms and three hundred million dollars capitalization. Today the workers have an eight-hour day and a basic wage scale of $5.40. Already some mills are speeding up as many young workers as possible and paying them only $2.50.

How long will the eight-hour day last, how long will even the $5.40 wage last, once the combine of sixty lumber firms is made? The bosses are organizing. They control the state government. No city or county administration in the lumber country would dare refuse to do their bidding. The individual workers are as helpless before this condition as ants in the path of a steam roller.

Recall Former Struggles.

And when the workers begin to organize let them have no delusions. Let them consider Passaic. Let them remember the Verona, the Everett murders on Nov. 5, 1916, of which the present governor of Washington, Hartley, was one of the instigators. Let them remember Nov. 11, 1919, at Centralia. Let them realize that the organized power of the mill owners will be against them, and that back of that will stand the organized power of the state, the county and the city governments, openly and shamelessly the tools of the bosses. Let them realize that besides these things are the American Legion, the ku klux klan and other organizations. Let them realize that the newspapers will lie about them and slander them and that the churches will attempt to betray them. Let them remember that Bill Short and his machine are still in control of the State Federation of Labor, a gang which will oppose any real fighting organization, and which favors class collaboration, and hates the unskilled and unorganized workers and the ideals of the left wing.

The 1919 Strike.

The workers should recall the general strike of Feb. 6 to 11, 1919, in Seattle and Tacoma. This involved less men than the strikes in the steel industry, the coal mines, the railway shops. But it cut across the craft lines. The workers stood together for once. It gave the master class the worst scare that it has had since the great labor revolt in the eighties.

The left wing of the central labor councils of Tacoma and of Seattle has since been crushed by the official machinery of the W. S. F. of L. and of the A. F. of L. But the rank and file have shown once what they can do and will do again when the time comes. When the time comes that a newly created organization in the lumber mills is ready to fight, and needs aid, they will find that the more highly skilled workers in other lines will be ready to give that aid. And the lumber workers in the woods have long since shown their rebel spirit, their solidarity, their fighting ability. They, too, will aid their fellow workers in the sawmills.

PATERSON SILK WORKERS FIGHT WAGE DECREASE

See Danger Signs; Are Preparing Now

By a Worker Correspondent.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 20.—Concern was shown at the meeting of the Associated Silk Workers, Broad Silk Department, at the jointcoma of the strike of 2,500 silk workers at Easton, Pa., and the effect of this defeat in the surrounding silk country.

Sea New Wage Cut.

In Allentown a similar wage is expected and the workers intend to endorse it without a strike. The secretary of the Associated in Paterson pointed out what the result of this movement would be unless the workers resist it in a vigorous manner.

Plan Drive.

As a result of a general discussion on the conditions in the silk industry at present and of the Associated, a committee of 25 of the most active and militant members of the department was formed to start an immediate drive; first, to get back the old members; second, to reunionize the old union shop, and third, to break into new and untouched groups of workers.

Renew Militancy.

This is only one sign of the old militancy returning in the Paterson silk workers. With trade beginning to pick up, workers' resentment at longer hours and gradual, almost imperceptible wage cuts, the time has come to begin rallying the forces of the workers not only for resistance, but for an offensive for much better conditions and a 100% unionized town.

Donate to Italians.

The Associated donated $50 to the Italian Relief Committee of Paterson which is handling relief for victims of the Mussolini offensive against the workers.

URGE UNITED FRONT OF ALL BRANDS OF RELIGIOUS DOPE IN ORDER TO FIGHT BOTH COMMUNISM AND ATHEISM

By MAX COHEN
(Worker Correspondent)

PEORIA, Ill., Jan. 20. — Without mincing any words, Quin O'Brien, Chicago lawyer and prominent Knights of Columbus man, speaking before the Universalist Church of this city in its first "good will" meeting, called atheism and the Communists who expounded it "the biggest menace facing the country."

A Jewish rabbi, a congregational minister and an active member of the K. of C. were the speakers and the subject announced was to be "What My Religion Has Done for Humanity," none of the conductors for the "Heavenly Union" explained what the blessings to civilization each sect had bestowed.

Asks for Unity.

Rev. George S. Mills of Chicago, the congregationalist, harped on a "firmer understanding of one another," while the rabbi, Morris H. Feuerlicht of Indianapolis, stressed "unity among the believers of God." The plan for unity between "loyalists to one God" is most opportune, according to the cath-olic speaker, in order that they might better fight the common battle against the growing forces of the atheists.

Rewards Anti-Religion.

"At the present time there is a bill in congress calling for the abolition of all chaplains of any belief from the United States army and navy, as well as from congress," O'Brien said. "In 72 universities and colleges in this land and probably in many others there are organized efforts for the abolition of religion." He cited what he said religion was the dropping away from religion piness to mankind here on earth.

about America because of the organized effort from countries that are fighting the movement here.

Russia and Mexico "that is, certain parties in those countries are paying rubles and carrying on the organization thru professors at universities," he said. He named Prof. Hayes of the University of Illinois and Prof. Ross of Wisconsin as examples.

The rabbi admitted during his talk that the biggest and most cruel wars are religious wars. Now these once bitter enemies are going to forget their old-time hatred each other for a while in order to crusade against the spectre of Communism and atheism.

Fight in Russia and Mexico.

According to O'Brien, the fight will center in Mexico and Russia, where there is "absolutely no freedom of worship." This is a plain falsehood, as the laws of these two countries permit the churches to carry on their work as long as they do not interfere with the state.

The catholic representative threw the challenge to atheism. "I hope there are some of them here tonight," he said. "Let this meeting be a warning to them that the religious beliefs of the world are preparing to stand against them."

Yiels see to it that the array of forces is clearing. On one side is the church and the capitalist government which it supports preaching the happiness of the life after death; on the other side the atheists and the revolutionary workers, who would abolish religion and capitalism and bring happiness to mankind here on earth.

Boys Butcher Rich Rancher's Calf to Get Food for Hungry Children; Face Penitentiary

By a Worker Correspondent.

PLENTYWOOD, Mont., Jan. 20.—Two boys, Bob Dickinson and Vilas Wingate, were arrested at George Master's place here, nine miles north of Outlook, on the charge of having stolen a calf and having butchered it. The calf had been stolen from Andrew Veland, a wealthy cattle dealer, to be used as food for the four children of the family where the boys were staying.

Had No Money; Babes Hungry.

Neither the Masters, who have four children at home, the oldest of them six, nor the boys had any money, and when the children complained of hunger, the boys took it upon themselves to become "good Samaritans."

They went to the Veland ranch, opened the gates of the corral in daylight, lassoed the calf, loaded it on the sled and when they got back to the Master's home they butchered it, intending to use it for food. When Sheriff Sallsbury asked the boys why they had picked on the Veland farm instead of some other place, the boys answered, "Why, he's the richest man in the country, isn't he? And he can afford it the best."

Face Jury Trial.

The boys will be tried before a jury. Veland wants them to be sent to the penitentiary as an example for other boys who might try similar stunts.

The butchering of any live stock in Montana is a grand larceny case and is punishable by a term in the pen.

CATHOLICS BUSY WITH CAMPAIGN AGAINST MEXICO

Raise War Cry at New Jersey Meetings

By a Worker Correspondent.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Jan. 20.—The local Knights of Columbus council held a mass meeting here at the high school auditorium to discuss the "Situation in Mexico." The high school auditorium seats about a thousand people, but only about 250 people were present, in spite of the fact that the meeting was advertised in the local press continuously for a week, and announced from the pulpits in various churches.

Fight "Bolshevism."

Deegan, chairman of the meeting, announced that the Knights of Columbus are using a million dollar fund to "combat Bolshevism." He stated that "America has valuable interests in Nicaragua and that Mexico was preading bolshevism in Nicaragua and in our own country."

The speakers were a catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi and Judge Edward J McGrath of Elizabeth, whom the K. of C. is sending thruout the state to speak on Mexico.

Priest Waves Flag.

Rev. Joseph A. Ryan, the priest, delivered a "100 per cent" speech "The K. of C. is not only a catholic organization, but one of the most patriotic organizations," he hissed. "The world war proved its patriotism The K. of C. enters the Mexican question not only for religion but to prevent the spread of Mexico's doctrines in this country. Spread broadcast the situation in Mexico to prevent it from doing any harm to this great country we love so dearly." He urged our government to adopt a "strong policy" to prevent "destruction of our great institutions" by Mexico.

Rabbi Fears Bolshevism.

The Jewish rabbi naively said that Calles was to blame for the illiteracy in Mexico. "The Mexican constitution is bolshevism and anarchism," he said.

Wild Charges.

Judge McGrath attempted to work his audience into a frenzy by repeating the wild charges against the Mexican government, and that the government was against god, anti-christian. He denounced the Communists in the same breath, declaring without proof that they did not believe in heaven or hell.

This meeting was one of a series planned by the catholics to stir the people against Mexico.

The Slimy Path to the Senate

A number of questions which, like the Gilbert and Sullivan flowers that bloom in the spring, have nothing to do with the case of the seating of Frank L. Smith, Samuel Insull's favorite senator from Illinois, are being raised.

The right of the senate to pass on the qualifications of its own membership, the right of states to be represented by any citizen they elect or select, the question of whether the acceptance of money from public utility corporations by an officeholder supposed to be regulating them, constitutes "moral turpitude"—all these various angles to the situation are being debated with that nicety of detail and wealth of language which makes one pause in wonderment until one recalls that one of the functions of the senate is to pretend to ponder solemnly issues which have already been decided.

This is not to say that the seating or the refusal to seat the choice of the Illinois traction interests as a representative of the people of Illinois will show any prearrangement. But it does mean that no one will arise in the senate and state that the methods by which Smith was elected differ in degree only, and not in kind from the general process by which all the senators and congressmen finally arrive in Washington.

The whole mechanism of elections in the United States is a gigantic hoax—a fraud perpetrated year after year in the name of democracy. The proof of this statement is in the fact that in neither the house of representatives or in the senate is there a single spokesman of the American working class. American democracy does not seep down to the masses who do the work of the country.

It is in the name of "the people" that senators and congressmen are supposed to speak. But what problems of the American working class are ever dealt with by them except from the standpoint of the bankers, bosses and businessmen? "People" is such a delightfully general term.

The verbal struggles which take place in Washington center around divergencies of interest among these three groups. Only indirectly do the mass of workers and farmers ever get their day in court.

Thousands of workers and farmers in Illinois voted for Smith, the candidate of a great financial combination which exploits them, and thereby proved that the corruption of American capitalist democracy has infected whole layers of the American masses.

Corruption is inseparable from capitalism. It is only one of its many manifestations of disease. The working class, if it remains tied to the parties of American capitalism, will become like the parasitic populace of ancient Rome—utterly debauched and dependent entirely on the whims of powerful industrial and financial lords.

A labor party, rallying the workers around their immediate interests as a CLASS, will make a re-birth for the American workers and farmers. When they have built such a party, as they must and will, they will look back in wonderment and disgust to the time when a sneering and contemptuous ruling class was able to begin with complacency to the fact that the same unions who were victimized by their industrial and state machinery lacked grit fully the hands which had beat them down and kept them down.

Only the warring class can end capitalist corruption, and it is only warring class parties whose candidates are not eased into public life down a chute smoothed with the gangreenous fume of a rotting system.

This is the process by which not only Frank L. Smith, but all other senators and congressmen, with negligible exceptions, obtained their places in the state machinery of capitalism.

Dear to the Heart of the Bosses Is the Watson-Parker Bill

Speaking of the wage demands made by the trainmen and conductors on southern railroads, the New York Times says:

> The gravamen of a strike . . . . is considered so slight by railroad men as to be unworthy of consideration . . . . The provisions of the Watson-Parker act ARE AN EFFECTIVE PROTECTION AGAINST A SUDDEN WALKOUT. Even if the workers should be dissatisfied after all the various bodies possible of creation under this law had failed to make peace, THEY WOULD HAVE TO GIVE THIRTY DAYS' NOTICE before dropping their duties. (Emphasis ours.)

The Watson-Parker bill is filled with expedients for delaying action by workers. This is the main reason why it was enacted. "All the various bodies possible of creation under this law" are for the purpose of delaying action while the agents of the railroads, in and out of the unions, systematically undermine the morale of the union membership.

Once the capitalists are fairly certain that a strike can be prevented entirely or delayed until it becomes ineffective, they can contemplate complacently, as they do the southern railway wage demands, all disputes with the trade unions. Especially is this true when, as is the case in the American labor movement, the grade and file officials are just as enthusiastic about the mechanism which delays strike action as are the capitalists.

There was no such complacency evident in the capitalist press when the railway workers forced the Adamson eight-hour law through by the threat of strike action.

The Watson-Parker law is a law in the interests of the railroads and not in the interests of railroad workers.

They Know What They Want

The Enemy in the Coal Industry.

Mattimore Street in Passaic, N. J.

ADJOINING the Botany Worsted Mills in Passaic is a block known as Mattimore street. On one side of the street is a row of neat little brick cottages with fenced-in lawns, screen doors, porches and flower gardens. On the other side of the street, divided by an irregular line of ugly, ramshackle, drab-colored houses and tenements. Broken steps lead to the sidewalk. The roofs sag and the porches, where there are any, look on the verge of collapsing.

Stark Hostility.

These two rows of houses stand and stare hostilely at each other across the street which divides them. In the evening groups of people gather on the steps and porches in front of the houses on both sides of Mattimore street. They too stare across the street contemptuously. Occasionally a few jeering words fly thru the air.

THIS block of houses and tenements on both sides of the street is owned by the Botany Worsted Mills and furnishes the mills one of the finest standing just in back of the neat brick cottages of the foremen. To the right of the strikers' side of the street and in back of the mills runs a canal. To the left and in front of the mills is Dayton avenue.

Just One Block.

Mattimore street is only one block long, yet in this one block are concentrated many of the important elements of the textile strike now in its thirty-eighth week. These same elements can be found in almost any average strike over held in this country, for that matter.

That narrow, one-block street presents a dramatic picture fit for the stage in its compression. On one side the dingy, ruined homes and tenements of the striking workers. On the other the spruce, red-brick cottages of the foremen, and in the background the grim, towering chimneys of the Botany mills. And this packed into one block.

COMPANY OWNED houses, pump owned by a poorly paid worsted workers, for the right to have their own union, to elect who have gone back to work or who refused to leave their jobs at all these things to be found in the one block of Mattimore street.

Recently a fresh wave of excitement rippled down Mattimore street. There had been many such ripples since the strike began. The latest to arrived with the appearance of a man, a scab-herder, to move, several of the houses on the strikers' side of the street. They were stocked to Arthur Hyatt, agent for the Botany Worsted Mills. The first move to evict these workers had failed, and then for various reasons.

Tenants Blacklisted.

Then a postal agent appeared with a list of names over this two-page. Word went out that the whole street was to be cleared on the strikers' side, whether rent was paid or not. A family from out of town moved into one of the houses across from the foremen's homes, and went to work at the Botany mills. Other families were to be imported from out of town by the management of the mills, and the street was to be swept clean of strikers and strike sympathizers to make room for the "scabs." This was the explanation the strikers living on the street gave for the blacklist of the postal agent.

AT number seven Mattimore street is a butcher shop. On the Botany agent's list the name of the butcher appeared. The agent showed it to him. "What is the matter?" he asked. "What is your name doing on this list?"

"Search me," replied the butcher. You know I always pay my rent promptly in advance."

He Knew.

But the butcher had to some idea why his name was on the list. He did not think it out of the mixed "My sympathies were with the strikers. He lived in the cottage and his family and the other striker friends set out in front of my shop and the foreman across the street seen it. They're the ones who are back of this list, of course. Certainly I'm for the strike. I believed in the miners' union 25 years myself. It was the strike in Pennsylvania that brought me here. I was a postal worker and I was in one of a mountain-manned house in Pennsylvania during the strike, just as now we're trying to put out these fellows on this street. It was a little different there, because we had bosses who had to get up when we stopped working for the coal company. But it comes to the same thing here with these people."

All up and down the street, notices have been served on the strikers, or are going to be soon, in three days. Some of them have gone out, and they assert they don't intend to, without putting up a fight first. After eight months and more of unsuccessful strike, they are not so easily moved.

THE strikers who live on the street say that there are only about 15 "scabs" scattered up and down the street, among the several hundred residents on the strikers' side. The foremen's side, of course, they consider entirely "scab." A few of these fifteen have moved into the neighborhood recently. Some of the others have dribbled back to the mills gradually. The rest never went out on strike at all.

The Reason.

This strike has been on since January, 1926. Why is it that the Botany Mills have waited nearly nine months before trying any drastic means to realize at last that the strikers intend to stick it out to the end. The Botany mills management is not anxious to drive these strikers living across the street out of the mill-owned houses. They are skilled workers and needed in the mills.

So they were allowed to stay on month after month, on the continual expectation that each month would see them back. But now the ninth month is well started and there is no sign of weakening yet. And so as part of a renewed campaign of violence, comes the eviction notices of Mattimore street, Passaic.

A NEW NOVEL

By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair.)

Thus led on, Rachel said that she would be interested to understand the ideas of Comrade Watkins. (Whenever a Socialist wanted to be very polite to a Bolshevik, she called him by the old term, which had applied before the family row broke out.) How could a mass uprising succeed in America, with the employing class in possession of all the arms and means of communication? They had poison gas now, and would wipe out thousands of the rebel workers at a time. The one possible outcome would be reaction—as in Italy, where the workers had seized the factories, and then had had to give them up because they couldn't run them.

Comrade Watkins replied that Italy had no coal, but was dependent on Britain and America, which thus had the power to strangle the Italian workers. As a matter of fact the Fascist reaction in Italy had been made by American bankers—Mussolini and his ruffians had not dared to move a finger till they had made certain of American credits. We had played the same role there as in Hungary and Bavaria; all over the world, American gold was buttressing reaction. Paul had seen it with his own eyes in Siberia, and he said, with his quiet decisiveness, that nobody could understand what it meant unless he had been there. Paul didn't blame Comrade Menzies for feeling as she did; that was natural for one who had been brought up under peace conditions; but Paul had been to war; he had seen the class struggle in action.

"Yes, Comrade Watkins," said Rachel, "but if you try and fail, things will be so much worse."

"If we never try," said Paul, "we can never succeed, and even if we fail, the class consciousness of the workers will be sharpened, and the end will be nearer than if we do nothing. We have to keep the revolutionary goal before the masses, and not let them be lured into compromise. That is my criticism of the Socialist movement, it fails to realize the intellectual and moral forces locked up in the working class that can be called out by the right appeal."

"Ah," said Rachel, "but that is the question—what is the right appeal? I want to appeal to good rather than to violence. That seems to me more moral."

Paul answered, that to make peace appeals to a tiger might seem moral to some, but to him it seemed futile. The determining fact in the world was what the capitalist class had done during the past nine years. They had destroyed thirty million human lives, and three hundred billions of wealth, everything a whole generation of labor had created. So Paul did not enter into discussions of morality with them; they were a set of murderous maniacs, and the job was to sweep them out of power. Any means that would succeed were moral means, because nothing could be so immoral as capitalism.

When Bunny went out with Rachel, she said that Paul was an extraordinary man, and certainly a dangerous one to the capitalist class. He was a case of shell-shock from the war, and those who had made the war would have to deal with him. Then Bunny asked about Ruth, and Rachel said she was a nice girl, but a little colorless, didn't comrade think? Bunny tried to explain that Ruth was deep, but feelings were intense, but she seldom expressed them. Rachel said Ruth ought to think for herself, because she would have a lot of suffering if she followed Paul thru his Bolshevik career. Bunny suggested that Rachel might help to educate her, but Rachel smiled and said that Comrade Ross was too naive, surely. Paul would not like to have a Socialist comrade steal his sister's sympathy from him. In spite of all Bunny could do, the women friends would not be friends.

Then later on Bunny saw Paul, and got Paul's reaction to Rachel. A nice girl, well-meaning and intelligent, but she wouldn't keep her proletarian attitude very long. The social revolution in America was not going to be made by some lady college graduates—in the cruelty work for the capitalist class. What she was doing among the "upper" was mostly wasted effort. Her ideas of Paul, for instance, were all wrong. Paul was not fighting Communists. The capitalists ought to be glad to hire her to do such work.

But somehow it wasn't that way. Bunny found the capitalists were angry, wounded, and on guard in a moment. A few days later Bunny learned that Rachel was having a serious difficulty. She had taken her four years' course at the university with the idea of winning a career as a social worker. But now a woman friend, who was a director she was accustomed to watch for that she was throwing away her chances by her activity with the "reds." It was hard enough for a Jewish girl, and one from the wealthy classes, to have a professional career, without taking on the added handicap of Socialism. Really, it would at least wait till she had completed her education, and got herself established.

So there were more troubles. What was Rachel going to do? The answer was that she was not going to desert her beloved young Socialists. It was all very well to say wait, but that was the way all compromise began since you started, you never knew where to stop. No, Rachel would take her chances of being victimized by the police, or the crowd, or the employers, or anybody else, rather than be a traitor to the labor movement. And Bunny went off to keep an appointment to a dinner party with Von Tracy, having a whole evening and a troubled conversation with her she was never conscious of.

SENATE ENDS SMITH CAREER IN POLITICS

No Chance of Getting Seat Now

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The political career of Frank L. Smith, senator-elect from Illinois, is ended. This is the verdict of both his friends and enemies who see "finis" written over Smith as far as politics is concerned in the action of the United States senate in barring him from a seat by the vote of 46 to 33. This vote was as Smith's filling the vacancy in the present congress left by the death of Sen. McKinley, but when he appears on March 4, to claim a seat in his own name, the result will be the same. On this point all political observers agree, as the next session of congress will find the senate with more opponents of the Illinoisan than are in the senate today.

May Drop His Fight.

By the vote, Smith's credentials are placed with the committee on elections and privileges for investigation and Smith was denied the oath of office before the investigation. It is highly possible that Smith will drop the entire investigation proceedings and relinquish the appointment given him by Gov. Small of Illinois. His followers agree that the chances of his being seated after the investigation are slim. The senate vote showed them to be hopeless.

The vote established the right of the senate to pass on the qualifications of a senator other than those specifically mentioned in the fourteenth amendment of the constitution. It gives the senate the power of investigating a person's right to a seat on any charge whatsoever.

EVOLUTION AND KLAN ANGLES UP IN NORRIS CASE

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 21.— Both the klan and the evolution angles came up in the trial of J. Frank Norris, charged with slaying D. E. Chipps of Forth Worth.

Both points came up under the examination of prospective jurors. Stowers, one of the jurors seated, boasted that he came of ancestors who had been the barbons of the original K. K. K. in reconstruction days. Altho Norris himself denies actual membership in the klan yet, it is pointed out, he speaks very frequently at the klan hall. Moreover, only last September, L. P. Bloodworth, at that time grand dragon of Texas, said that the members of the klan were solidly behind the fundamentalist preacher accused of murder.

The evolution angle came in when the second juror, C. L. Brown, was asked: "Do you believe that you were created by God or came from a monkey?" The intelligent Mr. Brown, a former preacher, of course, answered promptly: "I believe I was created by God." Evidently only the direct products of the hands of God are competent to serve as jurymen in Texas.

EL DORADO, Ark.—(FP)—Agreements with 5 auto and garage shops are now in effect in El Dorado, signed by Lodge 815, Intl. Assn. of Machinists.

Traction Tool Gets Skids

On the left is Frank L. Smith, whose election was so crooked that even the senate had to refuse to take him in. The other gentleman is Senator Deneen from Illinois, who did his best to get Frank over, at least as far as taking the oath. The hundreds of thousands that Sam Insull gave to Frank to get himself elected came originally from the strap-hangers who are still dishing out street car fares to Mr. Insull.

BRITISH LABOR MEETS TO VOTE ON BETRAYAL

Cook Charges Council with Treachery

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Jan. 21. — The action of the general trades union council in calling off the British general strike is being placed before the bar of British labor for judgment. Twelve hundred delegates representing 400 unions in the United Kingdom are gathered here to listen to the explanation of council leaders on why they issued the orders cancelling the strike which resulted in practical defeat of the miners.

The delegates will vote on the report of the council. The vote will express the opinion of the delegates on the betrayal of the leaders.

Cook Charges Betrayal.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' federation and leader of the miners' strike, and J. H. Thomas, president of the Railwaymen's Union, have presented lengthy reports to the session. Cook's report outlined the position of the workers and presented charges of betrayal and treachery on the part of Thomas and the general council.

Thomas asked for a vote of confidence on the action of the council. He stated that the council "has no apologies to make for its action."

Introduce Measures to Bring Final Death to Colorado Cossacks

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 21. — A bill abolishing the Colorado ranger law was introduced in the senate Thursday, by Senator Freudenthal of Trinidad, and on the same eday Rep. Hudson of Walsenburg, introduced the same in the state assembly. Both of the above named are elected from coal mining centers.

The legislature under Governor Swoot's administration refused to make any appropriation for the rangers and the law became a dead letter and the rangers were disbanded as a result.

The rangers were created during Oliver H. Shonp's administration.

FRAZIER INTRODUCES BILL TO STOP A WAR OVER MEXICAN OIL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — President Coolidge would be directed not to take any military action against Mexico without first calling a special session of congress under terms of a resolution introduced in the senate this afternoon by Senator Frazier, (R) of North Dakota.

The resolution was aimed at blocking a war with Mexico during the coming recess of congress.

Senate Rejects U. S. Treaty with Turkey By a 50 to 34 Vote

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — The Lausanne treaty with Turkey was rejected by the senate, 50 to 34. The vote was short of the two-thirds necessary to ratification.

America's churchmen almost unanimously fought the treaty, which would have established diplomatic and commercial intercourse with Turkey.

'PORK BARREL' HARBORS BILL TO PRESIDENT

Senate Lets $71,000,000 Measure Go By

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — The rivers and harbors bill went to the President for signing after the senate had agreed to the conference report on the measure.

The bill provided for improvements which will cost approximately $71,000,000, including $12,000,000 for improvement of the Missouri river.

The bill, which will become law if signed by Coolidge, has been repeatedly called a "pork barrel" measure by members of congress. Rep. Theodore Burton, of Ohio, made the charge on the house floor that the bill was "loaded with pork." He pointed out that the original measure provided for expenditure of $33,000,000, but to satisfy congressmen who sought special favors, the total was brought up to $71,000,000.

Prior to the acceptance of the conference report in the senate, Sen. Willis of Ohio charged that "an unheard of movement was on foot to throttle the senate from further consideration of the bill." "This bill is so indefensibly a 'pork barrel' measure," he said, "that it is well known that it would be filibustered to death in the senate if it were returned."

BEGIN TRIAL OF THREE PASSAIC MILL STRIKERS

Frame-Up Victims Go Before Biased Judge

By ART SHIELDS,
(Federated Press.)

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 21—(FP)—The court of common pleas in Paterson furnished an interesting scene as three Passaic strikers came to trial on the charge of bombing the homes of two strikebreakers.

At the table sat the three workers, wrecks of the vigorous youths they were before the police beat them almost to death last September. They sat facing the burly sergeants and plain clothes men who did the clubbing and extorted the third degree "confessions" on which the charges were based. To their right, in sharp exchange with prosecutor or judge, were their three alert attorneys, Arthur Harfield Haye, Charles Josephe and Arthur McLeod.

And on the bench, in harshest black, deserving a paragraph to himself, was Judge Joseph Delaney—Delaney, who scored for Jersey justice in 1925 with a six months' sentence against Roger Baldwin, director of the American Civil Service Union, for "unlawful assemblage."

The trial is scheduled to last several days and is being watched with keenest attention by the labor movement. The hardest kind of a legal battle will be fought by both sides for the verdict will affect the cases of eight more strikers, soon to appear before the courts on similar charges. The eleven "bomb" defendants are held on the large total bail of $210,000, reduced from an original $375,000.

Judge to Rescue.

Judge Delaney lost no time, when proceedings started, in showing how his face was set. When Attorney Hays asked the first twelve prospective jurors in the box whether they would assume that any bomb set off during a strike must have been set by union men, two of the jurors said yes. Delaney came to their rescue by asking them whether they could not give a verdict on the evidence and the men grinned assent.

Hays then varied his question: "If a bomb was placed between two houses inhabited by union men would you assume that union men did it?" But here the judge sustained the prosecutor's objection.

When another man was asked whether he was not a mill superintendent the judge said that had nothing to do with the case and the answer was suppressed. The defense got rid of those particular jurors by peremptory challenges, but was handicapped in not being permitted to continue effective interrogation of the rest.

Cross-Examination.

Most of the first day was taken in cross-examining the occupants of the two houses between which the explosion occurred. John Heisig said the damage to his home was repaired in one day by a carpenter and mason: Joseph Stoller, in the other case, said he fired it up himself. His son, Anthony Stoller, said the bomb did not awaken him.

The theory of the defense is that these petty explosions were framed. When the police confront the lawyers the second day there will be interesting developments. The defendants, Charles Current Tony Bochno and Joseph Belleno are attended in court by their wives.

Muscle Shoals Near End.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — A movement instituted by house leaders to settle the Muscle Shoals problem gathered force today when a virtual ultimatum was issued to bidders to submit new offers within ten days or to withdraw their present proposals.

Liberal Headquarters in Nicaragua

Wall Street's numerous emissaries in Nicaragua have taken such an interest in the country that various places have been given obviously American names. For instance, what the Nicaraguans call Puerto Cabezas is known also as Bragman's Bluff. There is also the town of Blueflelds, the headquarters for the invading fleet. Puerto Cabezas is the headquarters of Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, leader of the liberal, anti-Wall Street forces. Above is shown a view of the harbor and docks. The map indicates the location of the city in Nicaragua. Below is an artist's sketch of Dr. T. S. Vega, liberal representative in Washington, who has been exposing Wall Street's share in the present U. S. armed invasion of his country.

NAT'L. CITY BANK PILES UP BILLION OF WORKERS' TOIL; BUSINESS FINE, SAYS HEAD

The National City Bank is the first bank to pass the billion dollar mark in deposits, it was announced. It thus becomes the largest commercial bank in the world in point of capital.

Pres. Charles E. Mitchell remarked: "There is reason to expect that our business will continue a healthy growth."

Workers who frequently wonder why it is that they work and work and yet get poorer can find the answer here. The product of their labor is in the billion dollars of which the National City Bank is so proud, only—it doesn't belong to them but to their bosses. As long as the workers do nothing in the face of this Pres. Mitchell's "business" (robbing the workers) will certainly "continue a healthy growth."

CIGARMAKERS IN PORTO RICO GAIN STRIKE STRENGTH

Women Workers Walk Out of U. S. Plant

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Jan. 21.—Three hundred and fifty women out of the 600 employed by the Porto Rican American Tobacco company at the Colectiva plant have joined the strike of the tobacco workers. The women were employed at the main plant of the company at Puerta de Tierra and left their cigaret machines in response to a call of the strike committee.

Strike Spreads.

The strike of the cigarmakers has spread thruout the island, wherever there are factories of the American company. The strikers are gaining in strength and the affiliation of the women, who manned the most important machines in the factory, is a great victory for the workers. The most important plants affected are the two at San Juan, one in Puerta de Tierra, and one at Colectiva.

Demand Better Conditions.

Chief among demands of the workers are increases in wages, recognition of shop committees, right to have "lectors" or readers in the shops, compensation for those who get tuberculosis in the shop, and improvement of sanitary conditions.

The workers have been out for five months.

MEXICO IS OPEN TO ARBITRATION OF U. S. CLAIMS

First Move Up to Kellogg Who Is Silent

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21.— The foreign office of the Calles government has issued the following statement on the matter of arbitration of the differences between the government and the United States:

"Answering numerous questions with regard to present publications in the press, the Mexican government declares that it is ready to accept in principle that its difficulties with the United States should be decided by way of arbitration."

U. S. Must Make First Move.

This is the first statement made by the Calles government on the matter of arbitration. It is clearly seen that should the oil and land question be arbitrated, the first move must be made by the United States. So far the United States state department has not addressed itself to the Mexican government on this issue. The Washington government's attitude is apparently that of demanding that Mexico first ask for arbitration in order to appease the vanity of the United States, it is declared here.

Land Laws Go in Effect.

The new land laws, passed simultaneously with the oil laws, have gone into effect, Jan. 21 being the date set for their enforcement. Like the oil laws, the new land laws place land gained at many millions of dollars under the jurisdiction of the government.

It is reported that American landowners are planning to fight the enforcement and will ask for injunctions against them. No definite steps have yet been taken by them, however.

Ordar Minister to Pekin.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—John V. A. MacMurray, American minister to China, has been ordered to return to his post in Pekin for diplomatic reasons, it was announced at the state department. MacMurray was ordered home to consult with President Coolidge concerning the Chinese situation, and had started.

'TERROR' TURNS OUT TO BE MERE YOUTH PROTEST

"Mob" Was Girl Students' Demonstration

BULLETIN

MANILA, Jan. 21. — Carrying 800 boxes of hand grenades and 800 cases of other ammunition, the American destroyer Stewart today cleared from this port for Tientsin, China.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 21. — What has been hysterically called the "depredations of a mob" in Foochow, where a Spanish convent is supposed to have been "sacked," has turned out to have been in reality a demonstration of Chinese girl students against the mistreatment of Chinese orphans being cared for by catholic nuns.

The girls charged that children had died under the careless ministrations of the sisters and the demonstration in the Spanish quarter was staged as a protest against this. None of the church members was harmed and the panicky manner in which foreigners packed up to leave the city is only one more sample of the artificial frenzy being created by the foreigners themselves.

Not One Casualty.

In all the "terror and rioting" that news dispatches going out of the country have spoken of as having occurred in Foochow, not one made any claim that a single person has come to harm.

The United States destroyer Pillsbury proceeded to Foochow and is now bound for Manila with American "refugees." Reports received here from Foochow say that the nationalist authorities are in complete control of the situation in Fukien province in which Foochow is located and that a number of persons who took part in the anti-Spanish demonstration have been arrested.

Spain Joins In.

Spain and Portugal have joined the other powers in sending warships to Shanghai in preparation for the nationalist invasion of the city. Strikes on Shanghai street cars and power houses have been called and plans are planning to join in the movement.

Shanghai Quiet.

Shanghai is completely quiet. Strong barricades and entrenchments are being erected around the foreign concessions and large forces of voluntary troops are continuously on guard. There have been no disorders of any kind and the Chinese residents take a curious interest in the feverish defense activities of the foreigners.

Mexican Government Has Clerical Revolt in Hand as Troops Rout the Priests and Rebels Desert Ranks

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21.—The revolt led by high catholic clergymen is rapidly becoming a farce, as the clerical rebels are being repulsed in every conflict and their ranks are dwindling rather than growing. In 90 per cent of the states the priests have failed to make any headway.

In a battle at Atotonilco between the rebels and federal troops more than 100 of the former were taken prisoners and the remainder were forced to retreat to the hills for hiding.

A band of rebels headed by two priests were routed after they attacked Nochistan in the state of Zacatecas.

FARMERS LOSE 20 BILLIONS IN PRICE SLUMPS

Untold Suffering Lot of Farm Victims

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Jan. 21. — "Untold suffering and a capital loss of $20,000,000,000 have been borne by farmers and their families thru the slump in the purchasing power of farm products and a sharp decline in the net income per capita of farm population, Dr. Henry C. Taylor, farm chief of the federal bureau of agricultural economics, declared here today.

Dr. Taylor, now connected with the institute for research in land economics and public utilities at Northwestern University, Evanston, concluded the program of the 30th annual farmers' week at the University of Illinois with an address on "Agricultural Bunkpress and the Tariff."

Relieve Pressure.

"The only possible way to relieve the pressure now cramping the country's agricultural industry is through a readjustment of price ratios," Dr. Taylor declared. "This readjustment, in turn, can be brought about largely either by redncing the tariff on city products or by making them more effective on farm products of which a surplus is produced in the United States."

Price Fixing.

Dr. Taylor charged that tariff rates have become a method of arbitrary price fixing which for the time being enrich the non-agricultural population at the expense of agriculture. This price fixing for the city industries is the basic reason for the present inequitable distribution of wealth in the United States, he declared.

Nationalist Government Declares Repudiation of Imperialist Loans

HANKOW.— After a consideration by the political department of the Kuomintang as to the nature of the various loans made in the last fifteen years of the existence of the Chinese republic, the announcement was made that, except for the reorganization loan of 1913 and a small number of others, all the loans made in the last fifteen years will be repudiated by the Canton government as money spent for the prolonging of the internal wars in China.

Ignorance of Rights and Victimization by Lawyers and Doctors Robs Workers of Just Compensation in Industrial Injuries

(The DAILY WORKER, thru the Federated Press has arranged with Attorney William H. Seed, a specialist in his field, to write a series of articles on workmen compensation. Seed, who has handled the compensation work of two of the largest insurance companies for a number of years, advocates no new legislation, but shows how much more the average injured worker could obtain as compensation under existing law than he now receives.)

By WILLIAM H. SEED,
Federated Press.

IT is bad enough to suffer industrial injury, but worse to lose the full legal compensation for it. Yet this generally happens. The full compensation permitted under the law rarely goes to the injured worker.

Ignorance of his rights, fear of victimization and lack of money to enforce his rights are the chief causes. Under the workman compensation laws hundreds of thousands of dollars are continually lost to injured workers and their dependents from these causes and also from the large and often illegitimate charges made by attorneys and "adjusters for the injured." These often pocket a third to a half of the compensation award in cases where, if he only knew it, the injured man could get without cost all that any lawyer can get for him. He need merely ask for it.

Charge What Traffic Will Bear.

The theory of all the compensation laws is that the rights of the injured shall be so clearly stated, and the machinery for administering the law so simple, that lawyers are unnecessary. It is true that in all disputed cases legal assistance is necessary, and in many other cases a word of legal advice may save a great deal of money and worry.

In many states the industrial board decides the amount of attorney fees, but in Illinois and many other jurisdictions nothing is said about it by the board unless the applicant for compensation complains. In practice the attorney charges just what he likes. Many attorneys have their clients sign agreements allowing them attorney fees of 33 per cent, and even serve notice of lien on the employer or insurance company for that amount.

All this is the merest bluff. In Illinois and most other states no lien will lie against a compensation award. But few injured employes know this, and even if they are dissatisfied they believe they must pay according to agreement.

Medics Take Thairs, Too.

Lawyers practically always take compensation cases on a contingent fee basis; that is to say, their fees are in proportion to what the case produces, and if the claimant gets nothing the lawyer gets nothing. Also there are no court costs. It would therefore appear at first sight that lack of money should not hinder a man from getting his legal rights.

Medical charges, however, prove an insurmountable obstacle for too many cases. The worker may be faced by the unlimited ability of a wealthy corporation to pay for high-priced medical experts to whose examination he is compelled to submit. If he cannot produce a fairly convincing array of competent medical opinion on his side he cannot establish his case.

In one case five doctors, hired by one of the biggest manufacturing concerns in the world, are prepared to swear that the workman in question is either imaginary, or that he did not get it as the result of an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment. A good nerve specialist has examined the worker and reports recoverable injury, but he wants $10 for his examination and another $15 for X-rays, and yet another $10 for appearing before the board to testify. This is an actual case.

The man is penniless, has a family dependent on him and is totally disabled. Medical men do not proceed in these matters on a contingent fee basis. It is perfectly possible that this man will get nothing because he cannot pay the doctor.

Where Unions Can Help.

Labor organizations do a great deal to remedy these evils, but many officials of the smaller unions are not sufficiently informed to do all that could be done. The purpose of this series is to afford information, especially on points which, in the writer's experience, will be of most value to injured workers and their dependents, and to those whose duty is to advise them.

Philadelphia Mayor Called Before Senate in Vare Investigation

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—Subpoenas have been issued for Mayor Kendrick and five members of the Philadelphia registration commission to testify before the Reed election investigation committee on the corruption that featured the election of William S. Vare to the senate last November.

At the same time, David S. Barry, sergeant-at-arms of the senate, has impounded all the ballots in this district and placed the boxes under seal in locked rooms of the city hall, where they will wait until shipped to Washington.

"Irregularities" in ballot boxes were discovered when officers impounded the ballots in Pittsburgh, according to reports here. In one district of the fourth ward a box is missing, and in another district the ballot box was found concealed in a padlocked room in a school house, the containers empty.

CITY WILL SPEND THIRTY MILLION MORE THIS YEAR

Council Appropriates $213,000,000 for '27

Chicago's city government bill for 1927 will amount to nearly $30,000,000 more than in 1926, according to the appropriation bill passed by the city council. The total expenditures outlined for 1927 by the council is $213,369,340. In 1926 the appropriation was $183,487,818.

Police Get Raise.

The bill includes a raise in wages for city police and firemen, which provision caused the most debate in the council. An increase of $200 for policemen of all ranks is provided. Thus patrolmen who now receive $2,200 a year will receive $2,400. Firemen are given the same increase.

The appropriations are: Corporation fund, $55,306,645; water works, $17,697,9131 public schools, $15,500,000; bond projects, $33,666,1321 street repairs, $4,856,478; for subways, $2,000,000; sinking fund interest, $12,155,178; public library, $2,008,000; police pension, $2,466,000; fire pension, $864,000; special deposits, $424,000; unclaimed rebates, $66,503.

"Special" Funds.

Some of the "special" appropriations include $2,500 for a publicity agent for Health Commissioner Rundoseu; $217,000 for the local transportation committee; the railway termination committee, $59,750.

It will be given at the Lenin memorial meeting here on Jan. 23, at Moose Hall, 1001 Chester street. # The Daily Worker Hails the Struggle to Establish the Greek Daily, Empros

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

ONE of the most effective proofs of the vitality of the American Communist movement is the growing influence of its press.

It was no accident that the first English-language Communist daily in the world—The DAILY WORKER—first made its appearance in this country, it came as a direct response to the mounting demand of revolutionary labor in this country for an organ thru which to speak its demands, to voice its program, to help lead its fight.

It is also no accident that vigorous support to maintain The DAILY WORKER comes from foreign-born workers. These constitute the great majority in the basic industries. They are the most militant in the American class struggle. They took the lead of an English-language monthplace thru which to unify the struggle of all toilers who constitute the American working class, native as well as foreign-born. They realize this weapon is necessary to reach the English-speaking workers.

It is during this period, however, of restricted immigration, when capitalist publications in foreign languages are melting away, owing to the partial stoppage of the once great influx of new readers from foreign lands, that the foreign-born revolutionary workers show their strength and influence among the masses by building their own foreign-language press, instead of being forced to curtail their efforts.

The employers value their foreign-language capitalist press, and exert tremendous efforts to broaden its influence among workers speaking some alien tongue. Labor must also have its press in foreign languages to combat this influence. The Communist movement meets this necessity with daily publications in Hungarian, Finnish, Russian, Lithuanian, South Slavic, Czecho-Slovak, and Finnish, with weeklies and monthlies in many other languages, including Russian, Polish, Greek, Lettish and Italian.

Because they are Communist publications, striving to give voice to the daily struggles of labor in this country, these foreign-language dailies and weeklies gradually develop a mass support. If they did not, they would not be performing their functions as Communist organs.

It is because the Empros, the Greek weekly, has been extraordinarily successful in developing a growing influence among Greek workers in this country that it is possible to give enthusiastic greeting and support to the campaign now being carried on to establish The Daily Empros.

From the Greek revolutionary workers in the steel, coal, food, textile and needle industries there has come the demand for "The Daily." The present campaign to raise funds to make "The Greek Daily" possible is the response to this demand.

The Greek workers have long established themselves as a militant section of American labor. In the last great strike of the coal miners in the Rockefeller kaiserism of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, the Greek miners were among the best fighters. The same was also true in the steel strike. In the Passaic strike in New York City, the Greek workers proved a pillar of strength. This also holds for the food industry.

Entering thus into the daily struggles of the whole working class, it can be easily understood that the Greek workers refuse to be satisfied with a weekly. They want and need a "Daily."

It is estimated that the Greek population of the United States totals only 500,000. But this does not stand in the way where mass support is won. There are three Finnish-language Communist dailies in the United States, yet the Finnish population is estimated at the same number.

It is proposed to establish the Daily Empros in New York City, altho the weekly is now being issued from Chicago. The DAILY WORKER moves from Chicago to New York City fully confident that its co-worker in the Greek language will soon be with it in the nation's metropolis waging the common struggles for the winning of the whole American working class against the dominant capitalism.

Hail! The daily Empros! Hail and other champion of labor's struggle for All Power! Hail this latest indication of growth in the ranks of the Social Revolution!

Chicago Workers to Gather for Third Time to Pay Tribute to Nicolai Lenin

When the workers of Chicago gathar at Ashland Auditorium on Sunday, January 23, it will be the third time they have met to commemorate the memory of Nicolai Lenin, the great leader and teacher of the revolutionary workers the world over. It was on January 23, 1924, that Lenin passed away and deprived the workers and peasants of Russia of the guiding hand that had directed the revolution to success and to its consolidation into the Soviet state, now in its ninth year.

Prepare for 5,000.

Both previous memorials in Chicago have been worthy tributes to the memory of the revered leader. The Workers (Communist) Party that has inspired the memorials is planning for quite as notable a gathering this year. Ashland Auditorium seats five thousand people. The program is large and varied.

Last year the attendance at the Chicago Lenin meeting filled the auditorium. This year, expecting an equally large attendance, while the Coliseum could not be had, additional halls are being provided.

Revolutionary Program.

A revolutionary musical program will be rendered, including the Freiheit Singing Society and a new feature, a mass recitation of Michael Gold's splendid play, "Strike." About forty-five persons are participating in this mass recital and to Chicago workers it will represent something never heard of before with a true mass character fitting the occasion of a Lenin memorial—a true portrayal of the mass struggles of the workers.

Max Bedacht, Max Shachtman and a young Pioneer will be the speakers. Tickets are sold at 19 S. Lincoln St.; The Daily Worker, 1113 W. Washington Blvd.; Vilnis, 3116 S. Halsted St.; South Slavic Book Store, 1906 S. Racine Ave.; Freiheit office, 3209 W. Roosevelt Rd.; at the Workers' Home, 1902 W. Division St., and many other places.

Teachers' Federation Hits McAndrews' Plan for "Raising" Wages

The Chicago Women Teachers' Federation has attacked Supt. William McAndrews' recent proposal for wage increases for public school instructors, which is contingent on getting more money for school funds, declaring his plan discriminates against teachers. Principals would get an increase of $1,200 a year, while the teachers would receive only $120, the federation points out.

The attack came when the principal's club petitioned for an increase—the same club that recently declared the city's funds were so depleted no increases could be granted. The federation, which started investigation to show there was a surplus instead of a deficit, brands the principals' action as "superlative gall," in view of their former stand.

DE LA HUERTA SEEKS SUPPORT IN LOS ANGELES

Hopes to Cross Border and Aid Catholics

By WM. SCHNEIDERMAN.
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 21.—Adolfo de la Huerta, former president of Mexico, is marking time in Los Angeles, awaiting the word to cross the Mexican border and take charge of the counter-revolutionary bands whose sporadic outbreaks have harassed the Mexican federal army within the last few weeks. He is using Los Angeles newspapers to spread his propaganda for the overthrow of the Calles-Obregon government, and declares his interests in Mexico if he becomes president by a coup d'etat. This is interpreted as a bid for support of American imperialists to finance a counter-revolution and establish reactionary forces at the head of the Mexican government once more.

Los Angeles is Headquarters.

Los Angeles, because of its proximity to the Mexican border, has become the headquarters of all foes of the Calles regime. Immediately after the outbreak of the recent religious controversy in Mexico, the Knights of Columbus, the American representatives of the catholic church, arranged a huge meeting in the Shrine Auditorium as a part of a campaign to raise a million dollar fund to fight the laws against the church in the southern republic. Joseph Scott, attorney, in a speech at this meeting, openly urged all reactionary forces to unite in a combined effort to re-establish their rule in Mexico.

Read El Machete.

Los Angeles and San Diego were the bases from which General Estrada, former Mexican minister of war, and now on trial in this city for violation of the neutrality laws, attempted to cross the border with 125 men and arms and sales a border city on the other side of the line.

Few Mexican workers in this city have any sympathy for the counter-revolutionists. The Spanish-language newspapers published here support Calles and Obregon. The Mexican Communist paper, El Machete, is very popular here when obtainable. The most recent issue to arrive from Mexico City, 125 in number, was quickly sold in a few hours.

WOMEN PLEDGE AID TO PAPER BOX STRIKERS

Unionists Are Gaining in Strength

(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The paper box strikers' kitchen, where 1,500 strikers have their meals after picketing, will be kept supplied with money and food as long as the strike lasts. This was the decision of 44 delegates representing 23 organizations who attended a conference of women's organizations to help the paper box strikers.

To Have Collection Boxes.

In addition to pledges of cash at the conference many delegates arranged to have collection boxes placed in stores patronized by women. Resolutions were passed calling on all women's organizations to unite in their work of aiding the paper box strikers. A permanent committee, with one delegate from each unit, was elected. Mrs. N. L. Segal was elected permanent secretary.

An opportunity to help and to have a good time, too, is being offered all the friends of the strikers thru a concert and dance which the union has arranged for Friday, Feb. 11, at the New Star Casino, 107th street and Lexington Ave.

Strikers' Ranks Firm.

The fifteenth week of the strike saw an increase in the number of strikers. Strikebreakers from four shops, where the employers had footed them into thinking the strike was over, saw the light, and came down to the union mass meeting.

Nothing but physical collapse can prevent the union from winning this strike now that the workers have shown their ability to stay out fifteen weeks, without relief the first two weeks and only what the other unions sent now to keep their wives and families from starvation. Fortunately contributions are coming in. The Carpenters' Union, Local 169, sent $25.00 and the Suit Case and Bag Makers' Union sent the third check of $100.

Business Agent of Shoe Workers Talks Class Collaboration

By a Worker Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 21.—Archie Lawrence, business agent for the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union of St. Louis, says that a union should be run on "business principles." "Unions should take a larger interest in the manufacturer's problems in the way of co-operation in cutting down manufacturing costs and turning out a greater output," he continued with his line of class collaboration. "Only thru this will the workers receive higher wages," he said.

He says that he and the chamber of commerce work together in reference to civic problems of the city.

NEGRO MINISTERS HIT WALL ST. IMPERIALISM

In the name of its 30,000 adherents as represented by 175 ministers, the Pittsburgh Baptist Ministers' Union, an organization of colored Baptist ministers, sent a unanimous resolution to Senator Reed declaring against the war policy of the American government in regard to Nicaragua and Mexico and demanding that "the conflict be averted."

The Pennsylvania Guard, closely representing the sentiments of the members of the union, has a strong editorial in a recent issue exposing the true character of the Mexico and Nicaragua affairs as results of the aggressions of American capital and calling upon the people to protest against being used as cannon fodder and tools by Wall Street for its own gains.

Cook County G. O. P. Torn by Inner Fights and Voters Get "Inside" on Many Deals

Factional squabbles in the Cook county republican organization are resulting in vicious attacks on leaders in the party. Present pyrotechnics are centering around the office of the state's attorney. Attorney General Brundage has bitterly flayed State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe and his administration. Brundage declares that Crowe was in league with the underworld gunmen and sluggers and used them in the last election to gain his own ends. Crowe is a political "boss," he said. "The feeling of the thoughtful voters is that a public prosecutor cannot be a political boss without slighting his office duties.

Miscounted Votes.

"The use of sluggers and gunmen at the republican primaries, the utter disregard of the voters' intentions by willful miscount of votes and by bi-partisan deals, whereby republicans are betrayed by those who assume leadership, have produced conditions that demand a change," he said.

Crowe has retorted declaring that Brundage is a political merchant who will sell his wares to anyone."

"He complains of bi-partisanship, but didn't mention that he drew $13,000 a year from the sanitary district as the result of a bi-partisan deal," Crowe continued. "He objects to me now, but I was alright as long as I maintained members of his family in lucrative positions on the payroll."

And thus the battle goes on, while the voters are getting inside dope on both sides.

The Chicago Negro Mir worker correspondents are meeting secretly, preparing something for Sunday, March 13. They refuse to explain anything. The only thing they admit is that Mirror Hall was rented for that day.

Central Council of Paterson Will Give Passaic Strike Aid

By a Worker Correspondent.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 21.—Passaic featured the last meeting of the Central Labor council here. One of the active strikers came up from Passaic and made an appeal to the council to start a bazaar in the city for relief of the strikers.

A committee was appointed to report immediately, and the significant thing is that the committee was given power to act.

A motion was passed asking all delegates to make appeals to their unions for subscriptions from union treasuries and for "pot" collections.

The United Mine Workers' Convention Will Have a Decisive Effect on the Course of the American Labor Movement.

No union in the United States faces more urgent problems, involving its own continued existence and effectiveness, and having important consequences for the whole working class, than does the United Mine Workers of America, whose thirtieth international convention open its sessions in Indianapolis, Tuesday, Jan. 25.

Since the signing of the Jacksonville agreement in the spring of 1924, the coal barons have carried on an offensive against this organization. In many if not most of the districts of the union the wages and working conditions stipulated in the agreement have been disregarded by the operators. Where the Jacksonville scale has not been violated formally the operators have closed their mines for long periods, allowed the markets to be flooded from the south ern non-union fields and have forced unemployment for as long as two years. In some instances, upon the miners.

Coupled with this unemploym ·nt has been a systematic attack on working conditions and the inauguration of speed-up systems.

Developments of non-union coal production has increased until experts estimate that today between 65 and 70 per cent of all coal is mined under non-union conditions. The union fields—the central competitive field so-called, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana and western Pennsylvania—have been strangled by non-union fields—West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky and part of Pennsylvania itself—as an important part of the campaign against the union.

As an appendix to the Jacksonville agreement, there was the understanding between President John L. Lewis and the coal operators that some 200,000 miners were to be starved out of the industry in order to "normalize" it. The offensive of the operators against the union has been aided greatly by this understanding, amounting in practice to tacit approval of mass unemployment among the union membership.

This united front with the coal barons has been followed up by a continuous attack against the most active elements of the union who opposed this policy.

No serious effort has been made to organize the non-union fields and the union now, in spite of the recent increase in demand for coal due to the shortage caused by the British strike, faces the expiration of the Jacksonville agreement in a badly weakened condition.

Instead of growing, the union has lost 200,000 members in the last two and one-half years.

The agreement expires this spring and the attitude of the coal barons is shown by their announcement, following a meeting of operators from Illinois, Ohio and Indiana in Cleveland recently, that they intend to demand a 15 to 20 per cent reduction in the wage scale together with certain efficiency provisions.

Coal is being stored in enormous quantities in preparation for a strike in the spring and with the non-union fields at top production, the operators believe that they can defeat the United Mine Workers.

Upon the speedy organization of the non-union fields the life of the U. M. W. of A., the largest union in America, depends.

The recent election in the union was fought out around three main slogans—organization of the non-union fields, abolition of operators' influence in the union and nationalization of the mines, which with a number of other important demands were crystallized into the slogan, "Save the Union."

As in the election two years ago, the Lewis machine has not made public a tabulated list of the vote altho it claims re-election. The head of the "Save the Union" ticket, John Brophy, is given something like 85,000 votes by the machine while it claims some 200,000. As a matter of fact there are not as many members in the union as the total vote claimed and it is certain that Brophy defeated Lewis in actual votes cast.

The "red scare" will be the stock in trade of the Lewis machine at the convention. By denouncing the Communists, Lewis will try to distract attention from such things as the loss of 200,000 members, the betrayal of the strikers in western Pennsylvania, the failure to organize decisive non-union territories, the exclusion of Alex Howat and other militant miners, election crookedness and other crimes of the reactionary and incompetent administration.

The rank and file opposition which is fighting for the "Save the Union" program will answer the demagogy of Lewis and his agents with a demand for an account of his management of the union, a tabulated list of the vote and insistence upon an energetic organization campaign in preparation for the expiration of the agreement.

The struggle for militant unionism at Indianapolis will be a real test for the left wing bloc in the miners' union. They bear the responsibility for saving the union and they must at all cost continue to fight for their correct program with ranks unbroken.

The miners' convention is always of great importance for the American labor movement, but this year, because of the crisis in the industry and the union, it will more than ever have decisive influence on the struggles of the American workers.

Under no circumstances, and in spite of the provocation and corruption of the union leadership, must a split be allowed to take place. The left wing has a great task to carry out in preventing the discouragement created by the reaction and incompetency of the Lewis machine developing into a secession movement which would be welcomed by the coal barons and the capitalists generally.

"Save the Union" will be the battle cry of the militant spokesmen of the rank and file at Indianapolis.

PERU DENOUNCES KELLOGG'S PLAN FOR TACNA-ARICA

"Would Mean Sale of Countrymen"—Leguia

LIMA, Peru, Jan. 21. — Secretary Kellogg's proposal for settlement of the Tacna-Arica question between Peru and Chile by sale of the disputed territory to Bolivia is branded as an attempt to force the Peruvian government to sell its countrymen into bondage.

Can't Sell Our People.

In a statement explaining his reasons for refusing the American secretary of state's proposal, President Leguia said: "I cannot sell my countrymen into bondage. It may be said that the Peruvian inhabitants of Tacna-Arica have been in bondage for forty years, and we have never ceased in the long, weary struggle for their liberation. Nor can I treat the soil of my country, the lives and destinies of my fellow countrymen as so much merchandise to be bargained, to be bought and sold."

GALA BAZAAR IS TO BE HELD ON FEB. 25, 26, 27

Auditorium Hall Scene of Colorful Carnival

Great interest and enthusiasm is being aroused in labor circles in the city about the $10,000 Workers' Carnival Bazaar which is to be held here on February 25, 26, and 27 for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER and the Jewish Daily Freiheit at the large Ashland Auditorium Hall, Ashland and Van Buren.

Committees and scores of comrades are hard at work to put over this unique affair and from preliminary reports it is certain that the hall will be filled with a gay, jolly crowd during the three days of the duration of the bazaar. Sympathetic labor organizations are showing their interest and friendliness when approached. Dozens of workers are busily engaged in obtaining articles to be displayed for sale in the booths which will be located on all sides of the hall. Women workers are busy with the making of various bits of needlecraft handiwork which will be shown separately and also offered for sale. Mrs. William Montgomery Brown, wife of the famous "heretic bishop," has become interested in the success of the bazaar, and has written the committee here offering her services in sending some of her needle work to be sold at the bell.

Prizes Offered.

Valuable and tempting prizes are being offered, which will be an additional inducement to the thousands who will pass into the hall during the three days of hilarity and jollifness. The main prize will be a brand new Chrysler sedan, a beautiful family or sport car which retails at more than $1,000. Every purchaser of a ticket to the bazaar has an equal chance of winning this prize. The second prize, an expensive radio set which can get stations in all parts of the country, will also fall to some lucky individual. Numerous other prizes, ranging downwards to gold watches and ladies' pendants, are also being offered.

A peppy jazz orchestra will play dancing music all during the evenings of the three days, and the colorfully decorated hall will be constantly filled with hundreds of dancing couples who will throw aside their cares for the while and enjoy themselves for the benefit of working class institutions as well as for their own benefit. The committee in charge has announced that one-third of the net proceeds of the bazaar will be donated to the national office of International Labor Defense for its work among the class war prisoners and defendants.

Children's Nursery Corner.

One corner of the hall which will surely attract the attention of hundreds who come to the affair will be given over to a workers' children's nursery. Here can be placed the children whom mother brings along to the bazaar with the knowledge that they are in full safety and enjoying themselves along with the rest. Scores of toys will be on hand for the kiddies to play with, and a trained nurse will be in charge with a number of capable assistants. Demonstrations of what a working class mother can do to attend efficiently to the children will be given during the course of the bazaar.

Friends and sympathizers are urgently requested to donate articles to the bazaar and to secure from friendly merchants all possible donations of articles of wear, furniture, and so forth. The committee in charge of the bazaar is located at 19 S. Lincoln street, Chicago, Ill.

Correcting a Printer's Error in "Preparing War Against Japan"

The DAILY WORKER wishes to correct a regrettable typographical error in the article by Ellis Peterson, entitled "Preparing War Against Japan," published Jan. 19.

The sentence, part of which reads: "The Philippines, the Gibraltar of the Pacific," should read: "The Philippines, a gun against Japan and Hawaii, the Gibraltar of the Pacific." This correct version is designed to stress the importance of Hawaii compared with Philippines, we are informed in a letter from the author, Comrade Peterson.

The men have arrived from Washington in answer to subpoenas. The trial is scheduled for Feb. 2.

WEST VIRGINIA MINERS STRIKE AGAINST CUTS

Non-Union Coaldiggers Fight 1917 Scale

By ROMA
(Worker Correspondent)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., January 21. — Workers at two local non-union mines, employing several hundred miners, have gone on on strike as a result of an effort on the part of the coal company to reduce the wages from the Jacksonville agreement back to the 1917 scale.

Both of the mines, one located at Glendale, and known as the Glendale Mine, and the other located at Mondsville, known as the Final Street Mine, are owned by the same interests, the Glendale Gas & Coal company.

It may be remembered that during November, because of large exports of coal abroad and into other areas effected by strikes, the northern panhendle of this state, which is practically all non-union, was granted an increase in wages, without solicitation on the part of the miners.

Lost 1925 Strike.

Previous to this, the miners having lost a strike against a wage reduction in April, 1925, were paid according to the 1917 scale. This increase in November brought their wages on a par with the Jacksonville agreement. However, on Jan. 15, the Glendale Gas & Coal company announced that it was reducing the wages of both mines back to the 1917 scale; whereupon all of the miners walked out.

Several of the mines in this vicinity are already working at the 1917 scale, namely: Panama, McKeefrey, Crespaps, and Woodland.

RUSH MORE U. S. BATTLESHIPS TO CHINESE WATERS

Canton Minister Issues Statement of Aims

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.— It has been learned here that when the Pacific fleet sails out of San Diego today, presumably for maneuvers, that a number of the warships will be given secret orders to proceed to Chinese waters. This information follows closely upon receipt here of a fevered request from Admiral Williams, now in Shanghai.

Troops have been ordered to make ready in the Philippines for transportation to China. Reports from London say that a battalion of 1,000 troops is embarking at Chatham for China and that a new cruiser squadron has been ordered to join the already large British fleet in the Yangtze River delta.

France Lends Aid.

From Paris comes word that France, thru foreign Minister Briand, has given Great Britain assurances of French co-operation in what will undoubtedly resolve itself into an all-power offensive against the nationalist movement.

Chen States Aims.

LONDON, Jan. 21.— Eugene Chen, young foreign minister of the Kuomintang government, has cabled to London a message stating the nationalists' aims in China.

"In reply to the question as to what the powers should do to insure smooth resumption of international relations," Chen says, "the British were first to subject China to political and economic domination of the west. This was the work of the opium wars in which the British defeated China and imposed a system of invisible conquest in the form of a regime of international control known as the reign of superfallen.

"The typical features of this regime are expressed in British controlled customs, extra-territoriality, alien administered settlements, the concession conception and other limitations on Chinese sovereignty contained in the general body of unequal treaties."

Half Million Women Are Wage Earners in Illinois, U. S. Reports

More than a half million women are wage earners in the state of Illinois, according to a bulletin issued by the United States department of labor. About one-fourth of this number are employed in manufacturing and mechanical industries, the report says, while half of the number are employed as clerks or in domestic and personal service.

Nearly 60 per cent of the total are employed in the city of Chicago. Illinois, says the bulletin, has the third largest number of women gainfully employed of any state in the union.

The Story of Trinity Corporation

...LL marry a black man and in that way get my divorce from the husband you chose for me!"

If Anneko Webber had not uttered those defiant words some three centuries ago, her father, Wolfert Webber, Holland's famous merchant king, would not have found it necessary to leave his personal fortune of twenty million pounds "to the seventh generation of Webber heirs," a certain Protestant church in New York would not have found it necessary to "starve" for religious purposes the major portion of the trust fund, then in the hands of the government of Holland, and last but by no means least, a large number of Webber descendants, all members of the great Caucasian race, would not now be placed in difficult obstacles in the path of settlement of a century old Trinity Corporation dispute because it was that the story of the famous Dutch princess' marriage would lower the par value of their stock on the social market.

The foregoing paragraph, briefly, is the whole why and wherefore of the mystery underlying the rather complicated question of Trinity Corporation's bitter quarrel to retain the vast property interests in the most valuable section of the city of New York. The church, in so far as its own interest in the matter was concerned, would long ago have cleared itself of whatever blame attached to its stewardship of the fabulously rich holdings in the very heart of the world's richest city. But for certain powerful descendants of the Webber family, a number of whom are registered in the Royal Blue Book of Great Britain, and who stood in mortal dread lest the memory of Anneke's marriage to a black man should bring disgrace upon their heads, Trinity's holdings, now known to have originated with funds obtained from Wolfert Webber's strange bequest, would have returned to the Holland government, the original trustee.

The world would not now know the true facts of this absorbing story but for one man, William Webber Easton, a direct descendant of Webber, by a marriage consequent to the black man incident, who gave four years of painstaking study as his contribution to an amicable settlement of the case. One of the strange discoveries made by Easton in the course of his researches was that the Edwards-Jana group of litigants have no claim upon the Trinity property, Edwards having been merely a captain of a merchant ship that belonged to Webber and the Jana claim resting on no more secure foundation than that their sire was associated in a small way with Holland's merchant prince.

Only recently, after marshalling all the facts that he gained from his investigations and proving by his knowledge of the case that the best course for Trinity Corporation lay in the settlement of the old dispute, did Easton dare to confide any of the intimate details of his findings to outsiders.

"It was luck almost from the very beginning that I did, as my course," Easton explains. "What I gained after his share of a six billion dollar fortune—that's what Trinity Corporation is worth today—is mostly expect too much. In my case I feel the rare good fortune to be in on the ground floor, my mother was a Webber—but even then four years passed before I had assembled all the facts that had been a deep mystery.

"First has the fact of Anneke's black marriage been suppressed so long—it all happened in the six-teenth century? Why has its suppression brought wealth and power to scores of nndeserving persons? Well, for one thing, foolish pride. Many Webbers and members of the English and Dutch nobility and gentry kept the fact secret as an alternative to social disgrace—a sort of zigger-in the wood pile.

"It was a romantic search and not without its danger. If the fall story of Trinity Corporation's desire of its fortune is ever made known it will contain many chapters of stark tragedy. Men engaged the task of penetrating the cloud of mystery have been known to fall swallowed by the sea and as I learned of these things I confess that I was uneasy more than one occasion.

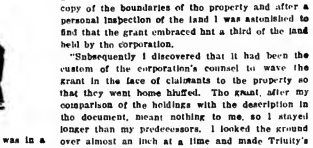
"When one tampers with facts that may result in the ruin for some old world aristocrat, it is best to look under the bed before retiring at night. My quest led me to some out of the way places where it would have been the easiest thing in the world to end an obscure person like myself, not merely of his life but of his will, and I had to think twice before speaking with suspicious strangers.

"I want to say at the outset that the so-called Edwards-Jana faction seeking control of Trinity's holdings have not the remotest legal claims to the property. It is all Webber wealth founded with Wolfert Webber's money and left with the Dutch government as trustee as a legacy to the heirs in the seventh generation when the blood shall run clean.'

"Webber, canny as a Scot, schemed in vain and really plan to leave his wealth just beyond reach of his daughter's hand went for naught. Anneke, who was easily a match for her father in wits, succeeded in getting a part of the estate.

"My interest in the Trinity litigation was roused by a chance incident. For many decades there existed a tradition in my family that some day its members would become wealthy. Often my mother, Emily Webber, was 19, her grandfather, a native of Devonshire, England, told her that if she married the Webber name must always remain in the family.

"It did not occur to any of our relatives, that the tradition of 'money in the family' involved the claim to an estate of six billion dollars in the heart of New York City and until 1922 after I had married and had reared a family I did not realize the full import of my ancestor's words.



"On the morning of August 29, 1922, I was in a restaurant in Winnipeg and while waiting for my portion of bacon and eggs glanced at the morning paper. My eye was caught by a statement about the Dutch government being asked to decide between claimants of a two million dollar estate left to the descendants in the seventh generation of Wolfert Webber. The name 'Webber' at once intrigued my notice and I telegraphed my mother in Toronto asking if we were of the same family.

"My mother's answer was: 'Wolfert Webber was our ancestor.' From that moment I was as if bound by a spell and I felt that I must learn more about the case than the meager tradition left by my mother's grandfather.

"I went almost at once to the Dutch consul and through him commnficated with the Dutch government and asked if they had any further information. The news item had pointed out that the money in question had accrued from Webber's estate in the Dutch East Indies and that the wealth had been left in trust with the Dutch government.

"The Dutch government replied that a final settlement was issued in 1711. I was not satisfied with such a curt answer and after probing further got a letter in Dutch from the state department of Holland that the 'last definite statement was issued in 1711.' From 'definite' to 'final' was a great distance and I at once determined to conduct a thorough investigation.

"The Webbers, I learned, had left Holland and settled in England and I felt that if some of these could be communicated with I might learn if I had a legal claim to the estate of Wolfert Webber, held in trust by Holland. Accordingly I addressed myself to Somerset House, the registration bureau of records, deeds and land titles, enclosing fee to cover the cost of inquiry.

"My astonishment can well be imagined when my fee was returned together with the surprising statement that the government had no power to make the records public. The reply, however, pointedly intimated that upon personal application to England and upon submitting proof that I was the person I represented myself to be the records I sought might become available.

"A fortunate circumstance at this moment enabled me to make considerable progress in my investigation. My son, Arthur Webber Easton, then employed in Winnipeg, confided my expectations of wealth to a friend. The latter replied by declaring that his aunt, Mrs. W. H. Ward, was even then on her way to New York in search of some money left under conditions similar to the Webber provisions.

"Not wishing to let even a remote possibility of success slip by me, I met Mrs. Ward and found to my amazement that the New York estate and the Dutch legacy were identical. She said she had heard that distant parties to the suit were Webbers and upon further investigating this clew I was convinced that the much-disputed Trinity Corporation property and the Edwards-Jana claims, together with several other issues, were really one and the same thing. Later, of course, I learned that the Webbers alone were the legal heirs to all the property under discussion.

"I called a meating of all the Webber heirs and told before them what facts I had. They chose ma spokasman and sent me to New York to negotiate with the Trinity Corporation representatives.

In New York I got information that John Jacob O. Edwards had been found dead on the streets a year before. Papers found on his person proved he had come to the city to conduct investigations similar to mine. The coroner said he had died from heart failure. Well, maybe it was heart failure. When a fortune of six billion dollars is at stake one life more or less matters little. Nevertheless, it was a lesson in caution and I took it to heart that night. I determined not to die of heart failure.

"I went to a well known firm of lawyers for advice. They told me it was common knowledge that the Trinity Corporation had no title to the estate except a royal grant from Queen Anne. I got busy and got a chance to examine the grant. It was then in the hands of a firm of contractors, employed by the corporation for some work on the estate but who would not go on with the job unless they had the grant in their hands as security. I made a careful copy of the boundaries of the property and after a personal inspection of the land I was astonished to find that the grant embraced hnt a third of the land held by the corporation.

"Subsequently I discovered that it had been the custom of the corporation's counsel to wave the grant in the face of claimants to the property so that they went home bluffed. The grant, after my comparison of the holdings with the description in the document, meant nothing to me, so I stayed longer than my predecessors. I looked the ground over almost an inch at a time and made Trinity's attorneys uneasy. It is needless to say that every avenue of information was closed to me after this and after pursuing my inquiries as far as was possible I returned to Toronto, reporting my findings to a second meeting of the Webber heirs.

"My next step was to get positive proof of my descent from Webber. I wrote to Holland and England for information about the Webbers from their very beginning and the replies was a steel engraving, an autographed photograph of Lady Amande Webber, mother of Samuel Webber, my mother's great grandfather, born at Oakhampton, England, in 1788. Until the receipt of this picture we had been unable to learn of Samuel Webber's antecedents and with this picture in my hands I had positive proof of my descent from the old Dutch nobility. Lady Webber was descended from William Webber, brother of Wolfert Webber.

"Luck was with me in my investigations from this point forward. By rare good fortune I met an individual—Mr. Blank, I will call him—who presented me with a copy of the Webber family tree and I was able to verify my findings concerning my descent from Lady Adelaide Webber. Having so much information in my possession was not enough, for I wished to have positive corroboration from other independent sources before presenting myself again to the heads of Trinity Corporation.

"I therefore advertised in English papers for relatives and this act brought me to the climax of my search. It was a climax such as I would never have permitted my thoughts to contemplate even in a moment of romantic fancy and resulted also in a whirlwind change of attitude on the part of Trinity's representatives.

"Among the replies to my advertisement was a letter from the widow of a cousin, also a Webber, and after a brief correspondence I learned from her the whole secret underlying the Webber mystery. This relative it was who told me of the marriage of Anneke Webber to a black man. I quote from one of her letters: 'Anneke married a black—this is the whole trouble and the reason the money was left in such fashion.' Her father requested the money should not be inherited until the blood ran clean, which would be the seventh generation.'

"For proof of the story my cousin's widow has a tablet on which is engraved Wolfert's charge to the Dutch government relative to his fortune of twenty million pounds. Subsequently I learned the story in greater detail. Wolfert Webber, it seems, was anxious to consolidate his fortune in his East Indian possessions and hit on the scheme of marrying off his daughter to William Webber, a cousin and prominent shareholder in the company.

"Anneke, however, had ambitions of her own. Her uncle was William of Orange and she realized that by marrying outside of her rank would forfeit her claim to the English throne. Old Wolfert, her father, was obstinate and insisted that she become the wife of his cousin, the wealthy shareholder in the Dutch colonial ventures. So, to get her husband to divorce her, Anneke married a black servant of her father's while on a visit to the East Indies.

"Wolfert's rage upon receiving word of his daughter's act can well be imagined. Although fate intervened and removed both of Anneke's husbands

A PEEK EACH WEEK AT MOTION PICTURES

MAN BAIT

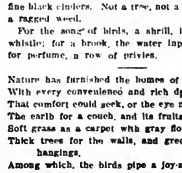
This has been done before under less man allur-ing titles. But never has it been done with Marie Prevost. That makes all the difference in the world —tho it may not make a picture you will write home about.

It is one of the light weight things that you will find in a story in the Saturday Evening Post. It has its virtues in these features; it allows provocating Marie Prevost to act a type she does to perfection—the saucy, independent, lean-take-care-of-myself type of girl who makes her own way in the world on her wits and a shape if she owns one. Marie has both—and looks—and real ability as an actress which we hope our directors will utilize to better effect. Unfortunately she is an excellent—and shapely—comedienne. So Marie Prevost is given pictures that will display only these two virtues.

In addition to the bathing suit scenes (in which she used to grace California beaches for Mack Sennett) she is a girl, who, losing her job in a department store "for smackin' a guy down for gettin' fresh," becomes a hostess earning a nickel a dance in a cheap hall "where guests come in on their good behavior and go out on the slightest provocation." If you know the "fairy tales for grown-up guys" they show in the movies, you can depend on it that she becomes a "lady" before it's all over. Oh, yes, she also gets a millionaire! In America this opportunity is presented to every girl, like the president's job is to every boy. It's a wonderful country, you tell 'em.



SALLY RAND

Sally Rapd, one of the promising young junior stars, plays the tempting Sheba to the tempted young Abdis played by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. The none of the personality nor ability of his father is evident, young Fairbanks Jr. will cast and does all the dumb part asks of him.

Marie Prevost gives as as much reality as possible to her characterization. It is splendidly done. Too well done, in fact, for so dumb a picture. If she ever gets a story that will give her half a chance she will rise to recognition as a star of first importance.

All in all, "Man Bait" is a lot of phooey. Not the worst kind, but bad enough. It's rather well done in spots, well photographed and as we mentioned—it has Marie Prevost. That's saying a lot.

TWINKLETOES

This is a saccharine pot of goo. It is a British version of Pollyanna coming a few years too late for this sophisticated age.

Colleen Moore, as Twinkletoes, scatters little rays of sunshine in the lower depths of the London Limehouse district in a story by Thomas Burke. And if this picture can be believed, what a helluva place the Limehouse district would be if it wasn't for our little Twinkletoes! Maybe there are people who can swallow this sticky stuff without gagging, but this reviewer is not one of them.

However, for fear of being accused of having only a hammer to qualify as a reviewer, we are glad to find something to praise in the picture. The praise is due for the photography occasionally flashed. The producers of this film-fam have learned enough from the German productions (see "Variety") to imitate with splendid results. Scenes photographed from various angles are so affective as to raise the film from absolute nonsense to occasional artistry. This is a welcomo note in American pictures, in justice to which it can be said there are hardly any so low as not to have something really worth while about them. If it isn't the story, it is the acting, the costumes, sets or photograph.

Telly Marshall, Kenneth Harlan and Gladys Brockwell take leading parts in support of Colleen Moore, who may be a good actress, but which could never be proven by this picture.

The story—despite supposed realism—is so far removed from real life, so sweetly presented, it will be tough to swallow for even the most gullible. The directing is as sugar-coated as the story and the combination is something awful. Outside of photography—what a lollypop this one turned out to be!

With the Authors

H. G. WEISS, Box Maple and Sylvan, Oakland, Cal. "Lysistrata. The Future of Women, or Women and the Future," by Ludovici, K. P. Dutton and Company, publishers, is a very interesting little book to read—and rather funny in spots. Whatever humor there is in the book, however, is totally unconscious humor, as Ludovici is writing in dead earnest and doesn't realize how funny he sounds at times. If all stanners down to the fact that he evidently has what that Freudians would call a sex complex. Not because he writes about sex, you understand, but because he gets so hot up about it. Note how naively he assumes his women would lose interest in life without the sex emotion to sustain them. This is partly, I believe, because Ludovici sees too much store on an animal enjoyment of sex and is afraid of losing it. This reviewer remembers talking to a working stiff one night at Leighton's Cafeteria, Oakland, about the evolution of the machine, and what part the machine might play in freeing women from the bearing of children. Instead of being intrigued by the possibilities lying in eotogenesis, the working gent got excited and abusive, declaring that "no contraption like that was gonna come between him and his wife." It is amusing to find, in more learned and veiled language, Ludovici expressing the same fear as the ignorant working stiff.

The author of "Lysistrata" seems to be conscious that women are going somewhere, and, with the help of an incubator, may get there. And that isn't half the grief, Oscar. Tha he-man won't be with them when they arrive. You can imagine what a shock such a thing would be to Ludovici who visualizes himself as the he-men. So in revenge he brings his book women to inevitable boredom and suicide as an awful warning to real wives and mothers to stay contented with their lot—to say nothing of the he-men.

The fear that the female of the species may get somewhere without him affects Ludovici's reasoning to such an extent that he forgets to be logical. To say that women, evolved thru science to the extent he imagines, would commit suicide because of sex frustration is not straight thinking by any means.

Do we contemplate suicide today because, let us say, we no longer enjoy the sex act as keenly as did our remote ancestors? Do we think life not worth the living because we miss to the full the savage thrill of crunching a pulsing throat beneath our teeth, because we no longer savor the spurting blood of the kill with all the abandonment of an animal? The mere thought is absurd. What constitutes enjoyment has changed. If a male today were to conduct himself in the sex relation as a caveman did he would be locked up in a penitentiary or an asylum. Compared to the average man he would be a freak. Yet the average man enjoys the sex act to the extent of his capacity. He does not, for instance, feel an intense longing to react emotionally as would a Neanderthal man. The real truth of the matter is that he would never miss what he, individually, had never possessed. While certain impulses might persist and manifest themselves in a thousand vagne ways, they would not be enough to color his conscious thinking, and certainly not enough to drive him to suicide. As for missing the thrill of crunching on a pulsing throat, or the exquisite enjoyment of savoring spurting blood, all I have to say is that the average person finds the mere thought of such things disgusting. Except for a few faddists, most of us want our meat cooked; and there is a growing army of vegetarians—enough to cause widespread advertisement on the part of the meat trust—who consider dead flesh not repulsive to eat at all.

Ludovici may think he has come back at this argument in the fact that the time distance separating a cave-man and an aerial from the men of today is immensely greater than the period of time he allots for the changes to take place in the women of whom he writes. But this only shows again that Ludovici is not a clear thinker. Because science has speeded up the change and does in a hundred or two years what it took natural means to accomplish in a hundred thousand, does not imply that the change is less drastic or thorough. If Ludovici's women had evolved to the point where they had ceased to function sexually, and if this condition were universal and had lasted long enough; that is, we will say, for several generations or until the condition had become a matter of course; then by no process of logic could they be made to commit self-destruction for lack of something they had never personally experienced and could but in the vaguest manner visualize.

Ludovici commits another blunder. He makes no allowance for the terrible beboerik. All the changes he visualizes take place under a profit system. There isn't any revolution. Which, of course, is absurd, and shows that when he leaves his particular field of applied science to speculate on social changes, he doesn't know what he's talking about. What the proletarian revolution will do about upsetting his speculations as to the future of women isn't the half of it, dearie. Biff and all, the book is worth reading and has quite a kick to it. One should read Mrs. Russell's reply to Mr. Ludovici anent love making via physical contacts and have a good time all around. In the meantime the women are on their way and Mr. Ludovici has my condolences.

THE COMPANY STREET

By EVELEN ALLEN

LONG, dull, monotonous lines of company houses!
Low, small, without conveniences and comfortless; built along a stretch of barren yellow clay or fine black cinders. Not a tree, not a flower; scarcely a ragged weed.

For the song of birds, a shrill, insistent factory whistle; for a brook, the water lap at the corner; for perfume, a row of privies.

Nature has furnished the homes of her workers
With every convenience and rich decoration
That comfort could seek, or the eye might delight in:
The earth for a couch, and its fruits for a banquet;
Soft grass as a carpet with gray floral pattern;
Thick trees for the walls, and green vines as the hangings.

Among which, the birds pipe a joy-song to freedom.
With ehandeliered sun, moon and stars for its lighting.

But Man—when he houses his hard-working servants,
Builds huts and dark hovels in unsightly places.
Within, is discomfort; without, all is dreary:
The street is a tread-mill for weary feet walking;
Gaunt hunger and poverty stalk through the doorways,
While crimes and disease come crawling, comn creeping:

Yet hear the Man brag—"I am the supreme one!
I, the intelligent; I, the artistic!"

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT THAT?

We wanted to know what happened to our clever Grand Rapids Pioneers when all of a sudden and without warning—BLOOEY—in came a batch of the dandiest things. So we make this issue in honor of those clever Grand Rapids Tiny Workers.

WELL, MAYBE WHAT WE DO YOU FELLOWS EAT?

One of the young Grand Rapids Pioneers writes this: "The TINY WORKER should be made larger. All the Pioneers watch for the TINY WORKER very eagerly and enjoy it very much, but there is not enough of it!"

EQUALITY IN AMERICA

By Sidney Nadolsky, Grand Rapids, Mich.

It was six o'clock in the morning.
The boy went to work in the mill
Because his father got $30 a week
And his mother was very ill.

It was ten o'clock in the morning.
The banker rode in his fine sedan car;
He went to his office,
Talked about profits,
And smoked a big fat cigar.

It was twelve o'clock, the boy had his dinner,
A black piece of bread and butter.
At twelve-thirty the boy went back to work
With his head still in a flutter.

The boss went out in his limousine
And had a fine chicken dinner.
Then went out to play golf
Saying he surely felt finer than ever.

GOOD BOY, SID!

That was fine, Sid. And it makes you author of this special issue of the Grand Rapids Pioneers. Come again!

CHRISTMAS VACATION

By James Baldacco

I don't like vacations because I have to sell papers while very rich fools and girls have lots of fun playing and skating. Rich boys and girls have it easy while I have to sell papers from early morning till late at night.

Vacation is for the rich boys and girls but it is not for the workers' children who would rather go to school than sell papers. Join the Young Pioneers and fight for a real vacation. There should be a Pioneer organization on every city.

You bet there should Jimmy. And there will be soon, look!

Between the issues of the Young Comrade we like to hear a lot about the Pioneers all over the country.

Why can't the TINY WORKER be given more space?"

BUT, HEY KIDS, if the TINY WORKER was larger it wouldn't be the TINY WORKER, would it? Anyway, if you believe need is much stuff, why we will have to print a larger TINY WORKER. Come on now—force us to make it larger!

NEXT WEEK!

Henry Kamp-lisky of Grand Rapids sent in the dandiest little poem. We'll let you see it next week. Oh, boy—you'll like it!

The National Congress in Berlin

By FRITZ RUCK (Berlin)

THE Congress of Working People which took place in Berlin from December 3rd to 5th far exceeded in every respect the expectations which had been placed on it. It demonstrated the existence of a broad mass movement in Germany fed from the most various sources which, however, have a common origin: Intensified exploitation and oppression of the masses by large capital, growing pauperisation of every widening circles who are beginning to combine for organized resistance. Following on the 14,500,000 votes in the referendum with regard to the expropriation of the princes, the congress was the second answer of the working masses of Germany to the attempt of German large capital to consolidate its economic and political positions of power by an intensified exploitation and oppression of all strata of workers, and to make a transition to a new era of an independent imperialist policy.

The composition and the radius of influence of the congress are characterised by the following facts. It was attended by 2,000 delegates, who, without exception, were financed by the factories, trade unions, committees of unemployed and other organisations, by which they were nominated. In view of the present economic crisis, this means a tremendous effort. It was a congress which was supported from below, by the working masses themselves, and for this reason, all the greater effects may be expected from it. The commission for examining the mandates reported that the 1956 delegates who passed through a double control and who were present at every session of the congress, were distributed as follows:— S. P. of Germany 737 delegates, C. P. of Germany 858 delegates, Socialist League 15 delegates, Independent Socialist Party of Germany 18 delegates, Christian Socialist National party 3 delegates, "Democrats" 3 delegates, non-party members 600 delegates, representatives of the peasants 42 delegates. More than 200 delegates who had already been nominated and who are not included in the above figures could not appear at the congress, as for financial or other reasons they had to abandon their intention of coming to Berlin. Although the threats of the executives of some of the biggest trade unions to exclude delegates to the congress passed off in smoke in the majority of cases, a number of delegates were nevertheless deterred by them from visiting the congress.

On behalf of the preparatory committee, George Ledebour opened the congress. In short outlines he described the misery of the working population in Germany and pointed out that the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia had, by their example, shown the working people the way they should take.

Ledebour, Fritz Heckert, Schreck (S. P. of Germany), Freiberger (Munich) and Fritz Ruck, as well as representatives of all the social strata and political groups represented at the congress, were elected into the presidium.

Before starting on the agenda, the congress unanimously passed a resolution in favor of the release of the political prisoners and another against the bill regarding impure literature. It was resolved to dispatch a telegram to Max Holz.

Comrade Fritz Heckert read a paper on "The Danger of War, the Crisis of Rationalisation and the Workers' Fight for Existence." He depicted the present situation of the workers, the small peasants and the working middle class, and brought evidence to the effect that the permanent deterioration of the standard of living of the working class was a necessary condition for the rationalisation of large capital; that the latter would involve a new danger of imperialist wars and that a fresh strengthening of German imperialism would mean nothing more nor less than the advance of reaction in all fields. He drew the conclusion that the distress and pauperisation of the working people in town and country can only be removed by a determined fight with the object of overthrowing the capitalist order of society and of establishing a worker and peasant government. He called upon the workers to join the free-trade unions, which must be forged afresh into a weapon for the struggle of the proletariat. He issued the following slogans: Against the rationalisation of capital! For socialism! Reduction of hours of work—a fight for the eight-hour day and the 43-hour week! For the increase of wages! For adequate support of the unemployed and annuitants! For the re-establishment of the securities of the small savers! For a satisfactory distribution of land to the small peasants!

The serious work done by the congress was specially intensified in the commissions, in which the workers displayed the most zealous activity. During the congress, commissions met to discuss the questions of tenants, the peasantry, factory councils, the intellectual professions, small savings and the middle class, work among women war victims and armaments, communal policy, work among juveniles and other questions.

Representatives of all social strata and political views took part in the discussion on Heckert's paper. They agreed like one man with the chief speech and the expositions of the representatives of the factory councils and the unemployed. They described by drastic examples the social misery of the working masses, the distress of the unemployed, the embittered petty warfare in the factories, the laborious sufferings of the social and war pensioners and of those living on their small savings. The vow to create a united front of all workers ran like a red thread through the whole discussion. It echoed with specially demonstrative force from the words of the social democratic speakers in the discussion. Schreck (Dedmold), a trade union functionary who has been organized for more than 40 years in the S. P. of Germany, was followed with great attention by the whole congress when he described how he had come more and more to recognise that the leaders of the S. P. of Germany and of the A. D. G. B. were pursuing a policy which was contrary to the interests of the working class. He protested vigorously against the threat of the trade union leaders to exclude delegates and called upon those present to join in a revolutionary fight. A representative of the S. P. of Germany, from Saxony used similar violent expressions against the leaders of his party. Under instructions from the christian workers a member of the Christian Socialist National party of Lutsenkirchen exhorted all workers to join in a united front against capital.

The political resolution was passed with three dissentient votes. Its final slogans were:

"For the dissolution of the reichstag! For the overthrow of the capitalist government! A fight for a worker and peasant government!"

A resolution in favor of trade union unity and against the secessionists was passed unanimously, as was also a proclamation of solidarity with the English miners.

The resolutions of the Conference of Unemployed were confirmed by the Congress of Working People in a special resolution briefly summarising the demands of the unemployed. A resolution with regard to the fight of the factory councils was passed. In a special resolution the congress pointed out that the struggle of the German workers for the 8-hour day and for the 42-hour week was the centre-point of all the endeavors of the working masses to organize resistance to the offensive of capitalist rationalization. It is stated that should a referendum be taken in the question of hours of work, the congress would support this question. It further states:

"The congress would point out even today to all the organizations taking part in it, that not even a plebiscite would be able to solve the question of hours of work according to the wishes of the working class. This can only be done through a direct fight of workers in the factories and trade unions."

Comrade Neubauer, member of parliament, reported on the fight for the expropriation of the princes and explained in detail that this fight must be carried on with all energy in spite of treachery of the social democratic leaders. Dr. Preuss then drew a picture of the activities of class justice in Germany. Immediately after this speech a delegation was appointed from among those present at the congress which, in the name of the congress, was to present to the Prussian diet, the "reichstag" and the ministry of justice a demand for the release of all proletarian political prisoners.

Wilhelm Koenen, member of parliament, then reported on "The Distressed Condition of the Working Middle Class." He laid before the congress extensive and heart-rending material with regard to the pauperisation of wide circles of the middle class and brought evidence to the effect that capitalist rationalization is detrimental not only to the proletariat but to small artisans, small tradesmen and small peasants. He was followed by Schneider, a small peasant from the Kraegebirge, who described the desperate condition of the small-peasant population, illustrating it with many individual examples. Up to the present only a small section of the small peasants had recognized the necessity of fighting in common with the workers, but the small peasants who were present at the congress had realized how important it is that the peasants should join the united front of the proletariat.

On the third day of the congress, a number of delegates joined in the discussion. The expositions and suggestions given by them were very valuable.

In the name of the social democratic delegates, Schreck (Detmold) then made a violent protest against the "Vorwarts." In his statement he said: "We oppose the foul assertions of the 'Vorwarts': the congress is a dire necessity for the working class of Germany. Our leaders, who always put the interests of the working population in the last ground, are to blame for the fact that it had to take place."

Two papers of great importance were read on the third day of the congress. Comrade Hollein, member of parliament, reported on taxation policy and on questions of re-standardization and tenants. He expounded the wholesale taxation fraud of the bourgeoisie and the uncompensated expropriation of millions of persons with small savings, annuitants and tradesmen by the law passed by the German bourgeoisie for the re-establishment of currency. The chief part of his speech was concerned with the fight against exorbitant rents. He informed the audience that the tenants' organisations were preparing a plebiscite against exorbitant rents which the organisations affiliated to the congress would support by every means in their power.

Dr. Klauber reported on public health. The various forms of rationalization have caused the morbidity statistics to rise enormously, occupational accidents are increasing in a threatening manner, the sickness and social insurance societies are utterly inadequate. The distress among the war victims and victims of the capitalist system is indescribable. In the discussion, speeches were made with extension of time by a representative of the freethinkers who spoke against spiritual enslavement and clerical reaction, and a representative of working class sportsmen, who pointed out the importance of promoting sport among the workers.

Schoenbach reported on the organizatory forms of welding together the united front movement. The proposed lines of organisation demanding the establishment of a national committee of working people and the formation of local and district committees met with unanimous assent. Furthermore, a select national committee of working people was appointed.

The congress was closed with short final addresses by Comrades Heckert and Ruck. The delegates left the congress filled with the determination to work with might and main throughout the country towards uniting all strata of workers in the Red class front.

The congress was a flaring beacon acting as a signal to the German working class that it should, in alliance with the small peasants and the working middle classes, take up and carry through with renewed energy the fight against the danger of war, capitalist rationalisation and pauperisation. Even the representatives of the middle class and the small peasants acknowledged without reservations that the leadership in this fight is in the hands of the industrial proletariat. The congress created the preliminary conditions for a mighty fighting block of all the workers in Germany. It was a tremendous advance along the path of gathering together the masses in order to defeat capitalism and establish socialism.

Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars in the Soviet Union.

THE headlines tell us that France has joined England to keep the imperialist grip on China. We do not always believe what we see in the headlines and tho we are quite well aware that every imperialist power is guided by what its ministers believe to be the best interests of their ruling classes, it is well to keep in mind that France and England are not loggerheads, are constantly agreeing and constantly disagreeing, capitalist powers are incapable of honesty towards each other. The basis of the present alleged agreement between France and England in China may be a deal between the two countries in Syria or perhaps an understanding on the Italian threat to France.

THE rapidity with which the imperialist powers change their policies towards each other nowadays is an indication of their instability. Today, Germany is orientating towards France; tomorrow towards England. One day, England ostentatiously shakes the hand of Mussolini; tomorrow the British foreign office attempts to block Mussolini's aim to turn the Mediterranean into an Italian lake. England has tried hard to bring about united action of the imperialist powers against the Chinese revolutionary movement. She cannot hope to crush the nationalist movement unaided. So far the powers have only agreed in principle that foreign interests in China should be protected but they confined their activities to pious wishes.

NOW it seems that the British government has succeeded in lining up France and the United States. What it cost England will be learned later on, provided the United States and France are not making mere diplomatic gestures. Japan, it seems, has decided to come in favor with the Chinese by giving England to understand that Japan does not believe in interfering in the domestic affairs of China. This was not Japan's position a few years back when the famous twenty-one points were promulgated. But China has more rifles now than then and the Washington agreement took place in the meantime which ended the Anglo-Japanese alliance. Japan's decision to adopt a policy of neutrality in China is due to a change in objective conditions and not to a change of heart on the part of the Japanese imperialists.

FRANK L. SMITH, senator-elect from Illinois, who bought his way to Washington with the aid of 200,000 public utility dollars is determined to present his credentials to the United States senate. Many republicans as well as democrats are determined not to allow Smith to take his seat. But Smith promises to open his bag and make the welkins ring with a story that is liable to send many a respectable senator scurrying to the cloak room. The fact is that Smith is no more the tool of big business than the rest of the senators. Smith knows this and threatens to spill the beans. We wish more eloquence to his tongue. Nothing pleases us better than to see crooks tell the truth about each other, unless it would be to see them shoot each other.

THE Chicago politicians who are quarrelling over the spoils attached to the office of mayor are turning out language that should please truth seekers. Edward Litsinger, a candidate, charges Robert E. Crown, state's attorney, with diverse crimes and misdemeanors against the peace of the people. Hiring gangsters to steal elections is the least of these. Crowe retorts by suggesting to Mr. Litsinger that he deliver up his nephew to justice, said nephew being wanted for stealing a ballot box and a trifling indiscretion known as murder. That should hold Mr. Litsinger for a while.

IT is said that poets are born not made. This seems to be unfortunately true. Prose writers are disagreeable enough but the poets are impossible, all except that poets write to agitate the masses. Most poets labor under the delusion that nothing matters in life except feeding the ego. They are firmly convinced that the whole world is in a conspiracy against them unless their effusions are put on a pedestal and unless everybody connected with a publication from the editor down to the printer's devil stays up nights thinking new schemes to put the poet's merchandise into the hands of the greatest number of persons, which is a worthy aim provided the poetry is not junk, as it usually is.

AS a rule, poets that throw fits are not geniuses but rats. Poets that waste good ink singing their own praises are pests. A proletarian poet usually turns in his stuff and hopes for the best. The lads with the poet's chin foliage who live on a few strikes of spaghetti a day develop a colic unless their rhyme is properly displayed, the proper disposition of most of it would be at the bottom of a spacious waste basket. There are more freak poets in the United States than there are chiropractors in Los Angeles. Most of them have been ruined by radical editors. Once you accept an amateur poet's mental progeny he develops a case of intellectual elephantiasis and crowds the poor editor to the wall. The genuine poet, like the genuine artist, is a modest and agreeable person. The freak poet is a darned nuisance.

Lessons of 1926 and the Tasks of 1927

By WILLIAM PAUL
Editor of "Sunday Worker," London.

We have all very much to learn from the memorable year that has just ended. A period of struggle, it was in many ways one of the greatest in the history of the British working class movement.

The year 1926 began with the financial and industrial reform using every ounce of their economic and political power to worsen the wages and hours of the workers. They concentrated their opening offensive upon the miners because if they could be beaten then it would be a simple thing to [illegible] the other unions where the leadership was [illegible] and even reactionary.

[illegible] the interests of "industrial peace," Baldwin set up the Samuel commission. Its aim was two-fold. To screen the preparations being made by the government and the mine-owners to enforce lower [illegible] and longer hours upon the miners. [illegible] as a means to disrupt and separate workers from the miners.

[illegible] the Samuel commission combined the employers to preach peace and prepare for war. While the commission was sitting the loud-mouthed Winston Churchill blurted out that a fight was coming ment and the bosses were dividing the trade unions, the right wing leaders of Rochdale were splitting the labor party by expelling Communists and disaffiliating militant local labor parties.

In this appeal for preparedness and unity for the struggle A. J. Cook played an important part. He warned the labor movement that it was entering the greatest fight in its history. And when the miners were locked out; when the rank and file closed its ranks against the mine-owners and forced the general council to declare the general strike, it was found, as Bevin confessed, that the leaders had made no preparations for the struggle.

As the masses swarmed into the streets in support of the miners, the general council was using its full influence to browbeat the miners' leaders into accepting lower wages, etc. Indeed, it was the overwhelming pressure of the strikers' hands the leaders afraid. J. H. Thomas admitted that he feared that power might pass out of the hands of the general council! Baldwin was also afraid that the same thing would happen.

In the secret report drawn up by the general council to explain why the general strike was called off, one can see how cleverly Baldwin, working upon the cowardice of the leaders, used the general council to attack the miners and to defeat the great strike. This document will play an important part at the forthcoming conference of trade union executives, but so far it has not been issued to the rank and file, who thus have had no opportunity to formulate a policy for the conference when it takes place.

With unmatched heroism the miners fought on. With the aid of other trade unions to enforce an embargo and to collect a levy, the miners, despite everything, could have defeated the mine-owners and the government. But right wing leadership made victory impossible. Towards the end of the struggle, after the Russian workers had sent over a million pounds to the miners, the T. U. C. made a belated move to collect a levy. But this could not make up for the attacks made upon the miners' leaders by J. H. Thomas, J. Bromley, Hamilton Fyfe (as editor of the Daily Herald) and Philip Snowden, etc. And after the mine-owners had won, the labor party thought it advisable to move a vote of censure upon the government. Even here, however, an attack was made upon the miners, for Mr. MacDonald seized the opportunity to openly insult A. J. Cook—much to the delight of Baldwin, Churchill and the other enemies of the workers.

The general strike and the miners' struggle have been great lessons for the masses. They have seen how readily the revolutionary workers of Russia responded to the call of their comrades in Britain. And they have seen how shabbily the general council has treated the Russian workers by refusing to send a delegate to their trade union conference and by threatening the very basis of Anglo-Russian unity.

During the past year at every point where the rank and file got an opportunity to express themselves free from the poisonous cancer of right wing bureaucracy, they acted with great courage and insight. During the general strike they fought like lions. And where allowed to express their opinion of the employers and the government they did so with exquisite contempt.

The most important lesson of 1926 is that the workers can fight but their leaders are timid—many of them openly treacherous. This problem of providing a new leadership in the trade unions and labor party is the most serious task confronting the British workers. And until it is faced and solved, the employers, who are united and courageous, will inflict further defeats upon the workers.

At first sight it would seem almost impossible to provide the movement with a new leadership, owing to the bureaucratic and dictatorial power wielded by the old leaders who control the machinery of their respective organizations.

Hitherto, the left wing attack upon the right wing leadership failed because it was unorganized. But with the increasing demand for more militant methods the rank and file realize the urgency for cohesion of purpose, and organization of their forces. Within the minority movement there exists all the [illegible] industry and he showed the need for [illegible] effectually with it when the time came" [illegible], 10-12-26).

[illegible] with the cunning of the government, the [illegible] Worker openly denounced the Samuel commission. Our policy was supported by the miners' [illegible]. Exactly twelve months ago, Herbert Smith, [illegible] in the Sunday Worker, declared that the [illegible] industry was only a device for splitting the [illegible].

[illegible] having failed to disrupt the rank and file [illegible] the Samuel commission, used their report as a [illegible] to turn the general council against the [illegible], and thus to destroy the very unity which [illegible] essential for victory.

[illegible] hours after issue of the Sunday Worker we [illegible] the trade unions and the labor party to close [illegible] the ranks of the movement in order to organize [illegible] resistance against the splitting tactics of [illegible] and his cunning friends. While the govern-

Vegetarianism Versus Vegetables

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.
(Translated from the Greek)

Despite the high degree of perfection to which the modern Greeks have raised the art of cooking, a vegetarian epidemic has broken out among the Greek workers and unless stern measures are taken to halt the spread of the scourge Greek may soon be eating Greek into emaciation and insanity thru a straight diet of carrots, celery and cucumbers.

This is serious. In fact it has a political side to it. How can a man give serious attention to a political problem when his teeth are decorated with cabbage fibre while his stomach craves for roast young pig?

So pregnant with disaster is the situation among the Greek workers in Chicago that the editors of the Empros urged on me the duty of dealing a deadly blow to this dangerous cult. Considering the fact that the last chiropractor on our subscription list scientifically withdrew his custom from The Daily Worker recently owing to a wise crack of mine at the expense of spine tickling it is quite obvious that our Greek comrades are taking serious financial risks in their decision to expose the vegetarian sham and its near relatives, the various brands of osteopathy, from the milder form of disease, known as napropathy, to the virulent brand known as chiropractic.

What is the relationship, if any, between vegetarianism and osteopathy? Are all vegetarians addicted to back kneading and toe twisting? Are all patrons of neck snapping addicted to a tomato, carrot and fig diet? No, any more than every member of Aimee McPherson's congregation could be seduced by King Benjamin of the House of David on the specious plea that he is the Seventh Messenger of the Lord engaged in the painful duty of purifying souls for their advent into heaven, but neither are any two mackerel alike in color, that is, exactly alike. They are all of the mackerel family, however, and just fish.

The writer has no personal grievance against a head of cabbage in its proper place, which is in the vicinity of a chunk of boiled bacon, spare ribs or corned beef. But I know of a man who used to go around like a walking truck farm, usually with a good-sized head of cabbage under his arm and he committed more political errors than half a dozen right wingers. His judgment improved when he began to smoke a pipe and now that he has compromised with clam chowder there are hopes for his complete recovery.

Another radical, whose appearance almost brought tears from those who knew him when his face bore the earmarks of pork chops, was almost at death's door from malnutrition when his vegetarian doctor lost the faith and took to prescribing a straight meat diet for his patients. This particular patient was smoking five cent cigars inside of a month and getting away with it. In addition to the improvement in his health there was a noticeable improvement in the quality of his literary output.

There are two wings of vegetarianism: vegetarians for the sake of vegetables and vegetarians because of sympathy for animals. For the vegetarian who has espoused the diet as a result of a personal experiment with the effects of certain kinds of food on his health, I have nothing but respect. In all probability he will be a theosophist in two years and a Holy Jumper in six but bar to the exclusive vegetable diet gets in its deadly work he has more sympathy for victims of child labor than for the pigs in the Chicago stockyards.

The vegetarian from ethical considerations will tell you that "God" never created animals to be slaughtered, tho it never occurs to him that an animal had to be slaughtered so that he could wax obese. Such a person is usually opposed to the consumption of milk, particularly cow's milk, for the good reason that it is the most popular. "Cow's milk is only good for calves" he will tell you with an air of finality. On the matter of eating meat he may compromise to the extent of allowing you that luxury provided you are able to pounce on your animal suddenly in the tiger fashion, sink your teeth into its jugular vein and drink its blood while it is hot. Perhaps he favors sudden death. Or perhaps he thinks that lions and tigers lead a healthier life because they don't eat cooked food. We have heard of sick lions and sick tigers despite the fact that they don't patronize a gas range or put vinegar on their steak.

One combination chiropractor and vegetarian that a friend of mine patronized boasted that he had not lighted a fire in his kitchen for two years. Sometimes he was compelled to do violence to the faith that was in him when invited out to dine with people who were addicted to the vice of cooking. But he made up for such lapses from the straight and narrow path by toting a bar of tomatoes under his arm and eating them while making his rounds. He was as emancipated as a czarist pretender to the throne of the Romanoffs who has to depend on his labor for a living. So were the older members of his establishment. The lady at his information desk would make a nice advertisement for the official undertaker to a poor house and the chief operator coughed painfully whenever he gave a patient's leg a vigorous twist.

This is no defense of the medical doctors or of the meat packers, the fanatical adherents of both cults will accuse me of having a charge account at my neighborhood drug store or being the recipient of a Christmas ham from the beef trust. Both charges are hereby indignantly denied. A straight meat diet is as bad, if not worse, than a straight vegetable diet. But I have yet to meet the meat eater who did not like to order a combination salad, a dish of boiled greens or some Brussells sprouts with his tenderloin steak. I am now speaking of those who can afford the luxury of combination salads. From my own experience with vegetarian restaurants they are not for the man with a small salary.

About the first step your anti-meat or anti-medical "inventor" of a new health fad will take is to figure how many suckers there are on the market and set the price to suit their gullibility. Radicals are easy prey for a wise faddist, who parrots phrases about the fruits and nuts turning as the Messiah who will lead the sick out of the Egypt of disorders and dead animals into the promised land of neither. Where the average medical doctor will lead you down with colored water the anti-medic will fill your head with oilusions and your stomach with gas.

The official magazines of the quacks are just as strong for the present social system as are the official organs of the medical associations. Both are in the "healing" business for what they can get out of it. That these are honest exceptions only prove the rule.

Dr. Abrams of California was hailed a few years ago as the deliverer of the human race when he perfected a machine that was supposed to locate the whereabouts of any disease and tell its nature by a system that I will not take the trouble to describe here. The fact that Upton Sinclair espouses it made me instantly suspicious of it. Sinclair fell even for Woodrow Wilson. The quacks stocked their factories with the machines and at ten dollars a crack any customer could have his blood tested, and win his favorite disease.

Before the "Abrams method" was finally proven to be a fake the quacks had separated the suckers from hundreds of thousands of dollars. These health shops hummed like dynamos in a central power station as the electric current was chasing tuberculis, syphilis or diabetes all over the patient's body. Now the Abrams machines are going to the junk pile or being converted into graphophones.

The U. S. is the most fertile field in the world for quackery and not all the gulls are segregated in Los Angeles. Neither are they all followers of Krishnamurti, the Hindoo "Jesus." Some people fall for anything that has the brand of science on its brow, others will come across with the spendulike for any new religion which promises democracy and a straight connection with God. Political radicals who think that under socialism fleas will not bite, as long as there are fleas, or that grapes will suddenly grow virtuous and refuse to ferment, are liable to get sick deliberately in order to show their hostility to the "drug trust" and refuse to eat meat in a crusade against the packers.

I heard a chiropractor-vegetarian say that the main duty of the Communists should be to preach health to the masses; that is, to patronize his own stalls. A healthy proletariat would be in a position to overthrow the system in short order. If not, did it matter since no social system could do no more for the human race than contribute to their well being? This sage health "radical" claimed that the workers eat too much food. The capitalists think they do and are always ready to hammer down the workers' standard of living so that they (the capitalists) can have more to eat, drink and wear. The Chinese coolie who can live on a bowl of rice a day is preferable to the employer to the worker who is accustomed to living on not less than the equivalent of twelve bowls a day. Too much food is not the cause of the workers' misery. It is rather too little food and everything else that goes to make up a standard of living.

Eat all the cabbage, celery, figs, onion and turnips you want. Eat them exclusively if you feel that way about it. Your individual recipes does not necessarily concern the public. Shun the contents of the medicine bottle and stretch yourself on the osteopath's rack as often as your backbone and your pocketbook can afford it. But when you begin to convince health quackery with political radicalism, you are simply confusing the main issue that is of concern to the working class; the task of abolishing the profit system, which is at the root of all quackery. Our job is to help the working class get more meat, more vegetables, more clothes and more leisure to recuperate from the fatigue of the job. If the workers had more time to rest than they have now without having to look for a boss while they "rest" the food quacks and health quacks would not be pulling down from fifty to a hundred dollars a day from ailing wage slaves.

Communism Captures the Youth of the Intelligentsia

By ROSE KATZ.

When I returned to Russia after an absence of twenty-two years, I visited many of my old school mates. They had been professionals under the old regime, and had lost many of the privileges they had then enjoyed. Now the betterment of their condition is bound up with that of all the workers. With the building up and improvement of workers' economy, the doctors, engineers and other professionals, would, as useful workers, also enjoy better conditions. However, many were dissatisfied at the loss of their privileged position. They grumbled, but I noticed that they were careful not to do so before their children.

The children have been captured by the vision of a better day. They, as much as the children of the workers, regard Communism as their heritage and their care. They resent any criticism of the ideas for which the best blood of the workers of all countries has been spilled.

The following is a letter from such a youth to his family in America.

Leningrad, Nov. 7, 1926.

Dear Folks:

Today we celebrate the ninth anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet government. For nine years the Soviet lives, works, and conquers. For nine years the workers and peasants have been building a socialist republic.

All Russia celebrates. Hundreds of thousands of worker inhabitants pack the streets of Red Leningrad, with their banners, flags and placards. Their faces are lit with pride at the accomplishment of the revolution and show their determination to defend it against all the world. The streets and squares are so crowded that an apple could not reach the ground.

The weather is damp and foggy and chilly, as usual in Leningrad at this time of the year. Still it could not dampen our feelings on this day, for today we unveil a mequment to our leader and teacher, Ilyitch. The crowd is so immense that those of us who want to see the unveiling have to hang on to cornices, and railings high up above the heads of the multitude. Thousands of us hold our breath and strain our eyes to see the statue of that wonderful man, of earnest and honest ideas; that genius of thot. The straine of the International and a salvo of guns from the fortress of Peter and Paul announce the unveiling. The wild enthusiasm of the crowd strengthen my faith in the Workers' and Peasants' government. Today we celebrate our 1917. Sooner or later other countries will be celebrating theirs.

I am getting along splendidly. My work is interesting and so are my studies. I enjoy the lectures of the professors and the new method of teaching, and the many new books published. Every day we absorb more knowledge and are inspired more and more with the greatness of our work. Today I feel invigorated by a wave of new, rich, red blood and am more certain than ever of the future.

I just met a man who recently arrived from America. He told me that the Youth of America spend most of their leisure hours in sports and dancing. We too knew how to enjoy ourselves, but our minds are not occupied entirely with play. We realize that we are the builders of a future system. Dear parents, how happy I am that I live in Russia. I am eager to see you all, but you will have to wait until I can take you back to our dear country. You cannot realize the tremendous improvements there will be very soon. Our progress so far is just a promise for the future. When you come back you'll see with your own eyes how rich in culture and industry Russia is becoming.

How wonderful it is to live at the present time. Russia is just awakening from a deep slumber. How inspiring it is to see and feel the strength and confidence of those now engaged in the task of building the New Russia. I hope that in the near future, Russia will be able to open the doors to those who want to return. Then you will see that my picture is not overdrawn.

Yours, as ever,

Harilos.

Organize the New York Taxi Drivers!

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

The New York cab driver is not the "hard-boiled" individual he is generally supposed to be, this writer discovered after an investigation among that group of workers. Working as long as twelve to fourteen hours a day, suffering abuse and terrorism from the police, exploitation by the bosses and night club owners, and being ignored by A. F. of L. organizers, the lot of the New York cab driver has become so hard that at last, of his own initiative, he and his fellows are demanding unionization.

A recital of the hardships suffered by taximen will doubtless arouse little sympathy from the mass of workers, so familiar are the latter with similar conditions in their own trades and industries. But what makes things so unbearable for the New York "cabbie" is the fact that, having no union and having been prevented by police terrorism from organizing, he cannot even attempt to fight for better conditions. Like the vassals of feudal times, he must bow his head meekly and kiss the hand that tightens its grip on his throat.

Get Poor Pay.

The day shift, working nine hours, from 7 a. m. till 4 p. m., earns on average wage of $2.60 a day. The night shift, working from twelve to fourteen hours, 4 p. m. to 8 a. m., usually averages only two dollars more, $5.12. These figures were secured from a statement made by the bosses, who give the drivers only 40 per cent of their gross receipts.

Forty-five thousand drivers are employed in New York City, yet there is no organization of cab drivers. There are, however, ten independent associations of owners, the employing class having always realized the benefits of organization.

After much pleading on the part of these workers, the A. F. of L. union, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, attempted to hold an organization meeting for them in Beethoven Hall during the summer of 1925. The meeting had hardly been called to order when the police arrived and by wielding night clubs and blackjacks, broke it up.

Whether the police acted on their own initiative, or were influenced by the Yellow Taxi Corporation, has always been an unsettled question to local laborites. They recall that the former mayor, John F. Hylan, had made a special pet of the Yellow Cab Co. because of the financial interest a near relative of his had in it.

Double-Crossed by Walker.

When the present mayor, "Jimmy" Walker, was campaigning for the job, he published a paper called "The Square Deal" that was circulated among the cabmen. Among the many promises he made to them was one that he would play no favorites, and that stands would be distributed fairly. He also promised to better the working conditions of the cab driver, and by virtue of these promises secured many votes.

The disillusioned cab drivers have learned, now that "Jimmy" has been in office for a year, that his promises were typical "Tammany ballot-bait," the mayor having done his best, through the new traffic regulations, to make the lot of the cab driver a harder one.

Parking is no longer permitted on Fifth Ave from 5 till 7 p. m. Heavy traffic on this thoroughfare begins at 3 o'clock, but the cops have shifted the hour from 5 to 5 p. m. so as to accommodate the owners of the Cadillacs, Rolls-Royces, Hispano-Suizas, and Packards who cannot be hampered by laws. The Fifth Avenue Association, an organization of the merchants on that avenue, were influential in having the hour made just late enough so that they would lose no business. The cabman was left to shift for himself.

Why Pay Dwindles.

But miserably pay, abuse from the police, and interference from the law-makers are not the only factors that make driving a taxi a poor job. The drivers must purchase their own uniforms. They must pay for stolen equipment like batteries, tires, jacks and lamps. When the taxi has a breakdown, they receive no compensation for time lost.

Many small companies furnish their cabs with patched-up tires, called in the parlance of the trade, "Moe Levy tires." These "bolonies" are constantly in need of repair, and the job of repairing them falls to the driver, naturally, for this he receives no pay. Often, due to the poor condition of his tires, a driver is forced to drive slowly for fear a tire might burst, and thus he not only loses customers, but hitters down upon his head the wrath of the traffic cop for blocking traffic.

Fifth Ave. buses are limited by police regulation to two buses a block. Little is said, however, when ten or twelve line up in a single block. The taxi driver must weed his way as best he can thru the mass, taking his chances on a disastrous smashup. Other hazards that make the job dangerous include the poor conditions of the brakes. The companies care so little about the safety of the driver that brakes are often neglected, resulting in collisions in which the driver is either killed or confined to a sickbed for many months.

Yellow Fears Union.

The Yellow Taxicab Corporation, which by virtue of its political influence with the previous administration had quite a monopoly on the service in this city, only paid its 2,000 men a commission of 32 1-3 per cent up to two months ago. Discontent among its employees became so pronounced that, afraid they might unionize, the company raised this commission to the standard 40 per cent. To save money, it stopped distributing the cash monthly loans it gave prior to the first strike, and also the publication of "The Yellowcardpl," the yellow company sheet that was issued to keep the slaves in chains.

Many of the cab drivers have become interested readers of The DAILY WORKER, hoping that this militant labor paper will take up their cause and agitate for their unionization. They point out, as an example of how they could be benefited by organization, to the Mogul Checker Cab strike of 1923. With only a slipshod strike association, these workers raised the commission percentage from 32 1-3 to 40 per cent.

Their plight becomes more bitter when they recall that drivers in other branches of the trade have organizations, such as the funeral auto drivers, the milk drivers, the truck drivers, the newspaper drivers, and others.

The New York taxi driver has long been a subject of jest and abuse from everyone. Like all other wage slaves, he has done his best to withstand the trials and vicissitudes of his craft uncomplainingly. But the breaking point has come. He can no longer bear up under his burden. He has broadcast his appeal. The question that now confronts organized labor is, what shall be done to aid him?

The American Federation of Labor is, by virtue of his undeniable plea, subpoenaed to answer.

almost with one stroke. Wolf escaped from prison and cut his daughter off, leaving the sizable estate as in which his fortune was bequeathed to the seventh generation of Webber heirs. It seems that he would not believe his willful daughter's words that thy marriage was legal but that she did not live as the wife of her black spouse following the formal ceremony.

"Anneke, now locked out of house and home, came to New York with her grandmother, Anna Cock. There are strong reasons for believing Anna Cock was none other than Anneke's mother and that in the domestic upheaval ensuing from the daughter's marriage to a husband of her father's choice, old Wolfert kicked the wife out, too, when she sided with the daughter. I have now in my possession certain facts, pointing to verification of this section of the story and I hope to be able to confirm what are now merely well grounded suspicions.

"So Anneke came to New York where she posed as an unmarried maid. She made the acquaintance of Rockoff Jans (Jansen), a farmer, whom she married, their union resulting in the rearing of a small family. Jans died and Anneke became the wife of the Rev Everardus Bogardus of Trinity church. The church was in financial difficulties and Pastor Bogardus, who knew of the legacy left by his wife's father, voyaged to Holland to interest the Dutch government in his case. He succeeded in persuading the government to transfer a part of the trust fund of the Webber legacy to New York. The church trustees were appointed by the government as subtrustees of this legacy.

"Anneke died soon after this and Pastor Bogardus lost his life on a second voyage to Holland to obtain additional funds from the Webber estate. In 1702, after Anneke's death, some of the heirs learning that the trust fund had been transferred to New York, raised a loud clamor and were seriously considering legal action to restore the money to its proper custodianship. It looked bad for Trinity church and the trustees. The latter, no doubt loathe to part from such a comfortable financial cushion, petitioned Queen Anne for protection.

"They received a grant covering the church and graveyard adjoining. I say without the slightest fear of being called to account for my utterances, that Trinity Corporation's claims have been mere pretense. The grant of Queen Anne was a political mak-shift devised as a way out of a difficult situation by the earlier trustees and gives no legal rights to the property which was bought with money left by Webber to his heirs.

"On one of my numerous trips of investigation I went to the trouble of having surveyed all of the 10 acres of land covered by the grant and found that the corporation owned 30 acres more than the area specified in the document. How then did the corporation acquire the 20 additional acres?

"After I had obtained positive proof of my descent from the house of Webber I made another visit to New York. Without disclosing the source of my information I told the trustees of Trinity church that the Webber heirs owned the estate. They pretended they had not heard of Webber and took it as a new joke in the long list of hoaxes that attended litigation over the vast estate throughout several centuries.

"But the trustees laughed too soon, for I found out that the Webber name was a powerful talisman if rubbed the right way and it served to open new corridors where my disclosures found more ready listeners. The result now is that settlement has been promised in the 'immediate future.'

"What this may mean no one can tell. Forty-nine acres of skyscrapers in the heart of New York can not be apportioned among hundreds of legal claimants in a few months. All the buildings are on leased ground and the total value is in excess of six billion dollars.

"There are reasons for believing that as little fuss as possible will be made in closing the accounts with the heirs. The chief reason is the wide ramification of the Webber tree in England and Holland where the name is found heavily sprinkled among the nobility. No less than six Webbers are registered in the Royal Blue Book of England. I learned this after having been told by English officials they had no information about the Webbers.

"This reticence can be explained in one way only —Anneke's marriage to her father's black servant. Although the much-married lady did not cohabit with her black spouse, having been married in the legal manner for the purpose of effecting a divorce from the husband of her father's choosing, the family has never been quite free from the suspicion that naturally attaches to such a tradition.

"I found the family crest of William Webber, Prince of Orange, in wide use among the English Webbers. This crest is composed of a hawk and wolf's head balanced with a demilion and fleur de lis. A ducal coronet with an eagle surmounts the device, which was adopted by the Prince of Orange on moving to England. Further justification of secrecy concerning Anneke's family life is found in the fact that Wilhelmina of Holland is a Webber. And it is significant in discussing the influence wielded by the Webber fortune to reveal that the Vanderbilts and the Astors never cut a wide swath until they became members of Trinity Corporation.

"I have learned from unquestionable sources that some of our best families have paid sizeable sums to become members of Trinity Corporation, in the certainty, no doubt, that later they would be handsomely compensated for such splendid interest in religion."

Easton's investigations were not without risks that frequently involved his life. His quest took him to out of the way corners of the North American continent and it was not unusual to find upon visiting his hotel room that someone had preceded him, searching all of his effects with the greatest care.

"I soon learned that I could not exercise too much care in my choice of speaking acquaintances during my travels," Eastou said. "The more valuable of the documents never left my person during the four years of steady investigation and it would have been necessary for any one seeking possession of these to take me with them. Very often I would find that my luggage had undergone a thorough searching, even the hotel mattress and pillow not escaping the prying fingers of my unknown visitors.

"In my quest for facts underlying the Trinity Corporation mystery I found many recorded deeds of perfidy in which claimants were duped by legal tricksters, losing their fight before going to court. An outstanding instance was the suit filed in the name of an association of Jans heirs—Jans was the name of Anneke's first husband in America. The action was brought in 1869 through David Grosebeck, an attorney. The court threw out the petition, to the astonishment of the claimants, when the defendants moved that the action was illegal because the rector of Trinity church and not the trustees had been named as legal defendants.

"Did Grosebeck, an able lawyer, make a mistake in suing the rector and not the trustees of the corporation? The answer may be found in the fact that forty-nine acres of realty in the heat of Manhattan, even in 1869 was worth an incalculable sum of money.

"In 1860 a man named Dwight Hamdorf, of Poughkeepsie, whose wife was a Webber, engaged a lawyer to make a settlement of the case. The lawyer was about to take ship to Holland when he dropped out of sight. It is possible that he, too, died of heart failure but the body was never found and no post-quest was held.

"When final settlement is made some thousands of men and women bearing the name of Edwards will be sadly disappointed. These people have their claims on the fact that one Captain Jonathan Edwards, commander of one of the vessels in the vast fleet owned by Webber, settled in New York marrying Elizabeth Brower, descendant of Wynke Lybrant Brower, a member of the Webber corporation. Merely because of this association of the name Edwards with the Webber interests countless scores of persons bearing the name of Edwards have entered the lists in the hope of sharing in the final division of the trust fund.

"The search for the truth back of Trinity Corporation has been costly to me. I sold my home to finance the investigations. On that fateful morning when my eye caught sight of the news item which launched me on a veritable ocean of human ocean currents I owned a business that brought me a comfortable living. This was swept away very early in my venture, which necessitated frequent calls on persons in distant part of the United States and Canada.

"No account of my connection with the search for the facts under Trinity Corporation's apparently calm surface would be complete without an expression of gratitude to certain influential friends whose assistance and advice on more than one occasion served to surmount what would have remained for me impassable barriers. To penetrate the granite exterior of affluent Trinity Corporation required more than a knowledge of facts which the trustees were anxious to hide. This additional strength came from quarters quite unexpected and from persons who I believe had no private interests or ulterior motives underlying their proffers of assistance.

"It is possible that others have come upon the facts as given in the foregoing account. I take no particular credit for my share in bringing the legation to a close. Indeed, I believe that it was rare good fortune, the kindly glances of a warmly disposed fate that prevented me from growing discouraged during the four years of steady, searching endeavor."

Review of the Women's Work in 1926

ENGLAND—A conference was held on May 25, with delegates from all over the kingdom and two delegates from the C. E. C. of the British Communist Party. In the year 1925 an organization was formed to centralize the work of organizing the working women. Today in all thickly populated districts, there are new branches of this women's organization functioning. At the time this women's conference was being held the British Communist Party was also in session, and the minutes of the Women's Conference were presented to this body along with the resolution of the Comintern on women's work and these were approved. At the British Communist Party's convention about 12 per cent of the total delegation were women.

FRANCE—In France most of the women's groups are in Paris. In fact in Paris there has more women and more influence than any country in the world. The women's groups there also have a special organizer. In the Proletaire they are in one section, and this well disciplined group is called the "Red Unit." In the provinces where there are large industries they are also trying to organize women's sections of the Communist Party of France. In general in France there is only a small per cent of women members in the Communist Party, possibly two per cent.

ITALY—In spite of the opposition of the Fascisti, in Italy the women are doing wonderful work. Their central body is composed of representatives of the largest bodies, and among whom are women from all industries. Especially from the industries of Lombardy, Turin and Milan. Thanks to the organization these women are a well disciplined body. Even in the smaller villages they are well organized and harmonious groups of workers, peasant and proletarian housewives, who are in sympathy with the Communist Party. These women have a journal, "Campagna," around which they center their work. This organ is not even legal in Italy and enjoys an ever larger list of women correspondents.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA—In the fall of 1925 together with the women's conference in Czecho-Slovakia, the Party thru the women's secretariat of the Comintern, organized the women. Their central body is called the central women's committee of Czecho-Slovakia and they have their secretariat. The work or organizing she women of this country has spread to the mines and mills under the guidance of their Communist Party, maintaining close connections with their central committee; 20,000 women are members of the Communist Party, this making up 26 per cent of the total membership of the Slovakian Party.

GERMANY—Of all work done in the party, the women's work in Germany has gone down till in some places there is hardly enough to call it an organization. In their central committee they have had one secretariat and recently another was added along with an advisory committee of 10. These women are drawn from the largest industries of Berlin and each has her special work to carry out, and as a result of getting in new members they are beginning to see their aims develop. Industries have special nuclei for women, and the press and political committees are getting valuable help from them. From Berlin the work is directed in organizing the provinces, which for some time have been disconnected. Women members in the party number about 12 to 13 per cent of its members.

SWITZERLAND, Norway, Sweden, Finland, and in the last few months in Austria, the United States and Canada some success has been achieved. Supposedly was International Women's Day in 1924 very successful under the leadership of the Comintern, 15 countries participated!

Labor Leaders Glad to Find More Help

Hyman Happy English Daily Here for Labor

The struggles of the garment workers have found full expression hitherto in New York only thru the Jewish Daily Freiheit. There are many nationalities in the organized labor movement struggling to improve their conditions. A labor daily in the English language will serve the interests of all the workers regardless of nationality and therefore deserves the fullest support moral and financial from all the workers of our city.—Louis Hyman, General Manager, Joint Board International Ladies Garment Workers' Union.

Curtis Says Daily Long Needed Here

I am in favor of a labor paper to be published in this city, something that has long been needed by the workers of this city and state. In this way the workers will have an opportunity to read a paper which undoubtedly will have something worth while to read.—Thomas J. Curtis, General Manager Building & Alliance, Trades Compensation Service Bureau.

Recognizes Need of Daily Worker in N. Y.

The DAILY WORKER should help and be an inspiration to the working class, a means of furthering the organization of the unorganized workers, and a monument to the working class struggle.- Fred Taisla, Paper Box Makers' Strike Leader.

Daily Worker Fights for Food Workers

The publication of The DAILY WORKER in New York City means that the working class will now have an organ to fight for them in the daily struggle.- Pascal P. Cosgrove, Organizer Amalgamated Food Workers.

Joint Board Secy. Treas. Says Daily Will Help

I am glad to hear that New York is to have a labor daily. The workers must have means of publicity, and there is none better than a daily newspaper. Let me add, there is no place in the world where labor dailies are more needed than in New York, where so many employers' organizations oppose them with their own official and unofficial organs.

In our difficult struggle in the garment trades we have had to combat much misinformation circulated in the English language daily press. The Daily Worker has always offered us its columns for refutation of slanders leveled against us by our enemies within and outside of the labor movement.

Julius Portnoy, Secy.-Treas. Joint Board, I. L. G. W.

ENEMIES WAKEN TO NEW DANGER AS DAILY COMES

Grudging Admission of Our Importance

While all its friends were greeting its arrival in New York City with cheers, a few groans were heard. Well, we're proud of those too.

Little Talk With Mr. Frayne

Reporter: Will you give us a statement to publish in our first issue?

Frayne: I am very sorry, but I cannot issue any statement.

Reporter: John P. Coughlin, Thomas J. Curtis and many other well known labor men have done so.

Frayne: That is different. They are local officials and are directly concerned with the local labor movement, while I am connected indirectly, being responsible to the national organization. All statements are issued by president Green or the executive council. That has been the policy in the past, having had to refuse giving statements many times. I regret that I must do so once again.

Mayor Was Told We Are Here, and Immediately Left City of New York

By WILL DE KALB

Mayor Walker "disappeared" from the City Hall yesterday coincident with the arrival of the DAILY WORKER to New York City. When reporters for this newspaper besieged the mayor at his downtown office, City Hall, for an interview of welcome, they were greeted with vague promises, and were finally told his honor was not there.

While one of the reporters was waiting in the mayor's reception room, a clerk came out of his private office and handed his secretary a memorandum, remarking that it came from "Jimmy." Nevertheless, with a perfectly straight face, the secretary informed the reporter that Jimmy was not in, and no one had any idea when he would resume his duties as chief executive of this city.

Despite the fact that the enterprising reporters continued their search for the mayor thruout the Broadway district, even going as far north as Texas Guinan's Night Club on 54th St., no trace of the Mayor could be found, so this issue of The DAILY WORKER must go to press without his blessing.

A Good Sub-getter Should Get Finder

I never gave The DAILY WORKER a thought, nor have I considered the question of what effect its publication in this city will have on the garment industry. If I find that it is an interesting paper I may become a regular reader of it.—Henry Finder, President, Industrial Council, Cloak and Suit Manufacturers Association.

OUR DAILY IN NEW YORK

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

FOR three years we have been fighting to give to the American workers a daily newspaper which will give voice to their struggles against their capitalist exploiters. We have fought to maintain a daily newspaper which would not only lead these struggles, but would give them a program which would lead to the revolutionization of the American working class and prepare them for the struggle for power against the capitalist government and the abolition of the capitalist system.

We maintained this paper through the support and sacrifice of the conscious workers—the Communists and their sympathizers. In spite of all the great difficulties which a working class paper must face, we have thus far been victorious in this struggle through this loyal support.

Now The DAILY WORKER has come to New York to take advantage of the broader base which exists here and to create a better and stronger paper with the new editorial forces which are available here.

The immediate task before us now is to rally all the forces possible behind The DAILY WORKER, to build a secure base by securing tens of thousands of new readers and thus making our paper really the leader of the militant struggle of the workers against their exploiters.

Build a more powerful organ of the workers struggle.

Build a stronger leader of the movement for revolutionization of the American workers.

Strengthen the workers' fight by strengthening The DAILY WORKER.

AN EVENT OF THE UTMOST IMPORTANCE

The coming to New York of the "Daily Worker" is an event of the utmost importance. Throughout the country the employers are making efforts to devitalize trade unions and to reduce them to mere instruments for the speeding up and further exploitation of the workers. The right-wing leadership of the trade unions is in full step with this policy. Only the conscious left-wing takes the lead of the masses in fighting against this tendency. The DAILY WORKER is a potent arm of the left-wing in this struggle. It will immediately begin to play a tremendous role in the New York labor movement, as well as extend its influence throughout the entire labor movement. The building of the DAILY WORKER into a great mass organ is the fundamental task that must be taken in hand by every revolutionary and progressive worker. The workers of New York have good reason to welcome to their midst this fighting journal of the working class.—William Z. Foster.

THE NEW YORK WORKERS NEED THE DAILY WORKER

(By Wm. W. Weinstone)

The DAILY WORKER comes to New York at a time when the Traction and Financial interests are preparing to monopolize the new subways with the money of the city and for their private profit, at the same time seeking to increase the fare on the present lines. The DAILY WORKER enters the city at a moment when the fifty thousand traction slaves are trying to organize themselves and receive injunctions from Tammany's judges.

The arrival of the DAILY WORKER means hope for these slaves. The metropolitan press of this city, the most powerful in the world, misrepresents the cause of labor, as in the subway strike and the needle trades dispute. But the DAILY WORKER will raise a voice against the looters of the city treasury and the monopolists. Welcome to the DAILY WORKER! All Hail to our fighting militant organ!

COMMUNISTS OF MEXICO CHEER DAILY INVADING IMPERIALIST CAPITAL

The Daily Worker, 33 First St., New York City—We congratulate the DAILY WORKER on the occasion of its first New York issue. The Communist Party of Mexico welcomes the fact that the only Communist daily in the English language has moved to the center of World Imperialism, where it can carry on more effectively its valiant fight against Wall Street's domination of Latin America.

With Communist greetings, THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF MEXICO. RAFAEL CARILLO, Secretary.

Famous Negro Author Knows Value of Daily

The difficulty with the labor movement is to get the mass of fair-minded persons to realize what it is to be poor, ignorant, over-worked, underpaid with ugly surroundings and no chance to sing and play. Only a worker's daily paper can supply this need and counteract the propaganda that pictures American labor riding around in automobiles and grafting on honest millionaires.—W. E. B. Du Bois.

A Welcome from John Haynes Holmes

I am glad to join in welcoming the coming to New York of The DAILY WORKER. I firmly believe in a free press as one of the bulwarks of our American democracy. Labor and every different group of labor should have its organ and say its say. Thus shall we have that freedom of opinion which leads to truth.—Rev. John Haynes Holmes.

Maneuver of Union Smashers Meets With Big Failure

Crowding seventeen halls to their limit, more than 24,000 workers joined in a huge mass demonstration against the disruption of unions by the A. F. of L. policy of expulsion in meetings called by the Joint Boards of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Unions and of the Furriers' Unions on Thursday.

The meetings were in the nature of a counter-demonstration against meetings called by the International, at which attendance was forced upon some thousands of workers, principally from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. In spite of threats and browbeating, hundreds of workers left the Armories where the Right Wing meetings were held during the speeches of Sigman, Beckerman, and Hugh Frayne.

An unprecedented crowd answered the call of the two Joint Boards to the protest counter-demonstration. Although six halls had been engaged with four annexes in reserve, it became necessary to open up more halls for workers who were unable to gain admission, until finally meetings were going on simultaneously in seventeen downtown halls. Thousands of workers were unable to get into any hall, and had to be turned away.

Greet Left Wing Leaders

Enthusiasm was high as Ben Gold of the Furriers Union, Louis Hyman, I. S. Zimmerman, I. Borschowsky, and other leaders outlined resistance of the workers to the disruption of their unions by illegal expulsion and framed-up attacks. Ben Gold was cheered when he declared that he would expose in published charges, the frame-up attempted by the A. F. of L. against the Furriers' Union as well as its efforts to betray the workers during the strike.

Louis Hyman was applauded and cheered as he told of the attempt of the right wing in Chicago to break up his recent meeting and demonstration there by informing the chief of police that he was a "Mexican revolutionist smuggled in from Mexico to overthrow the government." In a fiery speech he denounced the union-splitting tactics of the International.

Denounce Union Smashers

In resolutions passed at all the meetings, the needle trades workers protested against the "union-smashing campaign undertaken by the Sigman-Beckermans and Schachtmans together with the officialdom of the A. F. of L." condemned the "latest act of treachery against the furriers' union" and pledged themselves to "stand solidly with our present progressive leadership, and to support its policies of militant struggle and rank and file control."

Other speakers at the meetings included Sam Leibowitz, assistant manager of the Furriers Union; I. Sazarow of the Capmakers Union, S. Zukowsky of the Millinery Workers Union, Sam Lipzin of the Amalgamated Clothing

HOW PROGRESSIVE WORKERS ACT

By MARGARET LARKIN

All day long the workers were restless in the shops. Their thoughts clicked along more busily than the humming machines. Now and then a sharp argument broke out between the operators. It was a day of decision among the needle trades workers.

The fight between the progressive, militant left wing and the bureaucracy had been going on in the open for weeks. Outrages of various kinds,—the beating of workers in shops, attacks upon pickets, ruthless methods of the Right Wing bound to control, had stirred a deep spirit of resistance in the mass of the workers. Today their leaders had called upon them for a great counter demonstration against the bureaucracy. The call had gone out to all honest workers to come to the meeting halls to protest against the union-splitting policies of the American Federation of Labor by its wholesale expulsions.

Bring Them Together!

By SCOTT NEARING.

Ten million people live in and around New York City. More than four million of them are workers who read newspapers every day.

In New York, in other parts of the United States, and in the world at large, great movements are taking place involving the struggle of the workers to get control of their own means of livelihood and the ultimate rise of the working class to power.

Most of the New York workers are unorganized. Many of them are unaware of the existence of a world labor movement. All of them, however, are face to face with the labor struggle.

Day by day workers throughout the world continue their struggle for emancipation. They need the help of the working millions of New York.

Bring the New York workers and the world labor movement together! Establish points of contact; organize co-operation; build unity. Enlighten, encourage, stimulate, arouse—this is the man-sized job of the DAILY WORKER in New York.

WHILE GOING TO PRESS

New Madison Square Garden began filling early this evening and as this paper goes to press Chairman Weinstone is introducing the first speaker to an enthusiastic gathering that amply fills the largest hall in the entire United States.

The meeting fulfills its threefold purpose. It is a mighty tribute to the memory of the world's greatest working class leader. It is a powerful protest against the invasion of Nicaragua, the bullying of Mexico and the threatening of China that even the capitalist press and government will be forced to take notice of. It is a splendid welcome to The DAILY WORKER on the occasion of its moving into the center of American capitalism.

And the packed Garden demonstrates another thing that was not intended when the meeting was planned. It demonstrates that the big offensive undertaken against the Communists and against militant unionism leaves the Workers Party unshaken and more firmly entrenched than ever in the hearts of the workers of New York!

BEFORE TRYING STRIKERS, JUDGE DECLARES GUILT

Rosalsky Raises Cloak Maker Bail to $25,000

Judge Otto A. Rosalsky of General Sessions finds strikers guilty without a trial. Explaining why he raised the bail of ten cloakmaker strikers from $1,000 and $2,000 apiece to $25,000 on assault charges, Rosalsky began a tirade against the workers, accusing them of being "part of a conspiracy to maim, and kill and destroy."

"Then," asked the reporter, "you regard these defendants guilty?"

"Yes," answered the judge.

"Isn't it asanmed in law," asked the reporter, "that a defendant is innocent until he is proved guilty?"

"That is the assumption," admitted Rosalsky. But he said his actions were explained by the fact that four of the defendants had entered a plea of guilty to a minor charge of third degree assault.

Six of the prisoners, however, have not taken the compromise plea and are maintaining their complete innocence. And these six are included in the list of ten that Rosalsky brands as guilty before trial, and whose bail he has raised to the unprecedented height of $25,000 each for assault. The six include Joseph Goreaszkay and Elias Marks, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the general picket committee during the recent cloakmakers' strike.

Rosalsky is known as the judge without a heart, especially bitter in labor cases, but hard also with friendless criminals, whom he delights in sending over for the longest possible terms.

The Bureaucrats Ask the Bosses' Help!

The Joint Board
International Pocketbook Workers Union
[illegible]

Jan. 18th, 1927

Gentlemen:

We have issued a call to all our workers, instructing them to quit work at once, to-wit on THURSDAY, JANUARY 20th, in order to attend a demonstration meeting called by the Committee for the Preservation of the Trade Union, for the purpose of combatting Communistic destructive activities.

We hope you will cooperate with us and see that our members are able to leave on time.

Very truly yours,

Max Stein,
Acting Manager
New York Joint Board,

APeL

Here is a photograph of a letter sent by the right-wing officials of the Pocketbook Workers Union two days before the union-wrecking "Committee for the Piekling of the Trade Unions" arranged the Thursday demonstration of their own impotence. It appeals to the bosses to cooperate in the union-smashing activities.

WORKERS! USE THIS WEAPON IN YOUR STRUGGLES

By CHAS. KRUMBEIN.

With the coming of the only English language class newspaper in America, the Daily Worker, to New York, the workers in this city will at last have an organ which will express their needs, give the workers' side of the labor battles, thus not making it necessary for the workers to rely upon the lying capitalist press for its news.

The DAILY WORKER will serve as a co-ordinator, an organizer of all the Left Wing and Progressive forces in the labor movement, that are fighting and working for the needs of the workers on the economic and political fields. The DAILY WORKER will also serve to gradually reap the hundreds of thousands of unorganized and exploited workers of New York and vicinity and thus be an effective vehicle in organizing them.

The DAILY WORKER being an organic part of the working class will speak its language, express its hopes and aspirations, will be the spokasman and torch bearer and an inspirational guido for all the struggles of the workers.

HAIL THE DAILY WORKER!
Welcome to its arrival to New York!
May it grow more powerful as an organ of the working class!

Ernestine Evans Has Particular Expectations

Greetings to the Daily Worker, and a bill of particular demands appended. I shall be really glad at having in New York a daily newspaper wholly devoted to labor's interests, but I want it to be a good newspaper. I want the news in it to be absolutely reliable and meticulously exact as to facts. I want the paper to present a literary digest of the labor press of the world, and particularly of the cultural interests of the workers in Europe and in Russia. I want the paper to take account of minor revolutions in the whole field of motion picture world, in art, and to substitute for the society news in the capitalist press and the monotonous exploitation of the private life of "Peaches," lively accounts of how human beings live, on the farm, in the mines, in offices, in kitchens. I should like some Pierre Hamp novels ran serially. I think the workers would learn something from "Through Many Windows," a picture of modern advertising life by Helen Woodward, if you can get second serial rights. I want cartoons, and pictures, not of Calvin Coolidge, or Palm Beach beauties, but of Diego Rivera's frescoes, and the inside of shops and of new machines.—Ernestine Evans.

Liberties Bureau Cheers Us

I welcome the issuing of a workers newspaper in New York City which will give the workers of this city another labor organ.—Forrest Baily, Director American Civil Liberties Bureau.

The DAILY WORKER appreciates the good wishes of the many friends whose Greetings are published in this issue. We feel sure that those whose space was reduced will rejoice with us that there were so many Greetings as to make this necessary.

How Progressive Workers Fight

The right wing had called meetings for two armories,—the Left Wing for ten halls. It was a test of strength. The workers stirred restlessly in the shops.

At last it was quitting time. The streets of the garment center was filled with little trickles of workers, hurrying away to the halls. The trickle increased to a stream,—then to a flood, that poured through the streets in defiance of traffic toword the demonstrations.

The left wing leaders had debated the procedure of the demonstration and laid careful plans. They had issued instructions to the workers, to fill Cooper Union, then Webster Hall, then the other four halls in succession. Four halls were in reserve should they be needed. The ten halls would hold twelve thousand people. Even the leaders scarcely expected more.

At a few minutes after five o'clock, the first of the long lines of marchers converged in Cooper square. Faster and faster into the hall. In ten minutes the great meeting room was jammed to the doors, and polica guarded against overcrowding. "To Webster Hall!" cried the workers. The news flew ahead, and the three meeting places in Webster were full before the main body of workers reached it. "To Manhottan Lyceum! To the Casino." On, on to other halls the crowds of workers surged, and in that half hour the demonstration, vastly more militant than anybody had hoped for, a great mass expression of confidence in honest leadership, was assured.

But thousands of workers were still walking in the drizzling rain, unable to find a hall where they could gather. More halls were opened. Cooper Union was shaken to wild applause when its chairman announced that meetings were going on simultaneously in seventeen places. Twenty-five thousand workers had responded to the call.

Man of the rank and file took over the extra meetings and workers and shop chairmen spoke, awaiting the leadars.

"On this historic day, we, the rank and file of the unions, pledge ones more to stand solidly with our present progressive leadership, and to support its policies of militant struggle and rank and file control. We further pledge to unite our ranks in the struggle to free our unions from bureaucratic control, gangsterism and expulsions, and to redouble our efforts to bring about the, amalgamation of all needle trades unions into one powerful organization that will effectively serve the interests of the workers."

The voice of the workers had spoken, giving to the left wing a mandate for leadership, honest, progressive, militant.

TRADE UNION LEADERS GREET DAILY WORKER

Militancy of Daily Worker Praised

The removal of The DAILY WORKER to New York means much to us, for now we can reach the English-speaking workers in our industry. Formerly, we had only the Freiheit, which could only reach the Jewish workers. The message of this great daily will rally the workers against the dark forces of reaction, who are striving to steal from the workers their hard-won gains.—Rose Wortis, Local 22, I. L. G. W. U.

Welcomes Us In Spite Of His Dislikes

I never read The DAILY WORKER but I am glad to have industry move to New York, as it will give more men work. I don't agree with its editorial policy and its editorial policy don't agree with me, however, I am glad to hove a paper move to New oYrk from Chicago.—John P. Coughlin, Sec'y, Central Trades and Labor Council.

Japanese Workers Extend Greetings

The DAILY WORKER has been the only doily in English that has recorded conscientiously the world significant, history-making struggle of the oppressed against its exploiting imperialist classes.

The struggle against the exploitation of the expropriators—no one can engago in a nobler struggio than this; and The DAILY WORKER ever since its birth three years ago, has faithfully particlpated in it. Every leaf of The DAILY WORKER is a priceless page wrought in the History of World Emancipation. No historians of the future can do without a file of The DAILY WORKER.

Today, The DAILY WORKER is the only daily in English that carries an unbiased account of the Nicaragua, Mexican, Philippine, Chinese and other struggles throughout the world. It is this newspaper that gives a dialectically whole picture of seemingly disconnected events of the world. Without The DAILY WORKER, we are blind, and our movement becomes stagnant.

The comrades and workers of Japan extend their hands to greet the advancement of The DAILY WORKER into the world's greatest center of exploitation—New York City. Long live The DAILY WORKER!—San-ichiro Sasaki, for the Comrades and Workers of Japan.

Zimmerman Statement Praises Daily

I greet and welcome the transfer of the fighting organ of the labor movement, the Daily Worker, to New York.

New York is now the center of the onslaughts of all the reactionary forces on all that is progressive and militant in the trade unions. The Daily Worker is the only paper in the English language that gave assistance to the rank and file in its struggle.

This fight is not only Jewish and is not merely of importanre to Jewish workers; through the Daily Worker all workers regardless of nationality are informed of the struggle and thus are enabled to give greater assistance to the militant rank and file.

I, therefore, hold and hope that all the class conscious progressive workers will now solidify their forces in support of their only English daily, the Daily Worker. —Sasha Zimmerman, Joint Board Cloak & Dressmakers Union.

IN THE CENTER OF WORLD CAPITALISM

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

Today The DAILY WORKER moves into the center of world capitalism. It comes to New York at a moment when the workers of the city are engaged in a struggle for the maintaining of the unions as fighting organizations; at a moment when Wall Street is using the armed forces of the American government to invade Nicaragna and Coolidge is threatening Mexico with war and sending a new fleet of battleships to China.

It stands alone as the only daily in the United States published in the English language which is fighting for the strengthening of the trade unions, for their amalgamation into industrial unions, for the organization of the unorganized workers, for the building of labor's political movement, for the giving of a consciousness, a backbone and a fighting spirit to the badly organized and politically undeveloped working class of our country. And to the oppressed peoples of the rest of the world ground down by "Uncle Shylock," It represents the only sure champion they have within the United States. Its tasks are big, its circulation and its editorial policy must correspond with its tasks. It has entered Wall Street's own city, the better to strike a blow at the heart of American capitalism. More power to its elbow. May the blow be a thrust home.

DAILY WORKER CONFERENCE TO MEET JANUARY THIRTY-FIRST

The next meeting of the Daily Worker Conference will take place Monday evening, Jannary 31st, at 8 o'clock, at Manhattan Lyceum. The response to the invitation to trade unions and other workingmen's organizations to send delegates to a Conference to establish an English workingclass Daily here in New York has been good enough to justify making it a permanent institution. About fifty trade unions are already represented, and many others having signified their intention of electing delegates at their next meeting. If your organization has not yet done so you should see to it that it is done before January 31st.

The meeting on January 31st will be strictly a business affair.

Build the Daily Worker As Mightier Weapon of American Working Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

The DAILY WORKER has arrived in New York City. With this "Special) Edition" prepared for the Madison Square Garden "Welcome" on the occasion of the Lenin Memorial Demonstration, the only English-language Communist Daily in the world establishes itself in the home city of the imperialist oppressors.

It was just five years ago, in Jannary, 1922, that The DAILY WORKER had its beginnings right here in New York City when the Workers [Communist] Party began the publication of the Weekly Worker as its official expression.

The great steel strike of the postwar period had taken place, but the struggles of the coal miners and the great shopmon's striko were yet to rouse as labor's effort to combat the "deflation" drives of the open shoppers against the workers.

The United States government then, as now, claiming that every move on the part of labor contending for the bettering of the conditions of the workers, was Moscow-inspired, directed what it thought was a crushing blow at Communism in this country, when it attacked the Communist Party's convention at Bridgeman, Michigan, and arrested and indicted its leading spokesmen. Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, of President Harding's "Ohio gang," heading capitalism's "department of justice" at Washington, proclaimed not only that Communism had been rooted out and destroyed in the United States, but that militancy had been ejected from the trade unions. The mouthpiece of the capitolist state thus boasted of the aid it claimed had been given the servile labor bureaucracy.

It was in this period that the headquarters of the Workers [Communist] Party were removed from New York City to Chicago. William Z. Foster had been pinced on trial in Michigan. The jury disagreed, and the indictment is still in force. C. E. Ruthenberg also faced the capitolist courts. He was convicted. But this attack merely spurred the Communist movement and the left wing to greater efforts. The drive was launched for The DAILY WORKER. It met with a determined response that made possible the first issue of "The Communist Daily" three years ago this month, in January, 1924.

That was the answer of the Communists and the left wing in the American labor movement, not only to the dollar tyranny at Washington and the international financiers in Wall Street, grown more arrpgant than ever because of new positions of advantage won as a result of the world war, but it was also a note of defiance against the expulsion policy first launched at that time under the regime of the late Samuel Gompers, but later continued by the Green administration in the American Federation of Labor.

Every issue of The DAILY WORKER, during the last three years, has fought the fight for a strong and militant labor movement. The challenge of the opposition in the coal miners' union is heard clearer than ever. It presents its program with a more determined spirit this coming week at the miners' convention in Indianapolis. To be sure the maddened Lewis autocracy in the union is better organized, more carefully prepared, more vicious in its redbaiting than ever.

But that does not mean that the power of Lewis is greater. It merely indicates the strength of the entrenched reaction in its last ditch fight, that must be routed by the "Save the Union!" forces if trade unionism is to live in the mining industry as a force fighting for the interests of the coal diggers.

"Amalgamation" again stirs the railroad workers, who realize the cause of their last bitter defeat. "Organization!" awakens the million auto workers, even as it must again rouse the steel workers, the rubber workers and labor in other great unorganized industries.

The Daily can claim an honorable share in the Passaic victory—the first successful attempt in recent years to organize a mass of unorganized workers.

But it is right here in New York City, at this present moment, that the reaction organizes and directs its most vicious blows against the upward surge of the broad masses of the workers. Years ofstudied attack on the part of the reaction finds the left wing in the needle trades more determined than ever to fight for those policies that must prevail if the trade unions are to live as effective organs of labor in the working class struggle.

It is not a far cry from Daugherty's attack on the Communist Convention in Michigan and Judge Wilkerson's injunction decree against the railroad shopmen, now more than three years ago, to the present day attack of the Morris Sigmans, the Morris Kaufmans and the Matthew Wolls, against the thinking sections of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Unfon, the Furriers' Union and the other organizations of labor in the needle industry in this city.

The Green-Woll combination announces as its ambition, the "preservation of the unions" and the safeguarding of the American government. This is an impossible stand. The labor officialdom that worries for the safety of the capitalist government, the instrument of the master class, thus indicates its hitter hostility to the progress and the rise to power of the workers as a class.

There is no power in the gift of capitalism that can turn back the march toward all power of the world's wage workers—the oppressed class of today. Intensified exploitation of labor at home, growing agression of the dominanct American imperialism abroad, as indicated in Nicaragua, Mexico and China, speeds that march toward power.

The DAILY WORKER establishes itself in New York City, where it is felt that it can better serve the American working class as a guido and standard-bearer. As the voice of Communism it strives to become the mass expression of the broadest possible sections of American labor. Every energy bends in that direction—To Build The DAILY WORKER to become the Mass Organ of those who must inevitably join the struggle for the abolition of capitalism and the building of the new social order that became flesh and blood when the mighty millions of workers and peasants thruout the former domains of the Russian czardom established the Union of Soviet Republics.

Here in New York City The DAILY WORKER calls to the workers of the nation to rally in its support, knowing that every strength gained by labor's "Daily" is new power won for the whole working class.

MOVE TO RECALL MINERS OFFICERS WHO CHOP BALLOT

Dist. 2. Reactionaries Took Opponents Off

CRESSON, Pa., Jan. 22.—Recall petitions against Lewis administration officers in District 2, United Mine Workers, are being circulated by the progressives in the central Pennsylvania coal fields. The progressives charge Vice President James Mark, Secretary-Treasurer Richard Gilbert, and six board members and an organizer with illegally barring rival candidates from the ballot in the district elections of last December.

By keeping the progressives off the ballot these two district officers and the six board members and organizer were elected without real opposition.

Won by Trickery

James Mark, running for district president, to succeed John Brophy who had withdrawn to take part in the national campaign, had no contest at all. His opponent, Pat McDermott, was sweeping the district till he was removed on a minor technicality. McDermott, a labor party assemblyman and a working union miner was a highly popular figure and a staunch supporter of John Brophy.

Log Rolling Politics

All the progressives were illegally barred, the petition states. McDermott was thrown out on the pretext that he was working in a mine over which his local union did not have jurisdiction. The facts are that McDermott had taken a job in another union pit when his mine closed last summer but kept his card in the first local with the consent of the district officers in order to combat a wage reduction move in that local.

Mark made a deal with the six board members in the McDermott case. For their votes ruling McDermott off Mark supported them in their own disputes. Their local opposition was taken care of in the same way.

Overlook Machine Errors

For instance in the Bread Top territory south of Huntingdon and Altoona four progressives, Edward Lynch, W. L. Abbott, Robert Hastings and David Grace, candidate for board member and organizer, were barred on the pretext that notices at some of the local unions nominating them had not been posted a week before the nominations and that one man who voted had not paid his assessment. Aside from the fact that the constitution does not make this sufficient grounds for disqualifying a candidate there is the fact that the same technicalities existed against Arthur Taylor and Clarence Donaldson, the administration officers.

Lie About Ishen

In Territory 2 Francis Ishen, a working miner, and Brookwood Labor College graduate in good standing in the union was barred from the ballot for board member on the untrue accusation that he had not been in continuous standing for three years. In Territory 9 in Tioga County, August Anderson was likewise barred on the false charge that he was three months behind in his assessment. And similar false technicalities were used to keep men off the ballot in three more territories.

Charges to Locals

The recall petitions ask the rank and file to elect Mark Gilbert, Taylor, Donaldson, Levi McConnaughty, William Ackley, Tony Rodnik, Stanley Hudzinski and Peter Ferraro. The district constitution says that the signed request of ten percent of the membership shall force the district secretary-treasurer to send a petition to each local union, with accompanying charges, for the recall of any district officer, board member or organizer specified. If within 30 days after the petition is sent out 20 percent of the entire membership send a request to the secretary-treasurer the district executive board shall call an election for the recall of the officers in question.

Progressives are confident of getting the necessary signatures quickly. Great indignation followed the barring of the many popular district candidates. The original recall petition was signed by Jerry Ford, Peter Mallon, Levi Troxell, Powers Hapgood, Manies McGonigle and S. S. Gutwald.

CRESSON, Pa.—Powers Hapgood is a delegate to the United Mine Workers convention in Indianapolis from the Cresson local union. The district executive board—a majority of which is controlled by Lewis—is attempting to have him expelled from membership. By a vote of 9 to 3 the board reversed the action of the Gallitzi local union which unanimously rejected the expulsion charges brought against Hapgood recently by International Organizer Ely. Hapgood has since taken a job in a Creason mine and transferred his card.

CHINESE NATIONALIST DAILY GREETS DAILY WORKER

(By Mun Hey Daily, Official New York Organ Kuo Min Tang.)

By ROBERT DUNN, Federated Press.

TRANSLATION:—The American Workers (Communist) Party paper, the Daily Worker, publishes on January 22 its first number in New York.

The DAILY WORKER is the only paper in English that is fighting vigorously and desperately against the imperialism, the exploitation, the injustice of it. This paper leads the greatest struggle of mankind toward human freedom. Any one who has a human heart should read the DAILY WORKER day by day and from the first word to the last. It is indeed a great saver of humanity. Long live The DAILY WORKER!

RIGHT WING MEETINGS COMPLETE FAILURE

Workers Union, Rose Walkowitz of the Dressmakers Union, Fannie Warshawsky of the Furriers Union, and many others.

Reactionaries Fail

Fittingly selecting for that purpose two armories of the New York National Guard, a body of armed men always relied upon to protect employers' interests in a struggle with labor, the reactionaries in the needle trades unions attempted Thursday afternoon to stage a demonstration against the progressives in the New York locals. The demonstration was officially styled, "against the Communists".

There would have been nothing to talk about at all if the international officials had not provided for a stop-page of work at four o'clock in the afternoon, and if the Amalagamated Clothing Workers' officials, especially, had not arranged for pressure to be brought on their members to force them to come to the meetings.

Great Fear

The greatest care was taken not to admit any who might be prominent in the left wing movement, for fear the audiences of coerced workers might be stampeded by the appearance of one of the local union nominating them had not been posted a week before the nominations and that one man who voted had not paid his assessment. Aside from the fact that the constitution does not make this sufficient grounds for disqualifying a candidate there is the fact that the same technicalities existed against Arthur Taylor and Clarence Donaldson, the administration officers.

Puny Demonstrations

The meetings were small. As a matter of fact, the Seventy-first Armory and the Sixty-ninth Armory together will not seat more than 5,000, and the halls were far from full. Not only were they not crowded in the beginning, but as soon as it was safe, the audience began to desert.

The chief speakers at the Seventy-first hall were Hugh Frayne, vice-president of the New York Federation of Labor, and Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers. By the time Sigman rose to make his denunciation of the Communists, his audience was over half gone.

Attack Strikers

While Frayne and Sigman were talking, mounted police, the bomb squad, and many plain clothes police were circling around the building as a guard of honor.

Both speakers defended a resolution, which condemned the splendid and victorious strikes in the cloak making trade and the fur trade as "needless" and as a "reign of terror".

Wm. Green, President of the A. F. L. sent his congratulations to the meeting, in a long telegram.

At the Sixty-ninth Armory Sidney Hillman came out at last, on the same platform with other reactionaries whom he formerly condemned, and added his voice to theirs in denunciation.

Paterson Police Trailing One Karl Liebknecht!

PATERSON, N. J.—The "Intelligence" Department of the Paterson Police Department has a warrant out for the arrest of Karl Liebknecht! There are many workers who attended the Liebknecht Memorial meeting here who are convinced of this. Why otherwise, they say, should the law-maintaining gentlemen come snooping around "looking for that fellow Liebknecht!"

When the Liebknecht Memorial meeting was held, under the auspices of the Y. W. L. in Paterson, two dicks came in. They had with them a Nicaragua-Liebknecht handbill, one of many distributed around the factories by the Pioneers.

A bright Pioneer told the earnest searchers for the Karl Liebknecht who was undoubtedly behind this act, that they would have to go where Liebknecht was, in order to find him. "Oh, we'll find him all right, never fear," was the boastful reply.

SIGMAN FAILS TO PUT DELEGATION IN CENTRAL BODY

Trades, Labor Council Passes On Plea For Aid

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

Prolonged debate concerning the attempt by the Sigman machine to substitute right wing delegates for bona fide left wing representatives of Locals 2, 9, 22 and 35 of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, resulted in a two weeks' delay at the meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council held in Beethoven Hall.

During the postponement, this new assault upon the left wing by the rights will be brought before the executive board of the council.

Sigman Appeals For Aid

In the minutes of the last meeting of the executive board, reference was made to the appearance of Morris Sigman, president, and Mollie Freidman, vice-president of the I. L. G. W. U. before that body, requesting support for the right wing assault on the militant members of the union.

On a motion by Arthur Peer, of the Post Office Clerks' Union, that was also referred to the executive board for clarification.

The Sigman Friedman combine requested:

First—The appointment of a committee of five by the Central Trades to cooperate with them.

Second—Credentials to visit the local unions in an appeal for funds.

Third—Cooperation in their campaign to "drive politics out of the unions."

President Joseph Ryan asked Secretary Coughlin: "Who is this Committee?" Coughlin answered that "it was headed by Morris Sigman and Morris Feinstone." Ryan then inquired if the committee did not have as its purpose "to drive the Communists out of the unions, not politics?"

"Ask a Doctor."

Delegate A. J. Furman, of Local 9, I. L. G. W. U. asked: "What is meant by driving politics out of the unions?"

"You will have to ask someone who is a doctor," Coughlin answered.

President Ryan said, "Personally I think labor should take a lot of interest in politics."

Delegate Peer then made his motion to refer the matter to the executive board, which was passed.

Right Wingers Not Seated

When the credentials of the right wing delegates from Locals 2, 9, 22 and 35 were read, Delegates Yenetzki, of Local 22, took the floor and asked: "How can new delegates be seated when the others have never been recalled?"

Vice-president John Mullholand said that "it is merely a care of substitution of delegates."

Samuel Leibowitz, of the Furriers' Union, asked: "How can Sigman send delegates to replace those delegates local unions have elected?"

James P. Holland, former president of the New York State Federation of Labor, inquired: "What right has the A. F. of L. to tell any International union how to conduct its affairs?"

It was reported by President Ryan that the Central Trades is continuing the fight for Abraham Lefkowitz, who was refused promotion as a high school teacher due to his being a member of the Teachers' Union. It was stated that Franklin D. Roosevelt is now interested in the case and though not much progress can be reported now, much is hoped for in the future.

It was announced that the special order of business for the next meeting of the Central Trades, to be held Thursday, February 3, would be an extended discussion of injunctions in labor disputes. All local unions were urged to hold special meetings before February 15, to discuss this question.

FIRST SEAMEN'S PORT BUREAU IN NEW YORK TODAY

Club Room To Ruin The Shipping Shark

By EDWARD HILLYER

An important event in the life of the seafaring toiler is the opening today of the International Seamen's Port Bureau at 26 South St., New York, in the part of town where seamen congregate.

The Seamen's Port Bureau will be a club-home for marine workers of all nations. There will be reading and writing facilities, a meeting center, a shipping office for employed, a place to store securely seamen's belongings and generally as much as possible to facilitate their convenience and welfare. The spreading among the seamen of knowledge to enlighten them as to the economic conditions and need of organization will also be one of its purposes.

Anybody who is familiar with the life of the marine worker knows under what conditions he slaves, the hardships and handicaps both at sea and ashore, particularly the chaotic conditions culturally. Disorganization in this country is without comparison to any other.

Some of the pitfalls which are put in the path of the seamen are: speakeasies, brothels, gambling dens, blood-sucking bondsmen, loanmen, lawyers, money changers, flophouse keepers, shipping sharks and what-not. On the other hand, they have the "hallelujah" gospel missions, subsidized seamen's church institutions, etc.

All these demoralizing conditions and influences are a material factor—perhaps the dominating factor—in the now apparently permanent disability of the seamen of this country to the development of their organic labor and social structure. The Seamen's Port Bureau will spread among them knowledge that will aid in their organization.

Sick Laborer Takes Gas; Capitalism Has No Use for His Sort

Despondent because an intestinal illness had prevented him from working for the last four months, Karel Milata, 45, of 640 East 14th St., committed suicide by gas, police say, at his home last night.

Milata occupied a furnished room on the 11th St. address, and yesterday, after being informed by a dispensary doctor that he would not be able to work for many months, attempted to borrow money to pay his room rent. He was unsuccessful. He returned to his room, and brooded over his misfortune.

A few hours later neighbors smelt gas on his floor.

HONOR ROLL

Here is a partial roster of those devoted rebels whose contributions made it possible for The DAILY WORKER to be printed in New York. The amounts specified were received by the New York Agency from January 7th to January 21st. Over two thousand "Honor Roll" lists are still outstanding and will be acknowledged in future issues of The DAILY WORKER as fast as received.

All having lists are urged to collect as much as they can as fast as they can, since the moving of The DAILY WORKER involves a lot of extra expense. The good work done by New York comrades the past two weeks shows that they intend to cover this and give The DAILY WORKER a good send-off in New York.

The traitors must be defeated! Sigman's attack on the union is a chapter of treachery and betrayal; it is a black page in the history of the American labor movement.

Sigman is out to smash the Organization if he cannot control it.

At the outset Sigman figured everywhere as the head of the strike committee. The "Daily Forward"—Sigman's mouthpiece has done everything to stress Sigman's strike leadership.

Sigman was one of the speakers at the mass meeting at Madison Square Garden on June 29th, where 25,000 cloakmakers gave their authorization to the Joint Board to call the strike. At present, Sigman endeavors to cover his pogrom plans by the flimsy excuse that the strike was called without the membership being consulted.

On the 22nd of August Sigman stated as follows:

"Bosses shout Communism in order to befog the issue of the strike."

At present, Sigman is doing the very same thing that the bosses did then. He is dragging in the issue of Communism in order to confuse the minds of the members, and to impose his unwanted and despised leadership upon the Union.

The Cloak and Dressmakers are determined to rid the union of the underworld, yellow traitors, sluggers and gangsters. The fight requires money. $250,000 MUST BE RAISED IMMEDIATELY. The above named organizations have already manifested their confidence in the outcome of the struggle and have subscribed to a considerable part of the loan. The full amount must be raised immediately. EVERY WORKER AND EVERY ORGANIZATION SHOULD SUBSCRIBE TO A BOND. The bonds are of the following denominations: $25.00, $50.00, $100.00, and $500.00.

EVERY BOND IS ANOTHER BLOW TO THE TRAITORS.

Help make this fight a complete knock out to the enemies of the Labor Movement —the Sigmans, Beckermans, Ninfos, Dubinkys and the like.

Let the slogan be: "The Complete Amount of $250,000 within the next two weeks."

The Right Wing Demonstrates.

When the right wing of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union tried to demonstrate against the Lefts and the Communists on Thursday night, they succeeded only in demonstrating against themselves. Knowing that they could not get a creditable meeting together if they called only the members of the International, they decided to "amalgamate" all of the Needle Trades Unions for the purpose of their demonstration, and the officialdom of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Millinery Workers, the Capmakers and the other Needle Trades Unions issued a joint call for mass meetings "to demonstrate against the Communists."

The workers stopped work at 4 p. m., as directed, but answered the call of the Joint Boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers and of the Furriers' Unions for a counter demonstration. The right wing managed to hold two meetings while the adherents of the two Joint Boards held seventeen. Thus Sigman and Beckerman and Frayne accomplished quite the opposite of what they intended. They demonstrated that the rank and file of the Needle Trades Workers of the City of New York are against their union-wrecking policy.

An amusing incident in connection with the meetings was furnished by the conduct of the capitalist papers. They had all been invited to send reporters to meetings where, according to the right-wing publicity men, "120,000 workers were going to demonstrate for the expulsion of the Communists and Left-Wingers from the Trade Unions." The early editions of the evening papers all carried the news of a demonstration of 120,000 workers. But later editions and the next day's papers steadily diminished the number that were demonstrating until it was reduced to some 15,000. As a matter of fact, 10,000 is too high. None of the big papers, however, narrated the true state of affairs. The right wing was not able to hold a successful demonstration in the halls of New York City but it did manage to hold a fairly successful demonstration in the columns of the capitalist press.

This afforded one more proof, if the workers of New York require it, that the coming of the DAILY WORKER to New York was an imperative necessity in order that they may get the truth told concerning their activities.

The history of the fight to wreck the New York Needle Trades Unions by the humorously named "Committee for Preservation of Trade Unionism" has been a history of successive defeats. When they announced that they had the legitimate leaders of the Joint Board licked, the Shop Chairmen's meeting responded with a unanimous vote of support. When they announced that the rank and file of the International were in revolt against the Joint Board, the rank and file packed Madison Square Garden; and now that they have called a one hour's stoppage and meetings to demonstrate for the expulsion of the Left-Wingers and the Communists, they have succeeded in packing seventeen halls with indignant workers thoroughly aroused and thoroughly determined to carry through a fight to the finish to free the unions from bureaucratic control, gangsterism, splitting and expulsion tactics, and to bring about the amalgamation of all Needle Trades Unions into one powerful organization that will effectively serve their needs.

Will Lore Join the Wolf-Pack?

Everybody is trying to expel the Communists and the left wingers so that labor's organizations may be undisturbed by anyone advocating a militant policy and infusing fighting spirit. Moreover, these left wingers and Communists tend to insist upon rank and file control.

Ludwig Lore appears to want to be in fashion. At the meeting of the Volkszeitung's conference the other night, a committee brought in a proposal to unseat the left wing delegates duly elected by their unions and other working class organizations.

For a long while the Volkszeitung and its distinguished editor have been hovering in mid-air or wandering around in that uncertain no-man's land between Socialism and Communism. His inclinations seem to be leading him ever closer to the former altho his protestations and the pressure of the left wing in the Volkszeitung conference still link him with the latter. Let him but through this expulsion (if the delegates to the Volkszeitung conference permit it) and he severs the last restraining cords. He and his little group could not have chosen a more unfortunate time to attempt an expulsion policy, because it brands them openly as part of the general drive to split the labor movement. It is easy to predict that if these plans go thru the Volkszeitung will soon lose its last vestiges of proletarian policy. But the delegate conference repulsed the first attempt of expulsion and voted a further investigation of the matter. It is to be hoped that the next Volkszeitung conference will overwhelmingly repudiate this attempt to expel the most militant elements from its ranks.

The Working Class Woman

BY VERA BUCH

Age-long oppression has stifled her soul. Nature made her the bearer of life; society has made her the bearer of burdens. The "slave of a slave," she has been shut in by the four walls of the home, among the pots and pans, the cooking and cleaning, the worry to make ends meet. Her husband comes home and vents on her the rage which the oppression of the boss stores up in his own soul. He abuses at the burden of the wife and children whom he must support. Often he breaks loose and deserts them, leaving the poor mother to struggle alone to bring up the little ones.

Low Wages Make Her Work

Now the development of machine production is forcing the woman more and more to go into the factories. She does not go there for a career, like the middle class feminist, filling her leisure time with a profession. She is driven to work by the low wages of the man. The world war, withdrawing men from production, also gave a great impetus to factory labor of women. The bosses love to get the deft hands of women to perform the more and more simple operations with which the worker follows the machine. They love to get them at the low wages for which women, driven by the fear of hunger for their children, unorganized and unprotected, work.

Women are to the bosses a reserve army to keep wages low and break strikes. In Germany today streams of men workers are fired from their jobs, may be seen pouring out of the very factory gate on which is posted a sign, "Female Help Wanted." In this country as in Europe, women are more and more employed in the industries. In the textile they already constitute half the workers.

Takes On Two Jobs

Is the woman freed from the home tasks when she goes into the mill? No, on her return back weighs the burden also. Home life becomes a hell. The house is unkempt, children are neglected, health gives out, love is killed by the cares of existence. In the society of the future, the factory will have nurseries for the children, there will be cooperative dining rooms for the workers, life will be organized communally. Women will then do socially productive work and will be as free as men from the stupid cares of the house. Now we are in a transition period during which the woman must bear a double burden.

Unorganized

The working-class woman is not organized. Eight and a half million work in industry. Barely 4% of these are organized. The housewives are another vast unorganized army. But the women, thanks to oppression and to the forward march of the working class as a whole, are awakening. Labor leaders show the awakening to the necessity for drawing them into the class struggle. Die the women into fight and you have a tremendous new force in any battle of the workers.

A classic instance is a man fights with an enthusiasm and devotion greater than that of a man, she rejoices in her own awakening, in her breaking of the spiritual bonds of ignorance which kept her a slave so long. Now, no longer does she endure everything in patience and silence. She goes out and fights, she learns to attend meetings, to speak, to work to free her class. She struggles for a better world, not only for herself, but for her children who follow her.

They Learn To Fight

Today both women in industry and housewives are beginning to understand and take part in the class struggle. The British miners' wives came forward by thousands to fight side by side with the men. The women and girls in the cloakmakers' and paper box makers' strikes, in the front ranks of the picket lines, met the clubs of the police. Wives of the workers have been drawn into these struggles and organized. In Lawrence, the women, both strikers and strikers' wives, have gone through the terrific struggle of a year's strike against the textile bosses. Brave souls, they have fought against mountainous odds with song and cheer, their hearts lighted by undying faith in the power of their class. These crusaders lead and set the example for the woman of the workingclass everywhere to organize and throw herself into the world-wide battle of the workers for freedom.

Word of Warning From Kenneth Durant

By the way of greeting I offer you New York's twin slogans: "STEP LIVELY!" and WATCH YOUR STEP!

Paste them in your hat.

New York is the welcomingest city that ever was. Jimmie Walker is the City Hall Santa Claus. Channel swimmers and gory queens. Ticker tape and trash. Welcome today, and tomorrow a kick in the pants. The queen didn't get quite that much. Words of welcome don't pay the printer's bill.

You've got to give us news. If you don't, we'll read the Times. Make it short and snappy. If you don't, we'll buy the Tabloids. And, for the love of Mike, write it in English. Or we'll all learn Yiddish and take the Freiheit.—Kenneth Durant, Russian Telegraph Company.

LENIN AND WE

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

What is Lenin to us?

We live in America. The social classes of this country differ in many respects from those of old or new Russia. Our political parties are unlike the parties of any other nation. The immediate problem confronting the political bodies are unique to American. The behavior of the masses bears the imprint of this country. We cannot live by the example of Russia. We cannot follow blindly, the pattern of Russia.

Also Our Revolt

And yet, when we celebrate the memory of Lenin, we pay homage not only to the leader of the Russian revolution. When we study the works of Lenin, we do not do so because we wish to know the history of the movements in other countries. We do so for our own sake. We need Lenin. We need him as much as the Russian proletariat did. We have not the living Lenin, but we have his example. We can utilize his method. We can look up for guidance in almost every situation

The Leader

Lenin is alive to us because he is the great master of class struggle and proletarian organization for power. Lenin is our teacher because, in spite of national variations, the essentials of class-struggle are the same in every country.

We must use the example of Lenin in forecasting the future of the working class. We are told that the working class of this country lacks the class struggle spirit. We are told that socialism is alien to the American worker. Lenin was told worse things. The very existence of a working class was denied in the Russia of the nineties. The Narodniki asserted that modern capitalism was impossible in agricultural Russia based upon communal ownership of land. Lenin fought for eight years (1893-1900) to prove the inevitability of industrialism in Russia. He never despaired. He knew that with industrial progress must come a revolutionary working class. He did not suppose it, he knew it because he was equipped with the Marxian method. Already in 1894 he says that the Russian class-conscious worker "will lead the Russian proletariat to the overthrow of absolutism and then (together with the workers of other countries) towards a Communist revolution."

We Must Learn

We must learn from Lenin how to organize and lead a proletarian party. Before the 1905 revolution Lenin was the first to organize the workers on the basis of their place of work (shop groups, factory nuclei) preceding, as he did, from the idea that it is in the industrial establishment that the worker meets directly with the capitalist forces. When the revolution collapsed, when Romanov absolutism was once more victorious, when hundreds were being hanged before sunrise and thousands sent to prison and exile, when the Menshevik were ready to give up revolutionary underground organization and to become pure "parliamentarians" within the narrow limits of the Romanov mock constitution, Lenin was unshaken. The revolutionary organization he taught, must not be abandoned.

Seek Allies

The revolutionary party, however, small in numbers, must, he said, ally itself with all the workers' organizations, with all the political societies, like

BIG STRUGGLE LOOMS AT MINERS' CONVENTION

20,000 Cheer Lenin At "The Garden"

Workers Party Meeting Welcomes DAILY WORKER on Famous Anniversary

In Lenin's honor, on the third anniversary of his death, and the twenty-second anniversary of Bloody Sunday, twenty thousand New York workers crowded into Madison Square Garden last Saturday night. It is considered the largest demonstration on Lenin Day thus far witnessed in America.

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

At least twenty thousand New York workers crowded into the gigantic arena at Madison Square Garden last Saturday night to honor the memory of Nikolai Lenin, the greatest leader of the revolutionary workers that history has thrown up. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party and aside from honoring Lenin's memory the meeting greeted the transfer of The DAILY WORKER from Chicago to New York.

POLICEMEN were there in scores but they had nothing more serious to perform in the matter of duty than indulging in innocent "kidding" of young girls who felt called upon to lecture the policemen on whatever subject that appealed to them. "You must admit," said one limb of the law, "that these people stick together." "Sure," said another policeman: "What do we sell? These fellows inside here are selling off a big racket, but they get for themselves, same as every-

Of the thousands of workers gathered inside the big auditorium were not there for themselves alone. It is true that they would not be there, that they would not be in the movement unless such activity gave them pleasure but the outstanding fact is that they have developed a social conscience which is all the more thrilling because it is directed into a workingclass channel. Revolutionists do not feel that they are sacrificing anything. They are not. All people either do what they want or do what they cannot avoid. Why plant the laurels on their brows?

TO see twenty thousand revolutionary workers in a monster mass meeting which went thru its program without a hitch is an inspiring scene. The workers maintained order—an easy task. Not an individual stood to gain anything in a material sense (I am speaking of money or its equivalent) from the meeting, yet each one collected more satisfaction out of the success of the affair than could be purchased for hundreds of dollars. Pity the poor devil who was once a radical and has lost faith. Nothing remains for him but the river. Unfortunately those of little faith find the water too cold.

WHEN the papers announced that the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor joined with the beaktrupt socialist leaders in the needle trades unions in a war on the Communists, people expected that the workers would come in their thousands to express their hostility to radicalism. The capitalist press did the best it could to help the socialists. All the arrangements were perfect. Halls were large and spacious. The orators were on hand. The police were there to protect the faithful from the radicals. Only the workers were missing. They went to hear the radicals at counter-demonstrations. Which proves that the active workers follow the radicals. The inactive workers stay at home unless they are forced to show their loyalty at the point of a gun or at the threat of a pulsating pay check.

A SURGEON on the United States Liner President Roosevelt had a busy time while returning from Europe. He treated a few patients on other ships by radio but unfortunately for Gert Neiderlander, he was on the same ship with the surgeon and was not saved by long distance. The surgeon took his life. If there is a moral to this story it is that passengers should use the radio. Do doctors know anything about medicine or the art of healing? They do, but they are more efficient bill collectors than Welcome DAILY WORKER.

The meeting was advertised as also a welcome to The DAILY WORKER and the great audience was enthusiastic about that, too.

Every reference to the arrival of "The DAILY" in New York, the announcement that beginning with Monday's issue it would appear regularly on the New York news stands, and the auctioning off—Maisnaye Olgin, auctioneer—of the first autographed copy of the special Madison Square Souvenir Edition, was greeted with vociferous joy.

Other copies, also hot from the press, were sold by the thousands thru the audience.

Ovation For Lenin's Name.

Chairman William Weinstone in the first few words of his introductory address, "Lenin Day," struck the keynote that prevailed thru the meeting. At his first mention of Lenin—prolonged applause.

When he said "DAILY WORKER," loud and sustained applause. Cheering and applause when China was spoken of, when Marx's name was first heard, when he began to talk of the Russian revolution. The declaration that this enormous meeting was held under the auspices of District 2 of the Workers (Communist)

Leninism In America.

"Lenin is looked upon by some as belonging to the European proletariat, and as one whose teachings do not apply in bourgeois America," said Weinstone.

"But when the American workers are ready to establish their dictatorship of the proletariat, the name of Lenin will be on their lips, and Leninism will be their inspiration."

Weinstone introduced J. Louis Engdahl as "Comrade, the Editor of The DAILY WORKER."

Leninism In China.

Engdahl described the world-wide nature of the celebration of Lenin day, and the reasons for it. "It is no accident," said The DAILY WORKER editor, "that the trade union council is troubled and revolting Shanghai has announced that the trade unions of that city are celebrating Lenin day."

He described the effect of Leninism on the workers' movements, and told the history of the Russian revolution by way of illustration. It was

ARBITRATION IN NICARAGUA URGED BY GUATEMALA

American Bayonets Will Decide the Question

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 23.—Guatemala has again offered its good offices in the controversy between President Diaz of Nicaragua, supported by American bayonets, and President Sacasa, supported by the Nicaraguan people.

While Coolidge is willing to listen to arbitration proposals in Nicaragua, he spurns arbitration in Mexico. United States marines are planted in Nicaragua and they intend to stay there. The decision of any arbitration committee that would not be favorable to Diaz would be spurned by the American government. There are no United States marines in Mexico yet.

The conduct of Senator Borah in acquiescing to the administration policy in Mexico and Nicaragua, outside of an ineffectual effort in the senate, has disappointed liberals who usually mistake sound for sincerity.

Borah roared for an hour and a half for the benefit of the Idaho voters and then announced that Coolidge must be allowed to work out his policy.

Manufacturers, Army, Navy, Write $20,000 Brief Against Labor

National employers' organizations are asking the Hall against further labor legislation in New York, one of the most important industrial states. The $20,000 brief of the national industrial conference board, prepared for the associated industries of New York, to present before the legislature's industrial survey commission, shows this. The conference board has affiliated with it all the big national manufacturers' organizations, together with army and navy ordnance departments, army air and military intelligence services.

The conference board brief attempts to show that New York's present labor legislation has placed the state at a competitive disadvantage and that more labor legislation would make the situation worse. The brief indirectly pays tribute to the comparatively advanced legislation organized labor has largely aided in securing in the state.

PICKETING SHOPS THAT DISCHARGED FOES OF SIGMAN

Joint Board Reiterates Challenge to Audit

Picketing begins this morning in front of six cloak shops which have been called on strike by the Joint Board of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union because they have discharged workers who refused to register with the International Union.

[illegible] eral manager of the joint board, these strikes are being called to protect the interests of the workers whom the International Union is trying to persecute in this way, for their allegiance to the joint board and local officials who represent them.

Workers the Victims.

"The international officers, caring not for the workers but only for maintaining themselves in power, are using the employers in an effort to force union members to register with them," says Mr. Hyman.

"They are willing to take the bread and butter out of the workers' mouths in order to further their own interests. They think that the weapon of hunger will force the cloakmakers to surrender to their traitorous leadership.

Joint Board Protects.

"But the cloakmakers' joint board will fight for the workers' interests against these employers, who are allied with the International officials, just as we have fought, continually, the battle of the members of the union against Sigman and his clique, who have usurped power and are trying to take the union away from the mass of the workers who have built it."

Want Complete Audit.

Mr. Hyman today expressed once more the joint board's willingness to have an audit of its expenditures, adding.

"But we want an audit of the books for the past five years, and we also demand an audit of the books of the international office for the same period.

"It would be of great interest to the entire membership to know just how the 15c per capita tax is expended, and what was done with the special $2.50 tax levied, supposedly for a strike, just before the workers' demands were turned over to the Governor's Commission in 1924."

Dock Worker Fractures Skull; Fifth Serious Accident This Week

While repairing the hold of the S. S. Aaina, Pier 54, East River, Victor Nicoletti, 22, of West New York, slipped from the ladder on which he was standing and fell to the deck. He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital suffering from a fractured skull.

Special Passaic Edition

On the anniversary of the outbreak of the greatest textile strike in America, The DAILY WORKER will have tomorrow special articles on Passaic. The strike is winning—you will want to know why. Buy a DAILY WORKER and find out.

Coolidge Not Willing To Arbitrate

May Fight To Preserve "Property Rights"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 23.—Pres. Coolidge is decidedly opposed to the arbitration of the matters at issue between the United States and Nicaragua and the United States and Mexico, Political observers here take this to mean that Wall Street is of the opinion that it stands to gain more by straight negotiation than by bringing in a third party.

Calvin Coolidge, alias the "official spokesman," gave out the word that what the United States government was concerned with was "confiscation of property" in the Mexican situation. In Nicaragua the Coolidge administration has not any kind of a plausible excuse outside of warships.

The Clash At Washington

Developments in Washington touching on the Central American situation are:

A resolution introduced by Senator Robinson providing for the submission of differences between the United States and Mexico to an arbitral tribunal, Mexico in the meantime refraining from confiscating property until after the question has been arbitrated.

Senator Frazier of North Dakota introduced a resolution expressing opposition to the dispatch of warships and troops to Mexico or to the Mexican border during the recess of congress.

Senator Borah considered an opponent of administration policy continued to play the usual role of [illegible] policy. Borah favors the Robinson resolution which is satisfactory to the administration.

Reed Supports "Cal"

Senator Reed of Missouri, a democratic critic of the administration program giving a free hand to Coolidge in his Latin American policy.

From what can be gathered here the administration does not want to create the impression in Latin America that its hands are tied by a refractory senate. The general belief is that war is not an immediate probability but Coolidge wants to give Latin America the impression that the United States will not stop short of war to protect the interests of Wall Street.

Coolidge made it quite clear that he would continue to prop up president Diaz of Nicaragua on his usurped presidential throne regardless of what sundry orators in the senate thot.

At the moment Wall Street's policy is on the top of the heap in Washington.

So far William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor has not protested against the attack on the rights of the Nicaraguan people nor against the threatened war on Mexico.

Says Daily Worker is Smasher of Shams

I greet the first New York issue of the "Daily Worker".

The "Daily Worker" is the only daily newspaper in the English language that voices the protest of the workers against the domination of capitalist rule, and against corrupt and bureaucratic trade union leadership. Together with the "Freiheit", the "Daily Worker" will help the New York workers to smash trade union bureaucracy and amalgamate their unions into strong instruments for their daily struggle with the employers for a better life. The "Daily Worker" will help the workers free themselves from capitalist domination.—Aaron Gross, Business Agent, New York Joint Board, Furriers Union.

COMMUNIST LEADERSHIP IN STRIKES

The current number of the United Mine Workers' Journal carries an article purporting to prove that Communist leadership in strikes means disaster for the strikers. Mr. Lewis' editor is, however, somewhat unfortunate in his selection of examples to prove his case.

Lewis starts out by boasting that the anthracite strike ended in a victory for the miners. We will allow the anthracite coal diggers to get a hearty laugh out of this lying boast and let it go at that.

The three failures that Lewis chalks up against the Communists are: British miners' strike, the Passaic strike and the New York cloakmakers' strike.

Let us tak ethe British miners' strike first. That strike was practically won when the misers were betrayed by the right wing British labor leaders, men of the same type as John L. Lewis. They suddenly cancelled the general strike called by the trade unionists to help the miners, and these traitors spent the rest of their time abusing the leaders of the miners' federation. Lewis showers abuse on Cook because he fought. He and his tribe have nothing but praise for the leaders that surrendered.

It is true that the Passaic strike was led by Communists. They "organized" it. From the inception of the strike the leaders tried to get the American Federation of Labor interested in it but only when the sentiment throughout the labor movement became so overwhelmingly in favor of the strikers did the A. F. of L. take action. Matthew Woll, a vice president of the A. F. of L., issued several interviews in which he denounced the strikers but not the employers.

Due to the militancy of the Passaic strike leaders the workers in several mills won substantial victories including the right to organize. But for the activity of the Communists there would be no A. F. of L. Unions in the Passaic textile mills today.

The story of how the cloakmakers' strike was sabotaged by the right wing labor leaders makes painful reading.

The reactionaries from the yellow socialists to the bureaucrats of the A. F. of L. council joined in an unholy alliance against the workers, resorting to every trick in their bag to assist the strike. Failing to intimidate the workers by the use of thugs and police, they proceeded to split the union, a policy which they are continuing with a demoralizing effect on the organization.

The [illegible] who, [illegible] official organ, consciously slandering Communists in saying that Communists "never won a strike anywhere" but it can be stated that the only outstanding victories in recent years were those won by the furriers of New York and by the Passaic strikers. Both were under Communist leadership.

VISIT OF GREEN WITH WALKER IN MYSTERY SHROUD

Mayor Not Available For Statement

No confirmation could be obtained yesterday of the press announcement that William Green, president of the A. F. of L. and Vice-President Woll, also Acting-President of the National Civic Federation, were to be conducted to Mayor Walker thi smorning in order—as on of the New York papers expresses it—"to present him with evidence in connection with Communists' charges that members of the police force were bribed during the last strike of fur workers in this city".

Walker Dodges Giving Views.

Efforts to question Mayor Walker or his secretary about this matter yesterday were unavailing, as both were reported to be "in conference". Inuiries at te hotel where r. Green usually stays in this city disclosed the fact that the Federation president was not there, and was not expected.

In the meantime there is a persistent rumor that Joseph P Ryan, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council of this city, and other officials of that body, have been called to appear this morning before District Attorney Banton in connection with these charges made by American Federation of Labor officials against members of the police force.

It was Mr. Ryan who denied Vice-President Woll's statement that the police had been bribed by the striking fur workers. This was especially significant since Mr. Ryan himself was a member of the committee, headed by Mr. Woll, which carried on the so-called investigation of the furrier's strike and its expenditures.

Perhaps Mr. Woll treated members of the committee as he did the officers of the Joint Board of the Furriers Union.

According to Ben Gold, Manager of the Joint oBard, when Mr. Woll's committee had finished its questioning of union officers, the minutes were never submitted to the union for correction as had been promised

Most Critical Gathering of Union's History

Delegates Will Attack Official Mismanagement

By JACK KENNEDY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 23.—With hundreds of delegates converging on this city from every union mining district of the United States and Canada, lines were being drawn today for the most critical convention in the history of the United Mine Workers of America.

From eastern, central and western Pennsylvania, from far away Nova Scotia and Alberta, from nearby Illinois and a dozen other mining states the delegates[illegible]bore down upon Indianapolis. On the busy streets they were easily identified, not by badges, but by faces seamed with the telltale blueblack marks where powder had burned its way into the flesh.

Lewis Uses Booze

A score of conferences were under way as progressive and machine forces laid down programs and outlined convention policies upon which hangs the fate of the greatest industrial union in America.

While liquor flowed freely in hotel rooms as "regular" delegates were being told what they were to do in return for their convention execution, progressives and left wing forces gathered in earnest groups to determine the line of action planned to save the Miners' Union from the disastrous policy of President John L. Lewis.

Union Split?

Almost exactly three years ago the last miners' convention met here. Eighteen hundred delegates representing 400,000 coal diggers in every mining district on the continent north of the Rio Grande opened that convention with the union at the height of its power. Today great gaps were apparent, with West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Oklahoma and other districts represented only by fully handed "international representatives." Optimistic predictions of total delegate strength ranged from 1,000 to 1,500 while outside limits of union membership were set at 250,000.

In those fateful three years in which the destiny of the Miners' Union had been entrusted to "Emperor" Lewis, West Virginia with its 100,000 and more miners had been completely lost. Central and western Pennsylvania had suffered staggering losses, entire states west of the Mississippi had been lost to unionism while promising holds on Kentucky and Tennessee had completely slipped

Delegates Angry

To say left wing delegates were in an angry mood is understating the case. Realizing the desperate plight of their beloved organization, knowing full well that continued control by "Emperor" Lewis means the death of the union in the soft coal districts of Pennsylvania and Ohio, the progressive forces were determined on a battle to the finish to save the union from impending annihilation.

This 30th consecutive and seventh biennial convention, opening tomorrow, is scheduled to be in session until February 5. Its main immediate business is to decide upon demands to be laid before operators when union representatives meet them February 14. This conference, to be held probably on Florida's gold coast where A. F. of L. and U. M. W. A. officials love to disport themselves, will try to negotiate an agreement to succeed the famous Jacksonville agreement, which lapses on March 1. If no agreement

ST. LOUIS SPEECH ORDERS INVADERS TO LEAVE CHINA

Soo Ke Sze, Minister to U. S. Talks Plain

—ST. LOUIS, Mo.—In an address with irony and humor, and quiet warning, Soo-Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Minister to the United States told the Second Trade Conference of the Western Imperialists would have to get out of China, dead or alive.

"The Chinese people with practical unanimity feel that they have been unjustly treated and unfairly taken advantage of by other peoples. From their experience during the past eighty-five years they find that the extraterritorial regime imperilizes the country, demoralizes the people and weakens the hold of the government on the nation. In other words, they object to the unequal regime whereby a small minority of foreigners in China arrogate to themselves a position superior to the native Chinese, and under which they claim political immunities and special commercial and industrial advantages far superior to those of the native Chinese . . . As long as extraterritoriality in China persists, important and great reforms will be hindered and prevented from bearing fruit.

"The powers have all said that they recognize the present situation as unfair and unjust to China and some of them also said that they do not wish to retain anything against China's will. So far so good, but we would like to see the fulfilment of these high-sounding declarations. So far as the Chinese are concerned their mind is made up that all the unequal treaties must go. The handwriting as to this is on the wall. This may not happen today or tomorrow, this week or next week, this month or next month, but it is bound to come soon.

"So far as the powers are concerned they have two courses to take. They may do nothing which is generally described as the 'wait and see' policy. This attitude may be compared to Nero fiddling while Rome burns. This policy means that conditions will become worse and worse until China denounces unilaterally all the unequal treaties and then the Powers will have to face an accomplished fact. The other course for the Powers to do is to take the initiative and declare forthwith their readiness to end all unequal treaties and to negotiate new ones in their place on a basis of complete quality and reciprocity. This course will give to the Powers graciousness in the granting of the Chinese demands. Under the first course their concession will have the appearance of compelled action."

Vandervelde Machine Compels Socialists To Aid Belgian Ruler

BRUSSELS, Belgium.—The chief question at the special congress of the Belgian Labor Party which met towards the end of last December was the relation of the Socialists to the government. The debate on this matter was long and intense.

M. Vandervelde stated that the stability of the franc must be looked upon as the supreme consideration. A government either of the Right or of the Left would endanger enew the stability of the franc and must therefore be avoided. The only solution, he said, is for the Socialists to maintain the coalition and stay in the government, provided the government could be prevailed upon to accept a solid reformist program.

Vandervelde's view was supported mainly by the trade union leaders and by the Labor Minister, M. Wauters, who maintained that "the Labor interests could be better served during the coming crisis if the Socialist ministers remained in the government."

The left wing position was espoused by the Deputies Mathieu, Brunfaut and Senator de Brouckere, who maintained that the Socialist Party, as well as the parliament, had capitulated before the bankers, who had become the real masters of the country.

De Brouckere stated that Socialism in Belgium and elsewhere was at the parting of the ways—either to continue the struggle for the emancipation of labor or else to accommodate itself to the capitalist system and the needs of the ruling classes.

Finally, the Resolutions Committee proposed unanimously (against de Brouckere) a resolution along the lines of Vandervelde's proposal authorizing the General Council to continue in the Coalition Government. Whatever left sentiment there was at the convention was squashed under the steam roller of the Vandervelde machine.

And Now He's Fired

"What do you mean by whistling like that in this office?" demanded the boss.

"Well, sir, I thought I'd like you to know that I'm bearing up cheerful in spite of my miserable salary," answered the clerk.

20,000 IN CHICAGO RESOLVE AGAINST YANKEE INTERVENTION

The Mexican Department meeting in honor of Lenin, against American Imperialism, and for The DAILY WORKER, adopted the following resolution, unanimously:

American Imperialism on the eve of the recognition of the United States Government by the Central American gang in far off China show that this government is determined to impose the rule of the American financial interests in these countries.

The United States Government has flagrantly violated the independence of Nicaragua by setting up and recognizing the Diaz Government established by the American commercial interests and by invading the territory of the republic with marines to support the continuance of this regime by force of arms.

The United States Government is brazenly threatening the sovereignty of the Mexican Republic because the people of Mexico have dared to declare the natural resources of their country the property of the Mexican people. In its threats of war against Mexico it is carrying out the demands of the Wall Street oil and other interests in Mexico and clutches the Mexican people are aiming to wrest the control of their country.

The great masses of the Chinese people are rising against the imperialist powers of the world who have held their country in bondage for many years. The United States Government together with the British, Japanese and other imperialist powers are hastening armies and fleets to China to thwart the revolutionary national forces who are battling to free their country from the capitalist domination of foreign imperialist powers.

We, the twenty thousand workers of New York, assembled this day in Madison Square Garden at a Lenin Memorial meeting, send fraternal greetings to the workers and peasants of our neighboring Central-American countries who are fighting American imperialism and who are valiantly resisting the present attack of the American government at the command of Wall Street.

We also send our fraternal greetings to the workers and peasants of China and express our joy at their victories over the combined forces of world imperialism.

We pledge ourselves to rouse the workers of America to the support of the subject peoples who are struggling to free themselves from imperialist domination.

We demand that the United States government keep its hands off Nicaragua, Mexico, and China.

We demand the immediate withdrawal by the United States Government of American soldiers and marines occupying foreign territories.

20,000 CHEER LENIN MEMORIAL IN MADISON SQUARE

Lenin's clear realisation of the situation which enabled the Russian workers to transform the bourgeois revolution of March, 1917, into a successful proletarian revolt. .

Sigman: "Soo—o—!"

Engdahl called for mass support for The DAILY WORKER in this crisis in the unions of New York. The audience loudly booed the names of Sigman, Hillman, Green and all reactionary leaders as they were mentioned by this speaker and succeeding speakers.

Wm. Z. Foster, the next speaker, was cheered until he was forced to pause in his speech when he started to analyze the New York situation, and first uttered the words." Left Wing Furriers."

Foster Speaks.

"The life of the organized labor movement in America is at stake," said Foster. "The struggle in New York, and in the needle trades generally, is the development of a struggle that pervades almost the whole field of unionism. In the United Mine Workers, the reactionary president, Lewis, is following a policy that must wreck the union if it prevails. In all unions where the fight is on, the left wing struggles to preserve the organization, and to make them useful to the workers.

"The bureaucrats, like Sigman, sitting in his office and trying to win the masses back by fifty-cent membership books, will fail. Their tactics of expulsion will fail. When Sigman expels the left wing, he has no union left for himself. There is a group of workers, the center of resistance to the union wrecking policies of the reactionaries, and this group is Leninist. The Workers Party of America raises the standards of resistance."

Lenin Gives Advice.

Molinaaye Olgin spoke of the struggling workers of America, as standing before the grave of Lenin, with heads bowed and backs unbent, for they know that altho Lenin is dead, Leninism lives," and asking his advice in the present crisis—numbers of militants too few, intense reaction against them by all the forces of capitalism, betrayal of workers' interest by the corrupt labor bureaucracy backed by the yellow socialist press, and in that nest of reaction, the Vorwarts.

Lenin answers thru his deeds and writings, said Olgin, and reminds the American workers that all these things were known in Czarist Russia, and the Russia of Kerensky. We have the yellow socialists, but Lenin and Bolshevism crushed the Menaheviks. We have Sigman and others in Europe—they had Kautsky and others.

"Go to the Masses."

"In 1914 Lenin said," Olgin reminded the audience, "only the arts-tocracy and the bureaucracy of labor have made peace with the bourgeoisie. Go to the masses; And that is good advice to the comrades in America."

One way to go to the masses, Olgin pointed out, is thru the press. The New York workers also read Jewish have the daily Freiheit, and other papers. But that is not enough. There must be a daily in the English language here, and now we have it.

The Youth Are Here.

Sam Don, New York organizer for the Young Workers Communist League, spoke on one of the lessons of Leninism, which means to unite all oppressed sections of society against their common enemy, and specially the oppressed proletarians, and among these, not to forget the young workers, sometimes especially oppressed.

Comrade Scott Nearing.

Scott Nearing was introduced as "yesterday our friend, today our comrade." He got a royal welcome. He urged all workers to join the Workers (Communist) Party of America and in a short talk on the recent aspects of American imperialism in America, called on all to recognize that Coolidge, spokesman for American big business, describes the issue as one of private property, and refuses to arbitrate in Mexico, refuses to cease the invasion of Nicaragua.

"The issue is one of stocks and bonds against humanity. President Calles of Mexico says that he fights for a greater life and a broader freedom for the common man. We must say to Coolidge, if this is the case, as you and Calles say, then we are for the oppressed peoples of Latin America, and we are against you."

He also called for complete support of The DAILY WORKER, which will oppose imperialism in America.

Hathaeberg Describes Party Role.

The last speaker on the program was C. E. Ruthenberg, Secretary of the Workers Party. He is still under sentence of from five to ten years, as a result of the Bridgeman frame-up. He told of the difference between the old revolution and the present one.

Where formerly we had blind protests, brought on by starvation and intolerable oppression, now we have intelligent, organized and class conscious revolutions.

There is now a science of which the founder was Karl Marx. Lenin continued the work, developed Marxism with special application to the world of great capitalism, and imperialism. Furthermore, Leninism resulted in concrete application; we have the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, the constant model and inspiration of the toiling masses everywhere, and a dagger lying at the heart of capitalism.

Russian Party Iron Rod.

"The Russian Communist Party is the iron rod stiffening the battalions of the Red Army when it repelled armed counter-revolution and imperialist invasion, and the solid heart of the present successful movement to solve industrial problems in Russia," said Ruthenberg. "We must build our own party, for the same purpose. We will fight Sigman and Hillman, yet, but we will go on to fight a greater reaction, that of Morgan and Rockefeller." He, too, called for complete support for The DAILY WORKER.

Telegrams from the left wing needle trades workers now in prison were sent. Resolutions condemning American imperialism in Nicaragua and Mexico was adopted with a whoop.

A feature of the celebration was the cheering in unison of the Young Pioneers, in their red sashes. The musical program included selections by the Freiheit Singing Society, Russian Male Singers Quartet, Ivan Velikanoff, tenor, and Mischa Mischakoff, violinist.

VERY TALK OF PAN-AMERICAN LABOR BUREAU

Kellogg Tries to Make Initiation of League

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—(FP)—Denial that any proposal has been put forward for the creation of a Pan-American Labor Bureau, similar in function to the International Labor Office of the League of Nations at Geneva, is made at the office of Director Rowe of the Pan-American Union.

"Red A. F. of L."

Reports were recently current in Washington that Secretary Kellogg had proposed that the Latin American republics agree with the United States to establish such a labor bureau, which would tend to reduce the attention given by the public to statements made by the Soideristicic Pan-American Federation of Labor. It was also asserted that Kellogg proposed that a Pan-American Court be established, and that the United States be given an unconditional most-favored-nation commercial treaty with each of the Latin American countries.

It appears that these reports were based on the fact that the governing board of the Pan-American Union, of which the Secretary of State is chairman, has drafted a proposal that the Union be put on a treaty or convention basis. It is now on a basis of resolution and of executive rather than congressional consent in each country.

Debate Treaty

The proposal that a treaty be entered into, between all the member nations, establishing the Union more permanently, will be debated at the next conference of the Union, to be held at Havana in January, 1928. Debate on a similar issue at the Santiago conference of 1923, the last one held, failed to lead to agreement. At Santiago, also, the Pan-American treaty idea was proposed by Costa Rica. The conference voted to create a Commission of Jurists which will meet in Rio de Janeiro on April 17, 1927, to consider the matter and report to the Havana conference of next year.

Some of the Latin American republics have already served notice that no such court is needed. They point to the quick death of the Court of Central America when that tribunal decided that the Nicaraguan-American treaty, protested by Honduras and Salvador, was valid. The point also to the existence of a world court established by the League of Nations.

International Gang Starts Fight With Dress Shop Pickets

Three dressmakers were attacked and badly beaten by gangsters of the International when they attempted to picket their dress shop, the I. M. Raffer shop at 201 West 36th Street; on Wednesday morning. J. Kleinman, Local 2 and E. Rosenfeld and Alexander Tanborine of Local 22 received severe injuries.

The Raffner Dress shop went on strike when three workers were discharged because they refused to "register" with the International which is attempting to force workers to sign as its supporters by terrorist methods. Picketing began on Wednesday morning and they had been walking only a short time when attacked by the gangsters. Police interfered, and stopped the fight. There are about sixty workers in the Reffner shop.

Virgin Islanders Plead Against Navy Rule

NEW YORK CITY.—Declaring the navy government of the Islands to be responsible for "depopulation and economic distress," 600 Virgin Islanders living in New York sent a petition to Congress complaining of their condition and attacking the navy government. This petition will be read in arguments before the senate committee on insular affairs, which is holding its hearing on the Virgin Islands.

Novy Mir Welcomes Us to New York Field

Welcome to our colleague, The DAILY WORKER. It is badly needed in New York, and The NOVY MIR greets it with appreciation of the service it can render here.—PETER OMELIAN, of The Novy Mir.

NEW YORK (F.P.).—Gains of the Amalgamated Bank, first labor bank to be established in New York, were reported at the stockholders' meeting in the new building on Union Square. The total resources of the bank have grown to $8,466,000, a gain of $5,818,000 from the total resources reported at the first annual meeting January 1, 1924. Depositors in the same period have increased from 6,478 to 14,708 and the total deposits are nearly $8,000,000.

Chinese Workers Who Accept Leadership of Lenin March Forward

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE New York Times urges an American imperialist attitude toward China contained in these words:

"This is no time either for undignified efforts of propitiation or for the use of force."

That is a rather healthy attitude for the imperialists on the day following the wide distribution by the Shanghai General Labor Union of a leaflet commemorating the anniversary of Lenin's death and calling on the workers of China to continue fighting for Lenin's principles and the furtherance of the revolution in China and thruout the world. It is not that the "dollar diplomats" call "watchful waiting"

But this does not mean that Imperialism surrenders the least bit in its ambitions to maintain its profit grip upon the Chinese nation. The venomous serpent merely recoils in the hope of soon being able to strike again. To scotch the hydra-headed reptile is as much the concern of American labor as it is of the Chinese people.

Battleships of many bandit nations, especially of the United States and Great Britain, are converging on China. It is the obvious intention to crush every attempt, if possible, of the Chinese revolutionists to take over their own seaports. They have already learned that the avalanche of opposition to imperialist rule is so great in the interior that any attempt to hold the great inland cities of China would be another Napoleon's march on Moscow, with the difference that the Chinese cities would persist, while the invading hosts would be utterly destroyed. The New York Times again declares:

"Under these circumstances the policy of the United States government to withdraw its nationals from places of danger and to defend them if they are attacked at one or two points of concentration at Shanghai and Tientsin (seaport of Peking) is wise. To endeavor to protect them in the interior is as impolitic as it would be difficult. . . Despite the fact that she (Great Britain) was apparently abandoned her concession in Hankow, she is planning to make a stand at Shanghai, which place she is concentrating most of the British nationals who have been living in the Yangtse Valley."

But the Times is quick to add that, "Our policy of benevolent inaction should not be taken to imply an abandonment of our rights".

The only right that Wall Street imperialism exists in China is the right to profitably invest its surplus wealth stolen from labor at home, thus still further enriching itself. On this basis, despite the fact that the world find a common basis of struggle, linking the warships of all the profit nations in one common army against the aspiring Chinese people.

In this crisis the smokescreen of propaganda, that seeps its way over the pages of the bought press tries to hide the main issue behind the continued shriek of "the protection of American lives".

At this writing the latest headline screams, "'Death to all christians' cry Chinese mobs". This is merely another version of Coolidge's repeated barrage of "protect American lives and property" to hide the real depredations of the American dollar in Mexico and Nicaragua.

Too long the Chinese have refused to perceive in the christian missionary the advance agent of American business. The profiteers have taken full advantage of this situation. On the bloody bayonet's point of the Opium War, the British carried white civilization, christian civilization to the Chinese. The United States joined in the procession of plunderers, evidently believing that the Chinese would remain helplessly drugged forever. Now that the Chinese have not only discovered the fraud of "white civilization" but also the fraud of "christianity" in the pay of the dollar, it is not to be expected that they will be gentle in retaliation. Yet it may be taken for granted that the so-called "atrocities" charged to the Chinese, the much-heralded "Chinese mobs", the dragging of women thru the streets, and other "horrors" a re mere myths coined by imaginative correspondents who know that the home consumption of this kind of stuff is without limit.

The Chinese revolutionists know that they have nothing to gain by slaying the white civilizers, whose favorite weapon is murder, an opportunity to arouse anti-Chinese prejudice at home, and an excuse for sending more warships and more soldiers against their own meager military resources.

In spite of the christian mask worn by the imperialists, the Chinese made no war on christianity. Theirs is a struggle of workers against exploiters, a national revolution to shake off the clutches of foreign imperialism. The textile mills of Shanghai, where Chinese labor was tortured by the long workday, bitterly low wages and unbearable conditions, helped create the condition that is unifying the Chinese working class as a fighting weapon for labor's emancipation.

Shanghai labor has accepted Lenin's leadership on the third anniversary of our revolutionary leader's death. That bodes ill for the oppressers. It is a sure indication that Chinese labor as a result, in common with world labor, will have greater victories to record, more progress to review on the occasion of the fourth anniversary of Lenin's death, one year hence.

UNITED MINERS' CONVENTION CERTAIN TO BE SCENE OF FIGHT TO SAVE THE UNION

is reached, union soft coal miners may strike on April 1.

Can't Rely On Lewis

But left wing miners, with the lesson of Lewis' terrible record of the past three years in their minds, know that to entrust in his hands full authority for the future of the union means a continuation of the rapid decline in membership and power. Whether Lewis chooses a dicker with the operators of the so-called central competitive district, western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois or chooses a strike, they see danger so long as he is at the helm.

Having lost West Virginia, the key to the American coal industry, Lewis has seriously impaired the strength of the union, they assert. The only way to stave off worse defeat is to give power to the honest pro-union forces in the miners' organization.

Will Put Him On Pan

Lewis will be asked point blank why his policies have led to the loss of West Virginia. He will be asked to explain, if possible, his refusal to conduct a smashing campaign among the exploited coal diggers of America's most notorious industrial feudalism. He will be asked why hundreds of thousands of dollars have been squandered on supporting lame ducks and idle international representatives in this pivotal state.

Not only Lewis' blunder, pomposity and fascist tactics will avail him when he is called upon to render an account of his stewardship to delegates. His gang will be faced from the floor with the determination and hard-hitting of a group of progressives as ever wrestled for the integrity and preservation of an international trade union in American labor history.

Investigate Election Steal

While the organization problem is the outstanding convention issue, the theft of the late election from the progressive Brophy-Brennan-Stevenson ticket, the expulsion of militant union leaders, the failure of "Emperor" Lewis and his satellites to carry out the many previous conventions for nationalization of coal mines, for a Labor Party and the support of amalgamation in the American Federation of Labor—all points of such paramount importance that every delegates ar edemanding a showdown.

The first big fight of the convention may be precipitated tomorrow when the credentials committee reports. The administration gang is understood to have plans to exclude from the convention many of the best fighters the union possesses. This issue will be met head-on and the most important convention in the miners' history will be called on at the very start to decide the issue between "Emperor Lewis and union defeat or honest, militant control and the preservation of the union.

Daily Worker Alright Say Cloakmakers

The publication of The DAILY WORKER in New York City is a genuine achievement of the left wing in the labor movement. Never more than now has there been a real need for a militant labor daily in this metropolis, the battleground for countless labor struggles. It is a special necessity at the present time, when there is a united front of the enemies of labor against the militant left wing in the workers' battles. I greet you, congratulating you upon your enterprise.—A. Zirlis, Manager of Local 9, I. L. G. W. U.

COOLIDGE POLICY TOWARDS MEXICO THREATENS WAR

Arbitration Proposal Treated With Reserve

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 23.—Danger of hostility between the United States and Mexico has been brought perceptibly nearer by the attitude of President Coolidge against the arbitration of the matters at issue between the two countries.

The general belief here is that Coolidge is waiting for an excuse of some sort—the old reliable "overt act"—to start hostilities. His first move, it is expected, will be the raising of the arms embargo, which will enable the Knights of Columbus in the United States and the oil companies to supply the reactionaries with arms.

Mexico For Peace.

The Mexican government is decidedly in favor of a peaceable adjustment of the differences between the imperialist government of the United States and the Mexican republic, but is not willing to surrender the liberties of the Mexican people to the interests of Wall Street.

It appears that Wall Street has insisted that Coolidge go thru with the plan to force Calles to surrender or else aid in the plan of having the government overthrown by a combination of oil magnates and its government in alliance with the catholic church machine in the United States.

Recognition Without Strings.

While Coolidge claims that the Warren-Payne agreement to recognize the Mexican government was contingent on certain concessions to the American petroleum interests in Mexico, Calles insists that recognition was accorded without any such strings outside of conventions which were not incorporated in a treaty and are therefore not binding on the government.

The Mexican government seems determined to stick to its policy of putting its land and petroleum decrees in operation.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 23.—Archbishop Diaz, expelled from Mexico, will sail from his temporary refuge in Guatemala for Cuba next Tuesday, according to an authoritative message received here this afternoon. He will proceed from Cuba to the United States, where he is expected to urge the United States government to break off relations with Mexico.

The mass meeting was held under the auspices of a new organization, The Committee of One Hundred, composed of white and negro men prominent in the community.

The government has ordered the confiscation of the property of all rebels in arms and those found to be acting with the fascist organization of the catholic church. The property will be sold and the proceeds used to pay debts of the nation.

Large numbers of rebels are surrendering daily and informing the government that they were induced to revolt against the government by catholic priests.

Approximately 10,000 foreigners had complied with the Alien Land law by midnight on January 21, the dead line for registration under the government decree. Many registrations were mailed from abroad.

A decree permitting a former president to run for office again was signed by President Calles yesterday. The action makes General Obregon's election almost certain.

The Federal District Supreme Court has refused to make permanent the provisional injunction obtained by the Sinclair Oil company restraining the secretary of industry, commerce and labor from revoking oil well permits by the company.

From San Antonio, Texas, comes a story that Rene Capistran Garza, the young catholic reactionary leader, boasts of having 22,000 fully armed men in Mexico ready to wage war against the Calles administration. Garza claims to have the support of the Knights of Columbus, the petroleum interests and the United States government. Garza's policy is a typically fascist one. He favors the suppression of labor unions.

Mussolini Tool Is Sentenced to Jail in France

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Colonel Garibaldi was sentenced to two months' imprisonment and fined 100 francs on charges "detention of arms." He was acquitted of the charges of complicity in a Catalonian plot against Spain, which, it is alleged, was hatched in France.

Colonel Magrin, who was arraigned with Garibaldi in connection with the alleged plot against Spain, was given a sentence similar to that of Garibaldi.

Fifteen others who were arraigned on charges of a similar nature were sentenced to one month imprisonment each.

...OF CORRUPTION

Local 3 Grafters Still Hinder Initiations

BY HELEN BLACK.

Over a thousand recently organized electrical workers of the New York district attended a meeting called by the organization committee of Local 3, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at Webster Hall on Sunday afternoon, to hear vice-president H. P. Broach explain the delay in installing them in the union.

Difficulties Explained.

There has been a tendency on the part of those newly organized workers to express dissatisfaction because they had not yet been taken into the union; but after vice-president Broach had given details of the situation between the International and Local 3 of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, explaining that no new members could be brought in until this was settled, the new members applauded their confidence in the organization committee and pledged their support in this fight against the corrupt former leaders of Local 3.

Old Obstructionists.

A brief outline of the history of the fight between the International and the officers of Local 3, was given by Broach and he told how consistently the old leaders had opposed bringing new members into the local just as they were doing now. "But organization work is going right on," Broach said.

"I am convinced that we must have complete unionization of the New York territory in order to have an effective union, and nothing is going to stop us from proceeding with this organization work. The electrical workers of this district are only 36% organized. We are going to have them organized 100% before we are through."

Corruption Found.

In addition to the charge that they carried on little or no organization work among electrical workers under their jurisdiction and actually prevented workers from entering this union, the former officers of Local 3, after a thorough investigation by officials of the international, were found to be guilty o f a whole series of corrupt practices, so vice-president Broach told the workers at the Webster Hall meeting.

Paid by Bosses.

Affidavits show that some officers were on the payroll of the contractors in charge of the Edison Power House on 14th Street; business agents were accused of accepting bribes from contractors, and gratuities from electrical workers, in order to obtain membership in the union; and non-union men were permitted to work on union jobs in a large number of places.

Run to Courts.

It was to rid the union of such false leaders that 17 officers were brought up on charges and expelled; but through a court injunction they are still technically not ousted. However, the membership, at a meeting on Thursday, January 20, gave vice-president Broach its overwhelming vote of confidence, and approved his action in removing these officials by a vote of 2500 to 3.

For Police Brutality, Fails in Paper Strike

"It is no secret that the police have been active in violating rights and facts, more blatantly in supporting the side of the employers during the strike of the Allied Printing Trades Council of the A. F. of L. against 30 non-union shops in New York City in a contract issue of the Mailers.

"The conservative justices of the public bench, despite the barefaced violations of the police during recent industrial disturbances by the 'revolutionary' character of the strikes and by the assertion that the strikers are foreigners with Bolshevistic and un-American ideas," writes Allen, continuing, "the police we are told were justified in protecting, by violence if necessary American property and institutions against these dangerous immigrants.

"Unfortunately for this argument the situation in the paper box makers' strike is reversed. Most of the 3,500 workers on strike are American born, while most of the employers are foreign.

"The courageous tenacity of the box makers has held their ranks together through fourteen weeks without work in the face of police brutality and judicial severity and an almost solid determination on the part of the employers to break both the strike and the union. Only physical collapse can prevent them from carrying the fight through the black season to a final settlement," he says.

Visit of Green with Walker in Hygeia

but were handed to the General Executive Board o fthe A. F. of L. without letting the workers see what they were reported to have said at the hearings. The Investing Committee had vigorously opposed the furriers' demand for public hearings during this investigation. Judging by the report finally produced, Mr. Woll apparently wanted to kib not only from the public but also from his committee what went on at those sessions. Mr. Woll, knowing why the committee was formed, knew what he was going to find at the hearings —and evidently information about the furriers' strike was the least of the things he was seeking.

Ryan and Woll Disagree.

What Mr. Ryan will report to the District Attorney is indicated by his statement last week to the effect that the furriers had not given $100.000 to the office as Mr. Woll reported, but that they had failed to account for that amount in connection with strike expenditures.

This statement, as well as Woll's has been proved absolutely untrue by the published account of the Furriers' Joint Board officers which gives in detail all payments made during the strike, and for every one of which the Joint Board holds signed receipts.

Greetings from N. Y. Bakers Union

Heartiest greetings on the publication of The DAILY WORKER in New York. This militant labor daily will become the mouthpiece of progressive unionists here in their struggles.—Philip Kleinberg, Secretary, Local 169, Bakers Union.

HEALTH OFFICER IMPATIENT OVER ECONOMIC EXCUSE

Dr. Harris Testifies for 48-Hour Week

"The medical man has had to meet the economic argument against every recommendation he makes for the protection of the health of women and children in industry. The medical man grows impatient with this excuse."

So declared Dr. Louis I. Harris, health commissioner of New York City, answering manufacturers representatives on the State Industrial Survey Commission who tried to argue against the 48-hour week. The health commissioner asserted emphatically that, as a medical man he favored the shortening of work hours and that the 48-hour week legislation proposed would be "a long step forward."

From his tens of thousands of examinations of workers made while chief of the division of industrial hygiene and head of the bureau of preventable diseases for New York City, Harris testified to the evil effects of fatigue. He stated he had backed his experience with that of other experts in the field.

Fatigue produced by long hours and monotonous and routine or hazardous work brings marked mental and nervous results, makes workers more susceptible to disease, affects maternity, disturbs body organs and increases the number of accidents. Women have biological differences from men which make necessary their greater protection in industry, stated the doctor.

Daily Worker Builders Meet Tonight

The problem of news stand circulation will be the subject for discussion at a meeting of Daily Worker Builders at 8 o'clock this evening, Monday, January 24, at 108 East 14th Street. Discussion will be led by Bert Miller, Samuel Krieger and L. E. Katterfeld.

Now that The DAILY WORKER is printed in New York the news stands are the most important phase of the work of building the paper in this city. Every reader of The DAILY WORKER who has a little spare time each week to devote to this work should be present at this meeting to learn the details.

THAT FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLAR QUOTA

Immediately after the Madison Square Garden meeting the record of the New York District in the $50,000 Drive, in which New York's quota was placed at $15,000, will be published, by units, subscribers and sections. Every member of the Workers Party is expected to complete his share of $5.00 donated or collected by that time. If you haven't done your duty yet, NOW is the time. This is the last call on this subject. Make it "100%."

Daily Worker Organ Of Workers in Class War.

By JACK KENNEDY

New York today sees the advent of the Paper of the Future—The DAILY WORKER.

The heart of the labor newspaperman beats fast as he visualizes that future. Seventy-five years ago another paper, small in size rather unpretentious, began life as a New York daily, that paper—The New York Times—entered 1927 as the most powerful of all American anti-labor journals, the Colossus of world journalism.

The DAILY WORKER starts its New York life under far better auspices than did the puny Times of 1851. Rooted in the hearts and minds of America's most militant workers through its three sturdy years in Chicago, the WORKER comes here not as an experiment but as a vigorous growing newspaper intent on a bigger place in the sun.

Not the wildest dream of future strength and influence is impossible for this young, healthy newspaper. Alone, it speaks for America's working masses. Alone, it understands the nature of the struggle by which America's millions in industry and field will strike from their limbs the bonds of intolerable slavery. As the leader of a labor press flung nationwide, it will carry the banner of victory.

Today's six page DAILY WORKER, the David of labor journalism, enters the citadel of American imperialism to make war on a formidable Goliath who appears unconquerable. But the far-seeing newspaper man can understand that the battle will be no set-up. History and the intelligent, continuous policy of the Workers (Communist) Party are on the side of this six-page paper as it pits its small resources against an anti-labor metropolitan press whose circulation runs far up into the seven figures.

In fresh, clear, crisp English; in a style that will appeal directly to the head and heart of every worker and his wife; in a technique which will turn topsy turvy the cynical standards of other newspapers, The DAILY WORKER will make its way into the home and factories of New York labor.

Serving, helping, guiding and leading every worker and his wife in the every day battles against boss, preacher, press and imperialist, the DAILY WORKER will win the confidence of the masses and lead them to victory.

New York's other dailies boast they developed out of war; the SUN and TRIBUNE but of the Civil War; the WORLD, TIMES and Hearst sheets out of the Spanish-American War; the dirty little tabloids out of the degradation of the World War.

Wha a more glorious foture then does the DAILY WORKER have to develop out of the greatest of all wars, the class war. It achieves ultimate victory only when the workers themselves have triumphed all.

A million circulation" The figure is too modest.

State Reels in Norris Trial.

AUSTIN, TEX., Jan. 23.—With dramatic suddenness the state rested its case at 11:30 o'clock today in the trial of the Rev. J. Frank Norris, fundamentalist pastor of the Fort Worth First Baptist Church on trial here for the past two weeks on a murder charge in connection with the fatal shooting of D. E. Chipps, prominent Fort Worth lumberman.

BOSSES REJECT PLAN TO SETTLE PAPER BOX FIGHT

Attempts Still Made to Mediate

Following the refusal of the paper box manufacturers to submit to arbitration of the paper box strike by an impartial citizens' committee, Dr. Charles K. Gilbert, chairman of the social service, commission of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, has called a second conference to discuss the strike situation at the Bar Association building, 42 West 44th St., tomorrow evening, January. 25.

Committee Confer.

Dr. Gilbert issued the call for a meeting of strikers, manufacturers, and citizens which was held on Monday, January 17th. Such men as Bishop William T. Manning, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, R. Fulton Cutting and Henry Goddard Leach were present, and they agreed to form a committee which should listen to a committee of strikers and a committee of manufacturers and endeavor to reach a set of terms of settlement of the strike which would be satisfactory to both sides.

Employers Reject Plan.

Representatives of the union agreed to this plan, and promised to accept the decision of the committee. Representatives of the employers agreed to bring the proposal before the manufacturers' association at its meeting on January 20th. Not only did the members of the association absolutely refuse this offer of mediation, but several speakers urged that the opposition of the metropolitan press whose circulation runs far up into the seven figures.

Strikers Discussed.

This decision of the manufacturers is to be presented by Dr. Gilbert to the citizens' committee tomorrow night, and they will consider further plans for trying to end the paper box strike which has been in progress since October 20.

The strike will be discussed at the Civic Club, 18 East 10th Street, on Wednesday night, by one of the girl strikers, by Fred Cailoa, manager of the union; Dr. James Meyers, industrial secretary of the federal council of churches, and the Rev. Charles Webber, pastor of the Church of All Nations. Other meetings are being held every day.

Brutalities Continue.

Attacks by the bosses' hired agents upon the strikers continue regularly, and the police in addition to affording an escort to scabs are helping them unload trucks and driving them home in the manufacturers' cars. But the strike is in fine shape and the strikers are standing firm in their original demands for a living wage and better working conditions. Funds are coming in to the strikers from many sources, and the paper box workers are prepared to carry on indefinitely if the same aggressive strike they have been conducting for so many weeks.

JEWS WRECK THEATRE.

BYALOSTOCK, POLAND, Jan. 23. —The Yiddish moving picture theatre here was demolished by a mob that stormed the place during the showing of "Ben Hur." The populace declared the film an "offense to the Jewish community."

THE DAILY WORKER HITS NEW YORK

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

Of what importance to the New York labor movement is the publication of the DAILY WORKER in New York City?

Of what importance to the progressive and left wing forces within the trade unions who are fighting against the old time labor fakers and bureaucrats, who in many cases play the game of the bosses within the workers' organization?

The publishing of a militant daily labor newspaper in the English language in the same city where Wall Street is located is a matter of as much importance and should be taken with the right amount of seriousness by all who are concerned, either directly or indirectly.

Logical City.

The city where the New York Times is published is the logical one for The DAILY WORKER, the former being the chief organ of the capitalists in America, and the latter of the working class.

And The DAILY WORKER is the organ of the ENTIRE WORKING CLASS and by its publication in New York, it becomes the privilege and duty of all workers in the metropolitan area to do their share to make the majority of the workers realize that fact. At the same time the workers in the rest of the country must not think that they are left completely out of the picture.

While it is true that New York, New Jersey and Connecticut can be served most quickly and efficiently by The DAILY WORKER, nevertheless at the present it is the only English labor daily in America and must not, and will not, neglect the struggles of the workers in any part of the country.

Furriers Support Daily Worker.

At the recent Daily Worker Conference held at Manhattan Lyceum, New York, where over 200 delegates of trade unions, fraternal and other working class organizations laid plans to raise funds for the moving of the paper to New York, Samuel Liebowitz, Assistant Manager of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, made a speech of great significance.

Referring to the recent furriers' strike, Liebowitz stated that during the struggle the Furriers' Union realized the importance of The DAILY WORKER.

"Altho the Jewish Daily Freiheit was of great help to us," he said, "we were not able to reach all of the workers thru it. About 60 per cent could read Jewish, but we had no means of reaching the other 40 per cent. That is why the publication of the DAILY WORKER in New York is of such importance."

To Fight Right Wing.

Another example of what great importance must be attached to The DAILY WORKER in New York is the great deal of space that the local capitalist press gives to the speeches, documents and statements of Morris Sigman and the other labor enemies of labor in labor's own ranks.

When, December 1, 1926, the General Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union issued a statement attacking the left wing in the union, we find a four column story the next morning in the New York Times, quoting it almost in full. On top of that the Times publishes one vicious editorial after another attacking the communists and the left wing.

If The DAILY WORKER had been published in New York City at that time it would have been able to immediately publish a reply to Sigman and counteract the poison of the right wing New York Times attack.

It is true that The DAILY WORKER on that occasion as well as every time since, has answered these attacks, but it must be remembered that by the time the paper reached New York from Chicago it could not have as telling an effect as an immediate reply. An immediate answer is always necessary, and in the future the Sigmans, Wolls and McMahons will be dealt with in a manner that they deserve!

use of The DAILY WORKER as part of the campaign to organize the unorganized. If The DAILY WORKER had been published in New York, which is only a half hour from Passaic, the lies and fascist statements of the Passaic Daily News and the Passaic Daily Herald could have been immediately and effectively dealt with.

To summarize The DAILY WORKER published in New York means that the struggle against the right wing in the trade unions can now be more systemetically carried out. Also that the struggle to bring new, virile elements into the labor movement, as in Passaic, by organizing the unorganized, can be continued with even more success than in the past, and at the same time add new laurels to the left wing and the Communists in the trade unions.

Labor Writer Knows by Experience We'll Help

Those of us who have had the job of sending out news about New York's union strikes and struggles feel like shouting with joy to welcome the Daily Worker to this city.

So many times during the battles of the Joint Action Committee of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, we needed to have a story printed the next day in an English paper and there was no workers' paper to which we could turn. Day after day during the Furriers' strike men and women were beaten and arrested by the police, but there was no Daily Newspaper in which we could tell the workers' story and voice the workers' protest.

I remember once calling up a New York evening paper to report that one of the striking cloakmakers had been attacked by the International's gangsters, nearly beaten to death and was in a hospital not expected to live. What was the newspaper office told. "That's no news. That happens every day. Nothing important about that."

Until now all the workers would hear about one of the greatest battles of strikes and union fights if it were not for the papers devoted to their interests. The foreign language groups in New York have had such papers right here in their midst; now an English labor paper moves up to the front line trenches and all of us can look forward to a newspaper and labor publicity work that is served with hearty greetings and wishes for its growth and prosperity.—Helen Black, Labor Publicist.

HONOR ROLL

Here is a partial roster of those devoted rebels whose contributions made it possible for The DAILY WORKER to be printed in New York. The amounts specified were received by the New York Agency from January 7th to January 21st. Over two thousand "Honor Roll" lists are still outstanding and will be acknowledged in future issues of The DAILY WORKER as fast as received.

All having lists are urged to collect as much as they can as fast as they can, since the moving of The DAILY WORKER involves a lot of extra expense. The good work done by New York comrades the past two weeks shows that they intend to cover this and give The DAILY WORKER a good send-off in New York.

CHIEFTIES TO CRUSH PROLETARIAN MOVEMENT; FAIR TRIALS ARE DENIED

By JAR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Spain, (By Mail).—Since the 1923 coup d'etat the "constitutional" is being worked more intensely than ever. Primo de Rivera's policy is to carry out the most cruel oppression against the proletariat, especially against its most active members. In this way, he thinks possible to definitely end any rebellious tendency in the Spanish workingclass.

In Spain the bourgeoisie court of justice acts in the most arbitrary manner. The trials come three or four years after committing delinquency, and frequently the prosecutor demands penalties less than the time has already elapsed in imprisonment. The defendants are forced to confess by all kinds of brutal methods of the "guardia civil".

Some months ago it was brought to the light the innocence of two workers who were 12 years in prison, condemned for murder. But the "dead" has been found alive. The two had confessed to being assassins by the terrible abuse of the police.

Against Communists.

Since 1920, when the Spanish Communist Party was organized it has not been possible for the Party to function openly. It has always been considered an illegal organization. Just the fact that a person is a member of a committee, speaking as a Communist in a trade union assembly, or the reading of our organ "La Astorcha", is considered a crime and enough for imprisonment.

Some few days ago in Barcelona, our comrades, Oscar Perez Loula, Joaquin Maurin, Alberto F. Perez, Salas, Victor Colome and others were accused of a "terrible crime"; they intended to form a Communist federation. They have been sentenced to three years in prison and were not even allowed to defend themselves.

The condemned comrades are our Party's most active and capable members. The design of the military court was to separate from the workingclass struggle combatants as detamined as were those comrades. In all Spanish jails there are numerous Communists, separatists, and syndicalists, sentenced for many years imprisonment, who are real fighters for the working class.

More Condemned Workers.

Recently there took place another war council against numerous workers that were soldiers during the summer of 1924 in a regiment of Castellon de la Puana. This regiment was to be sent to Morocco to fight against Abd-el-Krim. The regiment had to be sent in order to help the Xauen retreat conducted by Primo de Rivera himself, and in which retreat 20,000 Spanish men died.

Among the soldiers of the regimant there were some ready to rebel rather than fight in the war which they hated. In order to organize the rebellion, a hundred soldiers held various meetings about the city. This open air assemblage was discovered and all those there were sent to prison. The leaders have now been sentenced to life imprisonment. The trial was not public, this being one of the means used by Primo de Rivera.

Publication of any brutal act of the government is not permitted. The military censorship has been working steadily and successfully for three years.

"Ley Fuga".

General Martinez Amido, when he was governor of Barcelona established what has been called the "ley fuga". This consists in giving "legal" sanction to the murder of the most important members of the working class organizations in Barcelona. The police, after committing murder, will publish an "official communique", saying that the prisoner was killed while trying to escape. This method is now re-established.

PROSPERITY IN 'FRISCO SHOWN TO BE A FRAUD

Few Have It, While Thousands Starve

By HOWARD EARLAN
(Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO. — The most prosperous year in our city's history that just ended, according to the daily press. Bank clearings—the barometer of progress—never attained such dizzy heights as in the year that has just passed. Building permits have surpassed all previous records, and palatial new structures have altered the physiognomy of our city in the last twelve months.

Property Raises

Property valuations are increasing weekly, imports and exports are leaving all previous records in the shade, the San Francisco-Oakland bridge project has been brought immeasurably nearer by the concentrated efforts of our civic politicians, and the first budget reduction in twenty years has been recorded.

The Other Side

All these factors spell prosperity and optimism in abundance but, alas, there happens to be another side to the shield. The reverse side indicates little of the prosperous conditions just enumerated.

20,000 Are Jobless

Here we learn that 'Frisco's unemployed army exceeds that of any year since the records were kept. Over twenty thousand potential workers are prohibited by economic conditions from having contact with a job. The employment sharks are themselves content to being unemployed. Some of them find it necessary to remain closed for days at a time. Even the large offices, which is the answer to many of the wants of intense activity, are now displaying blackboards and posters with less than a dozen positions available to prospective job hunters.

Must Seek Charity

While families of producers are suffering privation, and there on the charity of the public, much ado is made of building permits, bank clearings, increased exports, and reduced taxation, while Brisbane raves on from the North, and the South, and the East who are not enjoying their share of the national prosperity to pull up stakes and come to sunny California, the home of peace and abundance. What a strange world!

Housewives' Council Demands Support for Box Makers' Concert

The United Council of Working Class Housewives, 80 E. 11 St., N. Y. C., which has been keeping the kitchen for the last twelve weeks for the Paper Box strikers is appealing to all labor organizations to help the strikers win their just battle. Their call is as follows:

"The Paper Box Makers Union, the union of the strikers, is arranging a grand concert and ball for the 11th of February on Lincoln's Birthday eve, at Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., New York City. This great entertainment must be a success. The workers of New York must show to the strikers that they are not alone in this battle, that the workers are supporting them. Also the stubborn employers must know that the strikers will hold out as long as necessary until they win their demands.

"The workers can prove their loyalty to the box strikers by making the concert and ball a success.

"The U. C. of Workingclass House wives is appealing to all labor organizations and to the various women organizations especially to sell tickets and collect ads for the program journal of the concert. The money is being used to feed the strikers' families. Help them win."

Negro Conference Secy. Hails Daily Worker

I feel that the coming to New York of the Daily Worker will mean a great deal to the Negro Worker. The paper can keep him in touch with world labor, and further his labor organization. The work that the A. N. L. C. has been trying to do will be greatly strengthened.—Mary Adams, Former Secy., A. N. L. C.

MILL WORKERS IN YOUNGSTOWN, O., SLAVE LONG HOURS FOR LOW WAGE

(By a Worker Correspondent)

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—The workers in the several steel mills of this city (Passaic of Ohio) are lifting under as unbearable conditions as if they were prisoners in a Siberian salt mine during the regime of Nicholas, the Last of Russia.

Low Wages, Long Hours

General labor is paid for at the rate of 44 cents an hour, $4.40 for a long and hard day of ten hours. Even this cannot be had by everyone. Hundreds of workers go to the employment offices every day in search of anything at all. Skilled and semi-skilled are more than willing to take an unskilled workers place, anything to keep the wolf from the door.

Make Use of Jobless

The large army of unemployed hanging around are not entirely overlooked by the slave-drivers, or bosses, as we call them when speaking in their presence. Every day we hear the same old threat: "If you don't do it there are lots of men around the employment office who will be glad to come in and do it." This threat helps Mr. Slave Driver to intensify his attitude and to swing his economic lash in a ferocious manner.

The Workers Know

Class collaboration is not yet visible in the mills of Youngstown. Workers are told in no uncertain language who is who and what is what. So we have no difficulty in realising that as workers we have nothing, absolutely nothing, in common with our masters.

The mill workers have already received the news of the immense profits that were derived from their labor during the last year. While the idle parasitic stockholders are getting these vast profits, the workers who produce them have not even a week's bread ahead of them.

WORKERS MOBILIZE TO HELP CLOAKMAKERS SAVE UNION; SUBSCRIBING FOR LOAN OF $250,000

Mass meetings of workers are being arranged in many cities, and in response to a general demand for details of the New York struggle, the Joint Board of the I. L. G. W. sent Max Levine, member of the out-of-town committee, on a speaking tour of the West. He will speak in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego and Petaluma, California, in San Antonio, Dallas and Houston, New Orleans, Jacksonville and Savannah. Miss Anna Litvakova has been placed in charge of a committee in Philadelphia, which, as a result of the conference of representative workers held there last week, is sending in $200 a day on their pledge of $20,000 for the bond issue of the Joint Board to obtain funds to carry on the fight.

Help From Many Cities.

An additional $1,000 has been received from Chicago for the bond issue, $200 from Milwaukee and $1,000 from St. Louis, where mass meetings have been held. The progressive members of the Shirt Imners union, who pledged $500 have raised in another $100, having bought bonds already to the amount of $350. The millinery workers, who have already raised $4,700, bought another $1,000 worth of bonds on Wednesday.

The bond issue, of $250,000 is guaranteed by the Joint Board and by the four most powerful of New York locals, 2, 9, 22 and 35. The bonds, in denominations of $25, $50, $100 and $500, bear interest at six per cent and mature in three years.

Financed By the Membership

The I. L. G. W. strike in New York was financed by the membership, principally by taking out loans. There was a general response towards the call from New York, and amounts were received as follows from the I. L. G. W. locals in these cities: Philadelphia, $11,000; Chicago, 6,000; Boston, $4,000; Baltimore, $17,000; Hartford, $1,200; Paterson, $1,500; St. Louis, $1,288; Detroit, $300; Los Angeles, $1,200; Cleveland, $800.

This response from the membership towards the needs of the union has not ceased. The conference of active trade unionists in New York Monday pledged $100,000 in subscriptions toward the loan, and asked for only three weeks time to do it. Shop subscriptions for the loan get results.

There have been liberal contributions through the Workmen's Circle during the strike. 16 gave $188; 67 gave $56; 84, $100; 99, $50; 224, $40; 225, $50; 272, $50; 284, $88; 328, $200; 421, $100; 462, $705; 470, $50; 482, $75; 576, $500; 637, $100; 715, $100; 718, $100, and many others.

COLLEGE ECONOMICS PROFESSOR INVESTIGATES; FINDS COMPANIES PROMISE MEN PENSIONS IN FAR DISTANT FUTURE TO DRIVE THEM HARDER TODAY

Promises of to-day to their workers deferred wages in the form of pensions when they get to be 65 to 75 years old are being increasingly criticised by competent authorities.

Organized labor is interested in this effects of the pension practice upon trade unionism. Warren B. Catlin, Bowdoin College economics professor, has some stinging comments in his new book, The Labor Problem:

"Mere vital and serious still is the effect of pension systems upon the independence and bargaining power of the workers. The employers' argument that it will promote good conduct and decrease the liability to strikes proves too much. Industrial peace is desirable by like other forms, it may be bought at too dear a price; and for all the large expenditures of the corporations the worker stands to pay the bill.

"The absence of strong labor organizations in practically all industries having pension systems, aside from railroads, is more than a coincidence. The prospect of a pension binds the workman hand and foot, and robs him of that mobility which is his greatest bargaining asset. In like manner it discourages all collective efforts to improve wages and other conditions for the mass of employees. An older employe, approaching pensionable age, is not likely to stir up sedition among his fellows and get himself discharged in consequence. In fact, it has been charged that in time of strike men already on pension have sometimes been forced to act as strike-breakers or lose their pensions.

Professor Catlin is referring to the railroad companies' action before the threatened tieup of 1916 as well as in the 1922 strike and present action of Western Pacific R.R. against engineers and firemen,—old pensioners being called out to break the strike. Catlin concludes his section on industrial pensions:

"It seems ungracious always to be questioning the motives behind employers' gifts; and no doubt any method of providing for the superannuated man is better than none at all. But the chances for pension thinking in corporate pension plans make one hope that some other remedy may be found."

That remedy has long been advocated by the Pensylvania Old Age Pension Commission. The commission is fighting for state old age pensions as the only way to meet the increasingly difficult problem of caring for the 1,800,000 dependent aged persons over 65 in the United States. A scientific system under state control is the only pension scheme that can serve the workers, the Commission finds, with a growing number of impartial pension experts. But, according to the New York Times, "fear of government action is not the least of the reasons for the spread of private pension plans."

Some of the 400 large corporations using pensions to keep workers in hand are: Colomdo Fual & Iron Co., E. I. DuPont de Menours Co., General Electric Co., Interborough Rapid Transit Co., Intl. Harvester Co., Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., Otis Elevator Co., Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., Pittsburgh Coal Co., Pullman Co., all the Standard Oil companies, United States Rubber Co., U. S. Steel Corp., and many railroads, led by the Pannsylvania.

MANY JOBLESS IN STATE OF WASHINGTON

No "Prosperity" There —Wages Low

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

TACOMA, WASH.—The combined federal and city free employment office reports that in the past year 9,797 men and women applied for jobs, and 7,128 men and 458 women were given jobs. In December 364 asked for work and 296 were given work.

That looks as if conditions here were fairly good. But they are not. Let us consider this report.

But Jobs On Short-time

It says nothing as to what kind of jobs or how long the work lasted. Many of the women were wanted to help with housework for a few days. Most of the rest probably were sent to the berry fields of the Puyallup Valley for a few weeks. Very few of the men were placed on what might be called steady jobs. Some were sent out on farm work, some to the berry fields and canneries in season. Most of them were sent out as casual labor, a few days digging for house foundations perhaps, and similar work, or putting in a load of wood. They burn wood out there, scraps from the lumber mills, and after the trucks dump it at the curb it has to be put away. Most of the men hired are for such work. Very short-time jobs.

Long Lines of Job Hunters

These are many factories here, lumber mills, furniture factories, smelter, etc. They never hire from the employment offices. Every day there is a line of men asking for work at every one of these places. Sometimes a few are hired. But always, there is an oversupply of workers and an underupply of jobs. And so wages are kept low. $3.40 for an eight hour day is supposed to be the basic rate in the lumber mills. It sometimes runs as low as $3.50, sometimes up to $4.50 for a few skilled workers.

PATERSON STRIKE ON EXPLOSIVE SITUATION STRUGGLE MAY SPREAD

By Worker Correspondent

PATERSON, N. J.—Sporadic outbursts of fists have been occurring in this town of historic class warfare, have culminated in an unorganised and spontaneous strike that has tied up one mill, Garfinkle and Ritter's silk underwear shop.

About fifty young workers, who had probably never heard of a union, walked out when the wages were cut again, a few days ago, and went to the Y. W. C. A. to make further plans. The "Y" at once administered to them a real dose of class collaboration, told them that it could not consent to their plans for struggle, and shut the door on the representative of the Associated Silk Workers Union.

When the excited and rebellious girls heard all this, and saw that the organizer from the union was not to be allowed to speak to them there, they put on their hats and coats and marched to a hall where they could talk.

A picket line is established, the rest of the shop is on strike, the first visit from the police has been braved, and the demands are clear: (1)—Restoration of the wage cut. (2)—A union. If the strike lasts very long it will spread.

Another strike is on in a union silk shop, where the boss had got into the habit of ignoring the union, because of a long period of industrial peace. A cr'de denial of a grievance brought action.

Eight More Miners Burn in Gas Explosion

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 23.—Eight miners were burned, one seriously, when an explosion of gas, believed to have resulted fro man electric spark, wrecked the cooper vein of the Penn Orchard Colliery, Glen Alden Coal company, here today.

The injured follow:

Stanley Kresge, 38, Parsons, condition serious; Clifford Hay, 41, city; Anthony Wyssocki, 28, city; Felix Tomasheski, 19, Hanover; Leo Dobinski, 32, city; Anthony Christopher, 35, city; Konstanzi Martin, 46, city; Peters Conitzski, 45, city.

The first six are in local hospitals while the condition of the last two permitted their removal to their homes.

MAY DEPORT MAN PASSAIC POLICE BEATING CRAZED

Hospital Reports Him "A Public Charge"

Because he is suffering from insanity as a result of a brutal beating by Passaic police while he was on the textile strike picket line there, immigration authorities are now investigating the alien standing of Abraham Zaretsky, 23, a former resident of Passaic.

Zaretsky is now in Bellevue Hospital suffering from dementia praecox. While he was on the Passaic picket line last March, he was brutally attacked by police, his mind totally wrecked as a result.

His two sisters, both working for small pay, attempted to keep him in private institutions, but found that their limited finances would not permit this. When doctors advised that he might be cured by convalescing in the mountains, they scratched and scraped and finally managed to save enough to request him there for a month. Still his condition did not improve.

Their poverty, making it impossible to keep Zaretsky in a private institution, forced his sisters to place him in Bellevue Hospital. Immediately, the hospital officials notified Immigration authorities at Ellis Island that he had become a "public charge".

Zaretsky's sisters were notified to appear at Ellis Island before the immigration commissioner. Ha questioned them regarding his status as an alien, the country from which he came, and their ability to keep him from being a "public charge".

In the opinion of legal exparte questioned about the case, unless his sisters kaop Zaretsky in a private institution, which their finances will not warrant, the immigration authorities may have grounds on which he may be deported. Zaretsky entered this country in a legal mannor, in 1923.

SIX PASSAIC STRIKERS YIELD TO THIRD DEGREE; PLEAD GUILTY OF BOMB

PATERSON, N. J.—(FP)—Feeling the cards were stacked against them six Passaic strikers, charged with bombing the homes of two scabs, reached a compromise with the prosecution. The men entered a plea of non vult to a misdemeanor indictment in return from the dropping of a felony bill. This lesser charge accuses them of having explosives with the intention of destroying property, and carries a maximum penalty of three years in jail. The felony count adds the intention of injuring persons and brings five to ten years.

The compromise came the second day of the trial of three of the prisoners. Testimony on the witness stand had been badly confused in their denials of third degree brutality. Sidney Turner, stenographer, who prepared the confessions, admitted he had not taken down questions and answers of police and prisoners but reconstructed a narrative statement. He admitted that in the case of Tony Paneba, a Slav, he relied on an Italian captain of detectives, as interpreter.

But the third degree statements none the less proved damaging in a hysterical middle class community from which jurors were drawn. Other indictments would have been brought up later and defense funds would not be raised. The men will be sentenced January 28. Five other cases in another county are not affected.

Over the Top for Daily Worker Drive, but This Nucleus Keeps On Going

Editor, DAILY WORKER: Enclosed find money order for $21.50. $12.50 of which was contributed by the Ukrainian Russian Club of Endicott, and $9.00 of which was collected at a nucleus meeting.

Our nucleus, which consists of 10 members, has already passed the $50 mark.

We have turned in $56.50 to The DAILY WORKER campaign so far. But we didn't stop our work. Every member of our nucleus has a book of certificates and we are trying our best to sell them.

We are also proud of our district No. 1, which we belong and which was the first to get over the top in this campaign.

Fraternally yours,
A. PANASIK, Financial Secy.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Arbitration of the Mexican land law controversy faded somewhat into the background today, despite indications that the Senate on Monday will pass the Robinson resolution declaring it to be the sense of that body that the dispute be arbitrated.

The Manager's Corner

Fifteen thousand workers jammed Madison Square Garden in New York on Saturday, January 24th on the occasion of the anniversary of Lenin's death and the arrival of the Daily Worker in New York City. Twenty thousand workers cheered enthusiastically every mention of our paper, and pledged their material and moral support.

To reach this vast crowd, the human voice unaided would have been totally inadequate. It was therefore necessary to employ the devices produced by modern science for the purpose. With the aid of electrical amplifiers, it was possible to reach the furthermost recesses of the great auditorium and its topmost galleries. With the aid of this wonderful invention the slightest sound from the platform was heard distinctly by every worker in the audience.

The printing and publication of a newspaper alone will not insure its reaching a large circle of readers. No matter how much we improve the quality of our paper, that fact alone will not be sufficient to build up its circulation. To reach the furthermost recesses of the labor movement, to reach every section of the working class with its message, the Daily Worker must have the aid of what I might call "human amplifiers", comrades who devote themselves to the promotion of the paper, in all their available time. Without this help and support the Daily Worker will find it as difficult to reach the workers as the Madison Square Garden speakers without the electrical amplifiers.

From this moment on, every comrade who reads the Daily Worker must make it his business to broadcast the reputation of the paper widely. Workers should be urged to read it. Newsstand dealers should be urged to handle it. Those who are out of reach of the newsstand should be urged to subscribe. In this way the Daily Worker will quickly become a mass organ and a powerful weapon for the workers. BERT MILLER.

INDUSTRIAL SURVEY COMMISSION OF NEW YORK IN TIGHT GRIP OF EMPLOYERS; DELIGHTED BY ATTACK ON 48-HOUR BILL; JEERS SUPPORTERS

By ESTHER LOWELL

Will New York women workers get their long-promised 48-hour week law from the present legislature?

Will the workman's compensation law be changed to stop the almost endless delays made possible by court appeals?

How much of the labor legislation sponsored by the State Federation of Labor is going over?

When the State Industrial Survey Commission reports to the legislature on Feb. 15, its recommendations will form the basis for any new labor laws or changes to be made this year. What the Commission can be expected to propose is indicated in its make-up and conduct to date.

Big Business Control

There are three Democratic legislators to six Republicans among the Commissioners.* The representative of "the public at large" is James W. Gerard, Woodrow Wilson's ambassador to Germany. The employers' representative is Merwin K. Hart, a Republican and counsel for the Utica textile manufacturers. The man chosen by the legislature to represent labor is Emanuel Kovaleski, vice-president of the Teamsters and delegate of the Hotel & Restaurant Workers, Intl. Union to American Federation of Labor conventions.

Lives On Accidents

Henry D. Sayer, executive secretary of the Industrial Survey Commission, is executive director of the Travelers Industrial Service Inc. This organization has 16 offices and branch stations in New York and Brooklyn. It exists to give emergency and regular treatment to injured workmen. It does not purport to give them legal advice on how to apply for compensation. Employers send their workers to this organization instead of employing private physicians.

Industrial Survey

The hostility of the Commission to legislation favored by labor is evident at its hearings. The elaborate attack of the employers' agents on the proposed 48-hour law for women is example enough. Both old-line political parties have promised to pass a 48-hour law to supplant the present 54-hour week allowed. Senator Seabury Mastick, who introduced the 48-hour bill, sits on the commission. His only audible support, outside of labor's representative, is Frederick L. Hackenburg, Democratic assemblyman who tries to bring out labor's viewpoint from his own political angle.

For Equally Hard Work

Woman's Party members have testified repeatedly against all protective legislation for women workers. They have brought in so-called "working women"—a well-known few who are trotted out whenever needed—to testify that they lost jobs on the subway or in print shops because of women's hour legislation. Employers have given Woman's Party free access to their factories to take a vote—in the presence of the employer—of the women workers on whether they want the 48-hour law. Representatives of the Consumers League of New York, which favors the shorter work-week, secured the state's cooperation in their survey of working women's opinion.

Jeer at Girl

The Woman's Party of course found that the women workers didn't want anything different from their employer,—while he was around. And factory forewomen were brought to corroborate Woman's Party members' testimony before the Industrial Survey Commission. But when a Hebrew young working girl came to the Commission and told of unanimous sentiment for the shorter week in factories she worked in and visited the Commission treated her lightly. One of the Commissioners effectively remarked, when he was chided about a question, that he "was merely passing on the exhibit!"

Misleading Questions

Here is an example of the tricky and nasty questions Hart blandly asks for the employers:

"Do you feel that women should be permanently discriminated against from getting work by those laws restricting them from working as long as men?"

Mary Anderson, Director Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, ducked from under the query by saying that as a government official she should not have to answer.

Somnolent Sessions

But more important than the employers' agent's questioning is the cross-examining of Sayre, executive secretary of the Commission. Sayre is a former commissioner of the New York State Labor Dept. His queries are more smoothly put than Hart's but serve the same end of trying to confuse witnesses to commit harm against the labor legislation. Senator James S. Truman is an ally of Hart and the remaining commissioners generally are silent or sleeping. The public's representative is possibly too typical of his appointed constituents in that respect, although he wakened men in question and witness implies that employers are not obeying fully the present labor law or otherwise fulfilling what he supposes their obligations should be towards their workers.

Mass Meeting Protests Pullman Co. Policy of Low Wage Plus Tipping

A mass meeting at Community Church, New York, addressed by Henry T. Hunt, ex-mayor of Cincinnati, Dr. Norman Thomas, L. F. D. Thomas J. Curtis, vice-president State Federation of Labor, James Weldon Johnson, N. A. A. C. P., and A. Philip Randolph, general organizer, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters adopted a resolution in substance as follows:

Ten thousand porters and maids do necessary work on the railroad for the Pullman Co. They are paid an average of, after expenses are deducted, of $44.00 per month, which is not a living wage. Porters have to take tips to eke out an existence, which is degrading, and the overage from tips is only about $58 per month.

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters has been organized partly to do away with this practice of tipping, by securing a living wage from the company.

But it is charged that the company discharges porters who join the Brotherhood, and the mass meeting protests both against these discharges, and against the low wage.

* All but one are lawyers and that lone exception is listed as a farmer.

The Miners' Convention and John L. Lewis

The Thirtieth Consecutive Constitutional convention of the United Mine Workers of America opens tomorrow in the city of Indianapolis and it is no exaggeration to say that the organization never in its history faced a more serious situation than confronts it today. Responsibility for the critical condition of the union rests mainly on the shoulders of John L. Lewis.

The John L. Lewis if of portly bearing and impressive carriage, we would not waste valuable space on him but for the fact that he stands for a policy in the United Mine Workers of America that has brought that once mighty organization to the verge of ruin. Because of this, the conceited popinjay Lewis, who would normally attract no more attention than a small town rat-catcher finds himself being discussed.

The Lewis policy is the policy of the coal barons. When we say that Lewis has betrayed the interests of the coal diggers, we are not indulging in a figure of speech. We are hewing to the facts. We are not going to state that John L. Lewis received sums of money from the mine owners at such and such a place. Only bungling labor fakers get caught that way. What we state and stand ready to prove is that Lewis has weakened the ability of the miners of this country to extract concessions from the bosses to such an extent that the owners no longer take the miners' union seriously. It is an incontrovertible fact that 70 per cent of the coal dug in the United States today is taken out of the bowels of the earth by non-union labor.

What has Lewis done to block the march of non-unionism in the coal mining industry?

You can judge for yourself whether the following steps have been conducive to strengthening the miners' union or the reverse:

John L. Lewis spent the union's funds making war on men like Alexander Howat of Kansas who fought the capitalists of that state to a standstill, going to jail for the cause along with other loyal workingclass leaders like Dorchy. Not only did Lewis weaken the Kansas miners' union but he acted the part of stool-pigeon in helping the mine owners send Howat and his comrades to jail.

Lewis smashed the union in Canada and Nova Scotia by attacking the militants and assisting the employers in putting reactionaries in their place.

Lewis used union funds to purchase alleged evidence of radical activities from a detective agency. Ellis Searles, the monocled "coaldigger" who edits the United Mine Workers' Journal was Lewis' fink in charge of this work.

Lewis was a staunch supporter of the Coolidge candidacy in the last presidential election. Coolidge was the Wall Street favorite. No coal miner need be informed that Wall Street is opposed to trade unionism. No coal miner need be informed that the Morgan millions are behind the non-union coal mines of West Virginia.

To recount Lewis' sins of omission would take up too much space. The foregoing is sufficient. His grand gesture in "exposing" Frank Farrington for accepting a $25,000 a year job from the Peabody Coal Co. will not fool any miner who knows that Lewis is a supporter of the district administration that succeeded Farrington, an administration headed by a man named Fishwick, who was involved with Farrington in shady financial deals with the Peabody Coal Company as shown by a photographic copy of a check published twice in The Daily Worker.

In the recent elections in the miners' union it is generally admitted that John Brophy, progressive mine leader, received a majority of the votes. But Lewis counted himself in. Brophy's campaign platform was a "Save the Union" policy. Lewis' platform was a "ruin the union" policy consisting solely in idiotic attacks on the progressive elements.

The delegates gathered at the Thirtieth Consecutive Constitutional Convention of the United Mine Workers of America owe it to themselves and to the whole American workingclass to repudiate the Lewis policy of catering to the mine owners, making war on the progressives and his "rule or ruin" attitude in the union. If the United Mine Workers' Union is to be restored to the proud position it once held in the army of American trade unionism, a progressive policy must be laid down by the convention and the Lewis gang of company agents, splitters and union wreckers must be sent to accompany Frank Farrington on the payrolls of the coal barons, whose work they are now doing, perhaps on two salaries.

POLISH TERROR AGAINST LABOR GROWS; WORLD WORKERS MUST JOIN IN PROTEST

The unrestrained reign of terror of the bloody military government of Poland against the labor movement and the poor peasants, as well as against the national minorities, seems to have broken all bounds from the reports that have been able to escape the censor.

In Suvalki, 53 workers are on trial simply because they are accused of being members of the Communist Party. Ten have already been convicted and sentenced to terms of two to four years hard labor. In Sidlez a similar trial on the same charges is taking place and of the 23 accused five have already been sentenced to hard labor.

For participating in the last May Day demonstration eight workers were tried before the Warsaw district courts. At this demonstration the police had shot into the masses and a number of workers were killed and wounded. The defense brought up forty witnesses in favor of the accused, but the court accepted the statements of a few police spies. Two members of the municipal council were sentenced to three years' hard labor each and three more to a year and a half.

The gigantic trial against 151 Ukrainian peasants for having "attempted to prepare an armed uprising in 1924" is still in progress. The whole affair, including the "insurrection," has been conclusively proved to be the work of government agents to provide an excuse for the suppression of the Ukrainian peasants.

An atmosphere of deep terror hangs over the courtroom and many witnesses for the defense have been intimidated and maltreated.

These are only a few of the atrocities, news of which has succeeded in trickling thru the censor's claws. Only the organized protests and indignation of the workers of every country can call a halt to the mad course of the Polish butchers.

The Story of Keyman Marvin

By ROBERT DUNN

On January 21st, 1927, the New York Commercial, "the National Business Newspaper," was consolidated with the New York Journal of Commerce. With the passing of the Commercial the life was snuffed out of the famous Searchlight Column, edited by one whose name must not be forgotten by those who read this first issue of the New York Daily Worker. It is possible that we shall see him bob up again as editor of the National Republic or some other organ of the Higher Business Patriotism. In the meantime he deserved these few words.

Described as a middle-aged gentleman with an anti-social Atlas complex and an ingrowing desire to save the planet from Moscow, Mr. Marvin was once editor of the Mountain States Banker of Denver. He has for many years served the open shop organs and employers' associations.

Newspaper Publicity

When he joined the staff of the Commercial some years ago he turned on his red-sifting Searchlight and laid the cornerstone of the Key Men. The purpose of this movement is "to mobilize the sound thinking, loyal and patriotic men and women of the nation, acquaint them, through accurate and reliable information, as to the dangers confronting American institutions, and so prepare them, through their possession of facts, to successfully expose and combat the activities of the many movements now seeking to destroy this country, and through some scheme of 'nationalization' or 'socialization' confiscate the industries of the United States."

What did the Key Man do in the thriving days of the Commercial once he had qualified for election to Mr. Marvin's fraternity? Remember he had first to be "selected with care as to fitness, standing, ability, integrity, etc."

Read The Commercial

First he had to read the Commercial daily and clip the numbered and indexed "data on all subversive and radical movements." These he was to arrange systematically in his files, for instant reference. They were also notes on all the "Subversive Movements Against the American Government, Political and Labor Radicals, Communists and the 'Pinks.'"

Free Reporting

What else did a Key Man do? He kept the Searchlight Department posted "on all local activities of these subversive movements, that it, in turn, may furnish special information to aid 'Key' men and women to expose and combat such activities. He also kept his eye out for speakers who might come into his community seeking to interpret the Marx, Trotzki, Christ the Carpenter or La Follette. Seeing, smelling or hearing of such an "inside agitation" he notified Mr. Marvin by wire or telephone.

Free Advertising

In return the Key Man enjoyed many favors. The Searchlight director promised to keep him in touch "through personal letters...so that certain information which it is not always wise to put down in print" be supplied him. And if an address, an editorial or a sermon was to be written Marvin shipped along the canned information that would make the local luminary overnight an authority on the various shades and shadows of the pink-red movements.

Mr. Marvin was alleged to be in earnest. He once wrote to Sidney Howard, the playright: "All we are seeking to do is to save America for Americans and preserve American ideals and institutions as against an invasion of foreign ideals and institutions, diametrically opposed to all we hold near and dear." In pursuit of this aim he made several pamphlet contributions to the literature of high-pressure patriotism. These include: "The Menace of Bolshevism," "Are These Your Friends," "Bootlegging Mind Poison," "Underground with the Reds," and "My Country 'Tis of Thee." No Key Man could function effectively without these masterpieces in red-white-and-blue.

All Looked Red

In the Commercial's daily column under the heading of "Activities of Destructive Movements Seeking Directly or Indirectly to Overthrow the Government of the United States" we found listed under some 78 different "file numbers" such alarming offenders of violence and overthrow as: Plumb Plan League; Garland Fund; Churches, "Radicalism in-"; Co-operatives; Federated Press; League for Industrial Democracy; National Council for Prevention of War; "Youths' Movement," and other secret, sly and seductive hand-maidens of the Third International.

Destructive Free Speech!

Marvin's "facts" on these various "underground" movements to paint the White House crimson were quite as accurate as his reference to the American Civil Liberties Union as "that branch of the general movement to destroy this form of government and confiscate property which deals with the question of free speech." On another occasion he refers to the same liberal organization as "one of the many 'legal' organizations of the illegal Communist Party of America."

Mr. Marvin threw open the gates of his organization to the most cheap exploitation associated industries, and employers' associations from every state. He reprinted their attacks on labor and in turn sent them the "low-down" on the progressives in their community. "Low-down" in fact was the word he used when he wrote to the Secretary of the Associated Industries of Montana in 1924 requesting information on Senator Walsh. Mr. Marvin has been trying ever since to explain away the implications of that compound word. Of course Mr. Marvin hashed those statwart red-blooded—to use Mr. Marvin's own phrase—defenders of Americanism, Wm. J. Burns and Harry Daugherty. He struck out manfully against all subversive critics of these two angelic political figures. Unfortunately he lost. Burns and Daugherty were cut down by the Reds. They are now enshrined as martyrs to the Marvin conception of patriotism.

Mum Likes Him

Of course this pair of Searchlighters has the approval of the kings and archdukes of finance and industry. His has been commended in signed statements by the Presidents of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Southern Pacific Railroad and hundred humanitarian societies. Thanks to such eminent backing the results obtained by Keymanism are phenomenal. For example we are told by Fred himself that: "In 1924 we rendered this nation a remarkable service in defeating socialism and Communism which was manifested through the third ticket headed by La Follette and Wheeler."

And in the following year the Key Men fought the Child Labor Amendment and its labor and progressive supporters to a standstill.

HOFFMAN, ANTI-MILITARIST, MUSICIAN, AND INVENTOR

Central News

When Joseph Hofmann was five years old he was recognized as a musical genius, and soon after toured Europe. When he was ten, he was a recognized inventor, and now has over seventy practical inventions to his credit; he manages three electrical engineering laboratories. When he was young he played with toys, but rejected wooden soldiers in favor of mechanical bridges, houses, etc.

NEW ENGLAND TEXTILE CONFERENCE

By JOHN J. BALLAM

Secretary National Textile Workers Progressive Committee.

The mill owners of New England are determined to force their workers to accept the same conditions that prevail in the cotton industry in the South, where child labor, the sixty-hour week, unrestrained exploitation and wages averaging ten and twelve dollars a week is the rule.

The Arkwright Club, an association of millionaire mill owners, has introduced in the Massachusetts legislature a bill to provide that textile mills be permitted to work on a fifty-four hour basis and a ten-hour day. The present law provides for a forty-eight hour week.

In order to throw the workers into a panic and to bring pressure to bear on the legislature, many large mills anounce that they are closing down.

Scare Stories.

The Manomet Mills of New Bedford, Mass., the largest cotton yarn manufacturing plant in the country, operating 318,000 spindles and employing between 4,500 and 5,000 workers, has announced that as soon as the stock in process is run out that the mill will close indefinitely.

In Salmon Falls, N. H., a big mill employing the entire working population of that town, about 2,000, is greasing its machinery and has opened bids for the sale of the property.

In Ware, Mass., the Ware Mfg. Co., employing 2,500 workers, announces that it will close down. The Otis Co. has announced that unless taxes are reduced and a 54-hour law enacted that it will move south. The U. S. Worsted Co. mill in Lawrence, Mass., has announced that it will close down in February. In Salem, Mass., the Pequod Mfg. Co., employing 3,000 operatives, increased its working hours to fifty-four (regardless of the "law") notwithstanding that this mill is 100 percent organized in Local 33 of the U. T. W.

Try to Shift Tax Burden.

At the same time the mill owners are conducting a drive for the abatement of taxes. The Tremont & Suffolk Mills recently filed a petition for an abatement of taxes with the Board of Assessors. This mill has a valuation of $6,073,550 and paid $159,456 taxes in 1926 or about 3.7 percent.

While demanding wage reductions, longer hours and tax exemptions, these mill owners who made from 300 to 600 percent profits during the war and afterward, are the beneficiaries of an 80 per cent protective tariff.

A New England Textile Conference of workers is being called by it to meet in Boston Sunday, February 20, 1927, and the following program will be brought up:

1.—To send a delegation to the Massachusetts Legislature to protest against the passage of the 54-hour bill and to send a similar delegation to Washington to demand an investigation into the textile industry of New England for the purpose of determining why the mill owners do not pay a wage sufficient to maintain living standards under the 50 per cent tariff protection afforded this industry by the U. S. Government;

2.—To form local textile progressive committees in every textile town in New England to organize resistance to the wage slashing and 54-hour week campaign of the bosses.

3.—To set up Unemployment Councils of Textile Workers in every city where mills have closed down and to demand:

(a) Work to be provided by municipalities and the state at prevailing union rates of wages;

(b) Maintenance of unemployed or locked-out workers by special unemployment fund to be created out of increased taxation on property;

(c) Opening of food stations for the unemployed;

(d) Provision for free fuel and clothing.

(e) Moratorium on rents of dwellings during period of unemployment.

(f) Provision for free feeding of children in public schools.

4—To call a conference for the united action of all existing textile unions and for the support of the entire labor movement for the protection of the hard-pressed textile workers.

The textile industry has always acted as a barometer for the rest of the working class. The present drive to reduce wages, increase hours and to intensify production in the textile industry is a fore-runner of a general drive in all other machine industries thruout the country. These drives have usually been preceded by closing down of factories in order to produce an unemployment situation and to starve the workers into submission. If the textile barons can succeed in making their slaves accept lower wages and longer hours, then the oil, mining, automobile, rubber and other industries will follow suit. All labor must awake to the danger and organize for resistance. The American Federation of Labor and the whole labor movement must come to the assistance of their fellow workers in New England; 300,000 mill workers in 300 cities and towns.

At The Michigan Trial

It will be recalled that brother Marvin figured as Burns' confidant and general errand boy at the Communist trial in Michigan in 1923. His "inside stuff" on the reds was headlined by the open shop organs, his addresses were applauded by employers' luncheon clubs, the prosecution was bombarded with his solicited but unsolicited advice. He wrote articles for the press, calculated to send shivers down the spine of all comfortable folks, and he used the Department of Justice files at will to secure this garbled and confidential information.

"Limacharsky" Babies

His conception of the truth is indicated by such "tips" as he whispered to his readers from time to time. Among these have been the following: That the Soldier Bonus was a Soviet Scheme (his own words) that "Limacharsky" is the man who sovietized the babies in Red Russia; that "The Daily Worker of Chicago does not deny it is a Communist paper"; that the Teapot Dome congressional inquiry was planned in Leningrad; that if the Red Army should land at Hoboken tomorrow the students of Northwestern University would refuse to defend our shores that the Third International is a direct descendant of the Order of the Illuminati; that the Progressives in Congress are "destroying angels"; and that "modern industry cannot survive in its present form, nor any form, if the Brookharts and La Follettes realize their ambition for power."

All of which is very terrifying.

Waves The Palm

"There is one statement I always like to make," says Mr. Marvin in a dithyrambic mood, "and that statement is this": "This is my country, mine. From the waving palms of Florida to the stately pines of Washington, this is my country; from the towering Statue of Liberty to the sun-kissed Golden Gate, this is my country and I love it. From the deserts of Arizona to the snowy hills of Maine, this is my country, mine, and I am going to stick to it, and fight for it from hell to breakfast."

Keyman Mythology

Somewhere along the path from hell to breakfast Mr. Marvin has found time to disseminate the myth concerning the "nationalisation of women" in the Soviet Union. He has attacked the Russian-American Industrial Corporation organised by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, as "a plan to gather in money for radical propaganda in the United States." He has included under his ban as being a part of the red revolutionary movement such diverse societies as the Mooney Defense Fund, The Walter Mills Correspondence School, the American Textile Workers (a Keyman phantasy), the University Workers' League (whatever that is) the Cloak, Shirt and Reffer Union, (sic) the Irish-American Labor League, The Foster Publishing Association (no such animal), the Golden Age Lecture Bureau, the Czechoslovak Mavian Federation (sic again) and the Labor Bureau, Inc., the last being what Marvin calls "A Foster organization." For some reason he omitted Foster's Industrial and Detective Bureau and the Caviar Import Corporation both of which are patently inspired from the Kremlin.

Hates "Red Pacifists"

Since R. M. Whitney, author of the "Reds in America" passed on to a Heaven peopled by 100 per cent property-owning, tax-paying, home-loving Americans, the mantle of maintaining the morale of the militant employers' associations, has descended on the shoulders of modest, but highly insecure Marvin. He stands high with William Frew Long of Cleveland of open shop national repute. He contributes a hair-raising series on red-pacifists to the Army and Navy Journal. He dishes up the scare heads that induce the Rotary boys to order out the militia "to shoot the rascals down." He calls every carpenters' strike "a lesson in revolution." He makes the Chamber of Commerce boys' 25-cent Coronas tremble in their teeth as he depicts the flood of anarchist-communist literature sweeping away all that is "near and dear." His message of strike-breaking and labor union baiting rewards him not only with stent applause but with a modest living—or did until the Commercial became a corpse.

Among the scores of professional agitators who are zealously stirring the employers to the white heat of class consciousness, Mr. Marvin certainly deserves honorable mention. He may not be as well-salaried as Ralph Easley of the National Civil Federation or as richly cultured as Soap Box Jack O'Brien late of the National Security League and frame-up men at Passaic. But he stands up well among the current evangelists of hate. We desire herewith to hand him the platinum Key ring suitably inscribed, and to inform all readers that the present address of "Key Men of America" is 145 Nassau St., N. Y. City. If you care to join Mr. Marvin will be glad to receive your application at this address. Contributions to the cause gratefully acknowledged.

O'L A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

Graduation time was at hand, and all the grave old seniors had the job of choosing their future careers. Dad asked Bunny if he had made up his mind, and Bunny answered that he had. "But I hate to tell you, Dad, because it's going to make you unhappy."

"What is it, son?" A look of concern was upon the old man's round but heavy-lined fastures.

"Well, I want to go away for a year, and take another name, and get myself a job as a worker in one of the big industries."

"Oh, my God!" A pause, while Dad gazed into his son's troubled eyes. "What does that mean?"

"Just that I want to understand the working people, and that's the only way."

"You can't ask them what you want to know?"

"No, Dad, they don't know it themselves, except dimly. It is something you have to live."

"Good Lord, son, let me help you! I've been there. It means dirt and vermin and disease—I thought I was saving you from it, and making things easier for you!"

"I know, Dad, but it's a mistake, it doesn't work out as you thought. When a young fellow has everything too easy for him, he gets soft. He has no will of his own. I know what you've done, and I'm grateful for it, but I have to try something different for a time."

"You can't possibly find any thing hard enough for you in the job of running an oil industry!"

"I might, Dad, if I could really run it. But you know I can't do that.- It's yours; and even if you gave it to me, Verne and the operating organization wouldn't let me do what I'd want to do. No, Dad, there's something vitally wrong with the oil industry, and I can never play the game with the rest. I want to go off and try something on my own."

"You mean to go alone?"

"There's another fellow has the same idea, and we're going together. Gregor Nikolaieff."

"That Russian! Couldn't you possibly find an American to associate with?"

"Well, it just happens, Dad, that none of the Americans are interested."

There was a long pause. "And you really mean this seriously?"

"Yes, Dad, I'm going to do it."

"You know, son, the big industries are pretty rough, most of them. Some of the men get badly hurt, and some killed."

"Yes, I know just the point."

"It's pretty hard on a father that has only one son, and had hopes for him. You know, I've really thought a lot about you—it's been the main reason I worked so hard."

"I know, Dad; and don't think I haven't suffered about it; but I just can't help it, I'm—"

Another pause. "Have you thought about Vee?"

"Yes."

"Have you told her?"

"No, I've been putting it off, just as I did with you. I know she won't stand for it. I shall have to give her up."

"A man ought to think a long time before he throws away his happiness like that, son."

"I have thought, all I know how. But I couldn't spend my life as an appendage to Vee's moving picture career. I should be suffocated with luxury. I have ambitions of my own, and I have to follow them. I want to try to help the workers, and first I have to know how they live."

"It seems to me, son, you talk like one of them—I mean the red ones."

"Maybe so, Dad, but I assure you, it doesn't seem that way to the reds."

Again there was a silence. Dad's supply of words was running short. "I never heard of such a thing in my life!"

"It is really quite an old idea at least two or three hundred years." And Bunny went on to tell about the young Lord Siddhartha, in far off India, who is known to the Western world as Buddha now he gave up his lands and his treasures, and went out to wander with a beggar's bowl, in the hope of find ing some truth about life that was not known at court. "The palace which the king had given to the prince was resplandent with all the luxuries of India; for the king was anxious to see his son happy. All sorrowful sights, all misery, and all knowledge of misery were kept away from Siddhartha, and he knew not that there was evil in the world. But as the chained elephant longs for the wilde of the jungle, so the prince was eager to see the world, and he asked his father, the king, for permission to do so. And Shuddhodana ordered a jewel-fronted chariot with four stately horses to be held ready, and commanded the roads to be adorned where his son would pass." And then Bunny, seeing the bewildered look on Shuddhodana's face, began to laugh. "Which would you rather I became, Dad—a Buddhist or a Bolshevik?"

And truly, Dad wouldn't have know what to decide!

BRITAIN MOBILIZES FOR WAR ON CHINA

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

The United States senate has been partially fumigated by the refusal of that august body to permit Frank L. Smith, senator-elect of Illinois, who squanders of Governor Small, from spending more than a few bottle hours in the chamber. Frank was a very bad boy in getting caught stuffing Sam Insull's cash. Fancy a New York candidate for the mayoralty caught with Interborough money in his jeans. It would mean the resurrection of ex-mayor Hylan. Sam Insull, the public utility magnate was quite a popular fellow in Illinois until he was exposed in the role of a fellow out for a good time. Some people have a habit of throwing money away on taxis until they get down to their last five dollar bill and then starting it in the slush until the next ship comes in.

Since The DAILY WORKER moved to New York we could hardly resist giving most of our attention to what is taking place in this big city but the Chicago papers much to our amazement feature issues of such national importance as the senate's refusal to seat Frank L. Smith. We have also notice that the good citizens of Chicago are confronted with the perennial moron problem. So serious is the situation that doctors, lawyers, students and some normal citizens joined in a round table conference to discuss the menace. If the other morons have a sense of humor they might be able to laugh off their deficiencies.

Hunting morons is a favorite dodge in Chicago when the grafting politicians deserve to throw the blue-nosed reformers off the scent or off the track of some cash. This is not peculiar to Chicago tho the art of passing the bunk is highly developed there. Chicago capitalist papers then specialize in protecting millions by grafters unctuously thump their pulpit covers and tbast decency that a certain Chicago politician could not find a resting place in the senate. The professional moralists who spend their time snooping around the lid rejoiced and more respectable places where Volstead-ism is trodden on also turn up their eyes to heaven when some person with flashbacks in his pockets gets a ride in the wagon.

What hypocrites our capitalist politicians are! The same senate that ousted Smith, acquiesced in the policy of the state department in sending marines to rape Nicaragua, politically, and in threatening war on Mexico and in the dispatch of warships to China. We are strongly in favor of the ousting of Frank L. Smith from the senate. In fact it would please us to see the entire senate abolished. We would be better pleased if a Soviet, representing the workers and farmers of the United States supplanted the senate. But how those respectable senators strain at a few hundred thousand Insull dollars and swallow the billions that are exploiting the peoples of Mexico, Nicaragua and China.

The Countess Salm—the title cost her father half a million dollars and the only thing the countess got out of the expenditure is a child—reached Europe under an assumed name, oddly enough meaning "good thing." Let us hope she does not run into another count as European counts know a good thing when they see it and we cannot afford to allow our country to be impoverished further by permitting our wealthy women to travel abroad at the risk of losing their virtue and our money.

Anniversary Of Passaic Sees Strike On

Some Shops Stubbornly Resist; Others Yield

(By ESTHER LOWELL, Fed. Press)

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 24. (FP)—Passaic is celebrating the first anniversary of its biggest textile strike. Organized labor can puff its chest out a bit for its own part in the great fight.

January 25, 1926, the first group of wool textile workers walked out of Botany Mills calling for the return of the 10% wage cut. Workers from the other mills followed in early days.

One year of strike has taught Passaic much. The strikers trudged through snow and wind, through rain, through the attacks of mounted police, clubbing police, tear-gas throwing police and through mill owners' propaganda. The demand for a union grew and grew. Nothing would down it.

Application of the strikers for admittance to the American Federation of Labor Union, the United Textile Workers, was accepted. U. T. W. vice-president James Starr took active charge when local 1603 was formed. The strike leaders of the past months' battles—Albert Weisbord and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn particularly—stepped into other fields. They undertook to raise funds to fight the many strike defense cases the courts piled up.

Strikers' Relief.

Relief work had to be continued on the spot. Alfred Wagenknecht has remained relief director throughout, organizing the lines of supply so that the striking street car strike. Paul Corbin, Socialist Party organizer, and Frank Trumbull could not find a resting place in the senate. The professional moralists who spend their time snooping around the lid rejoiced and more respectable places where Volstead-ism is trodden on also turn up their eyes to heaven when some person with flashbacks in his pockets gets a ride in the wagon.

Learn by Doing.

All the while there were strike meetings with thousands attending and learning about the labor movement. It was a high spot in the lives of the 16,000 workers who walked out of the two-thirds of the 22 mills of Passaic and surrounding textile towns. They were out of the stuffy workrooms full of lint, steamy, unkempt and roaring with machinery that drove the workers day and night. They paraded around the town and told the world about them why they were striking. They became the thousands of heroes and heroines of a movie which is still telling the story of their strike around the world.

Bosses' Lines Break.

Finally one of the small mills broke ranks and settled with the United Textile Workers' union. Passaic Worsted's settlement was followed in a month by the big Botany Mill. The year rounds out with Forstmann-Hoffmann giving U. T. W. president Thomas McMahon its most conciliatory statement so far—a letter which may lead to settlement yet on the terms the other mills took. Not all the Botany workers are back on the job yet because the season is slow. There are these thousand from Forstmann-Hoffmann out fighting while the whole union, others from New Jersey Worsted Spinning and United Piece Dye Works.

Partly Won.

The strike isn't over and it certainly isn't beaten. If the organized labor movement feels proud that it has supported so lusty a fight, let it remember to keep up its aid until the struggle is done and the union firmly established in Passaic—the best known town now of backward New Jersey. Neighboring Paterson—the silk town—is busy with the plans of the Central Labor union and Building Trades Council committees for a February bazaar for Passaic. Unions throughout the country are helping organized labor win Passaic.

Freud Ill with Cancer.

VIENNA, Jan. 24.—Dr. Freud, internationally known psycho-analyst has undergone a successful operation for a cancer of the tongue. He will be unable to speak over a whisper for six months. His clientele, made up largely of fashionable folk from all over the world, including many from the United States, will be cared for by his staff.

Great Northern Railway Declares 10% Dividend Earns 20 Million in '26

Net earnings available for dividends to stockholders of the Great Northern railroad for 1926 amounted to $20,060,000, it is announced by Ralph Budd, president of the road. This represents 10.43 per cent on the capital stock of $245,916,550.

Last year was the most prosperous for the Great Northern since 1921, Budd declared. This despite the condition of agriculture, the dominant industry in the railroad's territory.

In 1925 the road netted $21,435,296 in dividends, or 8.56 per cent.

STRIKERS TAKE COMPANY OFFER AS BASIS ONLY

Forstmann Allows Union but Discriminates

PASSAIC, Jan. 24.—At a meeting of Forstmann & Huffmann strikers, held at Ukrainian Hall, President St., for the purpose of considering a letter received through Judge Cabell's Citizens' Committee from Mr. Forstmann, it was unanimously decided to accept the Forstmann letter only as a basis for further negotiations and to continue the strike until recognition of the union was conceded.

Once They Cared.

The Forstmann letter, which was addressed to Judge Cabell and Mon-

the existence of a strike at the F. & H. mills maintained by the United Councils of Workingclass Housewives fed the strikers' children. Summer found the strikers' kiddies provided with a playground such as the mill owners had never thought to offer. Some of the undernourished youngsters won vacations in country camps where they fattened and grew ruddy.

Learn by Doing.

It was a high spot in the lives of the 16,000 workers who walked out of the two-thirds of the 22 mills of Passaic and surrounding textile towns. There are these thousand from Forstmann-Hoffmann out fighting while the whole union, others from New Jersey Worsted Spinning and United Piece Dye Works.

Demand Struggle Continue.

Gustave Deak, president of Local 1603, acted as chairman of the meeting and threw the floor open to discussion and questions followed the addresses. Deak also made known his support of the motion. In the discussion not a voice was raised in favor of unqualified acceptance, but instead spokesman after spokesman from the rank and file rose to denounce the terms offered by Forstmann and to demand that the struggle for union recognition be continued. When finally the vote was taken it was unanimously in favor of the Dawson motion.

McMahon Wants Another Vote.

At the insistence of President McMahon, of the U. T. W., a secret ballot will be held some night next week for a second vote on the question. Those who know the spirit of the strikers assert, however, that this ballot will show practically the same result as last night's open ballot.

Frame Up For Miner Union Delegate

Progressive Arrested When Lewis Hits Town

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 24.—John L. Lewis arrived in town yesterday ready to defend himself, if he can, against the serious charges of stealing the election of union officials held last month, to explain why in the three years elapsed since the last election the union has shrunk one third in size, and to tell what he means by instituting a "rule or ruin," union smashing policy of expulsions and reversals from office or from the ballot of those who have always fought for the progress of the union.

The first two blows in favor of Lewis were struck immediately on his arrival in this, the headquarters city of the international union.

Election Frauds?

The international board of tellers, elected previous to the militant campaign of the progressives this year, and subservient to the Lewis machine in every respect, rendered a report, which, as predicted, gave Lewis and associates a lump sum majority of the votes of the last convention.

They credit Lewis with 173,823½ votes and Brophy, his progressive opponent, running on a program of "Save The Union", a vote of 60,661½. Philip Murray, the machine vice president, and Thomas Kennedy, the machine secretary treasurer, were granted similar majorities.

Fight To Check Up Vote.

But these figures mean nothing without the report of the vote by on by the delegates at the convention from those unions, or by the union meeting themselves. One of the resolutions introduced by numerous local unions scattered about the coal fields is for more accurate checking of the vote. The unofficial returns received by the "Save the Union" committees organized to support the policies of John Brophy indicate that Brophy was elected. One of the first serious struggles in the convention, when it is called to order later in the day, will undoubtedly be the question of the acceptance of the board of tellers' report.

Assault Progressives.

In addition to announcing his "majority" at the psychological moment, deliberate and planned assaults by progressive delegates were made by supporters of Lewis. Powers Hapgood, of Gallitzin, Penn., well known writer on local mining topics, who recently worked his way around the world, laboring in the coal mines of every country, is the most prominent victim. Hapgood was lured into a hotel "to see a newspaper man" and assaulted by gunmen.

Hate Hapgood.

Hapgood's chief assailant was W. J. Patton, vice-president of District 5, Pittsburg, in the discredited Fagan administration there. Hapgood had badly defeated Fagan in a series of debates throughout Pennsylvania during the campaign.

Patton and his aids contrived to get Hapgood alone and for fifteen minutes he fought for his life against three gangsters, one of whom carried a gun, which he was unable to use because of the close quarters.

All concerned were arrested, and one of the best attorneys in Indianapolis tried to get the case postponed

Housing Committee Chairman Says Rich Will Not End Slums

August Heckscher, chairman of the National Housing Committee for congested areas, told his audience in a speech delivered at the town hall last night, that they must not rely on wealthy men to finance the replacement of slums by model tenements.

Heckscher said: "What is in contemplation must commend itself to the people at large. The people of slender means are more generous than are the rich. But why should not the city absorb the unearned increment and undertake the job?"

He pointed out defects in the recent state housing law, and especially that of attempting to gain private finance for housing.

Breach Between Pope & Mussolini Widening; Both Making Sharp Criticisms

ROME, Jan. 24.—The breach between the vatican and the fascist government is widening and becoming more apparent as fascist government is widening and with the government and church are making charges against each other. The Tribuna has published attacks on Cardinal Gasparri, the pope's secretary of state, denouncing him for expressing sympathy with the French governments in its fight against royalist catholics.

Tribuna charges the vatican is supporting the French masonic organizations "who represent the opinions of the same men who carry on the fight without quarter against fascism." This leniency by grand masonry must not be overlooked, the paper says.

Unita, a papal organ, complains bitterly against the new educational laws of the government, in which it sees an attempt to take the youth from church control.

These latest outbreaks followed the severe criticism of fascism by Pope Pius last month, when he delivered an allocation declaring fascism was dangerous to the "spiritual welfare" of the people.

GANGSTER BEATS STRIKING MEMBER OF CLOAKMAKERS

Workers Throng Picket Line in Early Morning

Several hundred workers appeared yesterday morning to picket the cloak and dress shops that have been called on strike by the joint board because of dictatorial methods which they refused to register with the International, or lockouts made against the workers by employers.

The picket lines were harried by gangsters who were under the direct supervision of Vice President Dubinsky and Organizers Auretsky and Dutti of the International. One worker was beaten severely over the head by a gangster who escaped.

Bosses Aid Sigman.

The shops that have been called on strike are the Henry Block dress shop at 247 West 37th Street, where a lockout of 22 workers was declared, at Rosenberg and Erskine dress shop at 345 West 35th Street, against a lockout, at the J. M. Rafter cloak shop at 520 Eighth Avenue, all of which have discharged workers for refusing to register with the International and so aid the union-smashing activities of Sigmanism. In the Nowman and Steinlouf shop at 236 West 26th Street, and the Lemmel and Cutler shop at 142 West 24th Street, other workers were discharged and the shop called on strike.

Pickets who responded to the call for a demonstration at those shops came from the general trade, as well as from struck shops, in order to show their solidarity against the tactics of the International in demanding that the workers register, and in persuading employers to discharge workers who refuse.

Workers to Fight Betrayal.

"The workers resent and will fight against such betrayals by officers who are supposed to protect their interests" declared Louis Hyman, manager of the joint board, in discussing the calling of the strikes. "The International must not be allowed to take away a union man's bread as a part of its scheme to keep

Real Estate Money Keeps "Peaches" In Considerable Luxury

"Peaches," called by "Daddy" Browning a "gold digger," passed the day at home in her apartment on West End Ave., and spent the time receiving a few flowers, many telephone messages, and a series of gifts. Flowers came in freely, one bouquet consisting of yellow roses and "lucky" Japanese irises. "I'll wear them," Peaches told her mother, "I want all the luck I can get."

"Peaches" wore a green satin negligee, trimmed with marabou, one of the garments "Daddy," the Big Rent Man from West 72nd Street, provided for her. "Daddy" owns real estate.

Canton Confident of Its Power to Resist

Rush of Imperialist Warships and Soldiers To the Orient Grows Daily

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The state department probably will issue within 48 hours a pronouncement of this government's policy in China, it was learned today.

Secretary Kellogg and his chief of far eastern affairs were in conference all day. It is understood they were drafting the statement which will be submitted to President Coolidge for approval before being made public.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, January 24.—Intense excitement prevailed at Downing Street and the war office today as the word passed around that war with China was inevitable. Crowds gathered at the entrance to 16 Downing Street, reminiscent of August, 1914.

The war is extremely unpopular with the masses. Many people fear that this means the start of another world war and the more thotful of the bourgeoisie fear that such a war would wreck the empire.

Defies British Empire.

PEKING, Jan. 24.—Assailing England as the "mother of imperialism in China," Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister, today delivered to the American legation an impassioned statement which was regarded as practically a declaration of war against England by the nationalist regime.

The statement says in part:

Chen declared that foreigners can no longer be protected by foreign bayonets in China since China can fight back with the economic boycott.

"The leading assumption of all British and other foreign declarations of policy in regard to China is that she is unable to look after her own interests and that pursuant to the 'spirit of the Washington conferences' the powers must enter into self-denying ordinances regarding China in order to safeguard her integrity and independence, promote her political development, rehabilitation and her finances.

"This is not true of Nationalist China. To-day this new China is strong and conscious of its power, its ability through economic means to enforce its will on Chinese soil against any power.

"The question then is not what Great Britain and other powers may wish to grant China to meet legitimate aspirations in the Chinese nation, but what Nationalist China may justly grant Great Britain and the other powers.

Will Protect Life.

"This great, impressive fact must be grasped.

"Today effective protection of foreign life and property does not stand and can no longer stand on foreign bayonets and foreign gunboats because the arm of the Chinese Nationalist—the economic weapon—is more puissant than any engine of warfare that foreigners can devise.

"The British in particular must understand that the forces in the present revolutionary situation are handing over protection of foreign life and property to the government that derives its authority from those in whose hands is centered power that can paralyze the economic life of the foreign nationals in China.

Ready to Negotiate.

"It is, however, the view of the Nationalist Government that intervention of China from the yoke of foreign imperialism need not necessarily involve any armed conflict between Chinese nationalism and foreign powers. For this reason the Nationalist Government prefers to have all questions outstanding between Nationalist China and foreign powers settled by negotiation. It is this sense that the Nationalist Minister of Foreign Affairs indicates as the policy of the Nationalist Government to the American Minister who the latter visited Canton last autumn, and the same policy has again been indicated to the new British Minister, the Japanese representative and the representative of the American Minister.

Separate Treaties.

"In order to prove that this is not an idle statement of policy the Nationalist government hereby declares

MEXICAN CROWD ASSAILS YANKEE LAND GRAB PLAN

Anti-Imperialist League Rallies Thousands

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, Jan. 24.—Thousands of people gathered in a meeting under the auspices of the all-American Anti-Imperialist League held here in the Arbeu Theatre, and listened to a denunciation of Yankee Imperialism.

Dr. Pedro Zepeda and Herman Robledo, representatives of the Sacasa Liberal government of Nicaragua, recognized by Mexico but suppressed by the United States, criticized American interference on the side of the reactionary Diaz government. Senor Robledo charged that the Kellogg policies were dictated by Wall Street, which was seeking to absorb the entire wealth of the country.

During the meeting a circular of the A. A. A. I. L. was distributed pointing out that the oppressed of all nationalities must cooperate against the great imperialist nations. It states:

"We are not living in the sad days of 1847. Today war will cost more than victory. It could not steal a canal, as Roosevelt did when the world was indifferent. Cuba, the Philippines and Porto Rico were stolen from Spain and passed into the hands of American capitalists, who control the White House.

"Mexico, Haiti, Santo Domingo and Central America have not forgotten the hypocrisy of Wilson. Vera Cruz still has her ruins caused by Yankee cannon.

"Santo Domingo will always remember the intervention of Admiral Knapp. Venezuela, Peru, Cuba and other countries see their governments of brutal tyranny, which imperialism upholds, in criminal complicity with traitors.

"China, Java and India are fighting with arms for liberation, and America, the great colony of Wall Street, also has enlisted for the rebellion. Mexico has nationalized the subsoil and nihilized her lands, and wishes to free herself from the tutelage of foreigners. Nicaragua, that heroic nation, is sacrificing herself in order to have her own government.

"Our lives are those which feed the monster. Rebel against it. We can fight with great possibilities of escape. Imitate Chinese labor. Make effective our organizations. Confront imperialism of every kind."

JAPAN ANNOUNCES ADOPTION OF "HANDS OFF" POLICY IN CHINA

TOKIO, January 24.—Japan has declined a British request for military and naval co-operation in China it was stated officially today. The announcement is expected to definitely set at rest rumors that Japan was sending warships to China with a view to supporting Great Britain's hostile demonstration against the Cantonese government.

Workers Rally To Save Union I. L. G. W. Fund

Bond Issue Going Over, Said Joint Board Head

Thousands of workers throughout the country and hundreds of organizations are carrying on an energetic campaign to make the "Save The Union" bond issue of the New York joint board of the I. L. G. W. U. a success, according to Julius Portnoy, manager-secretary of the joint board, in a special statement to The DAILY WORKER yesterday.

Workmen's Circle Branches.

"There are already 54 Workmen Circle branches that have contributed to the loan from their treasuries and there are active committees in 186 branches of that organization working to put the loan across."

Active work is going on in the Independent Workmens' Circle branches, in hundreds of unions and other workers' organizations, comrade Portnoy declared, giving the names of a few:

Organizations Assisting.

The Upholsterers' Union, Philia.; The Progressive Carpenters, Philia.; Textile Workers, New London; Cap-makers, Rochester; Capmakers, Los Angeles; Capmakers, Boston; Workers Cultural League, Worcester, Mass; Ladies' Educational Club, Denver, Colorado; Mothers' League of New England; Vacationists at Camp Nitedgaitis (Co-op.); Lithuanian Workingclass Women; Workers Dramatic Studio; Workmens' Circle Association, Dallas, Texas; Women's Progressive League, Bridgeport, Conn., and progressive workers in the following unions:

Millinery, furriers, capmakers, shirt irgmers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers and others.

The following contributions were received from out-of-town points during the past three days:

Workmens' Circle, branch 626, Omaha, Nebraska, $325; Branch 484, St. Joseph, Mich., $100 cash and $200 pledged; from Philadelphia an additional $600; from Worcester an additional $400; Cleveland forwarded another contribution of $375; Los Angeles added $490 more to its contribution and Youngstown, Ohio, $200.

Success Is Assured.

Comrade Portnoy stated that there were a number of subscriptions received from social organizations and individuals in New York City and other places.

"The complete amount of $250,000 will be undoubtedly raised," said Comrade Portnoy, "but it is of the greatest importance that the complete issue should be subscribed at the earliest moment. The full confidence of the workers in the joint board is being demonstrated every day. The determination of all the workers to defeat Sigman's pogrom plan is as firm as ever, which is only what could be expected from those who know only too well, Sigman and his clique."

Insurgent Republicans Vote With Regulars On Lausanne Treaty

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The hatchet that administration and insurgent republicans have wielded upon each other ever since 1912 was buried in a flower-strewn plot behind the capitol during the recent vote on ratification of the Lausanne Treaty.

The insurgents forgot their differences and voted as a man alongside their rugged brethren to support the treaty. It was the first time since Theodore Roosevelt made his historic bolt from the party in 1912, according to senate historians, that the two groups voted solidly side by side against the democrats or a major political issue.

League of Nations to Admit Fascist Unions To Its Labor Bureau

ROME, Jan. 24.—The labor bureau of the League of Nations has decided to recognize the Fascist trade unions in accordance with the decision of the conference of labor, it was learned here today.

Albert Thomas, representing the labor bureau established at Geneva by the League of Nations has been having conferences with Edmond Rossoni, spokesman for the black shirted employers' thugs known as Fascist Syndicates could deal with them, the labor bureau of the league of nations continued to recognize the former. Therefore, the change of policy in Geneva at the present time is of major importance.

in power a little group of bureaucratic officials who like their jobs. The joint board will oppose such tactics by calling strikes wherever it is found that workers have been discharged for refusing to obey the International's ukase."

Mr. Hyman also called attention to the meeting which Mr. Sigman, president of the international, is attempting to drum up for Wednesday evening in Cooper union to "present to the dressmakers for their approval, the contract he has made with the dress association."

Repudiate Dress Contract.

"The workers do not recognize Mr. Sigman's contract and will not attend his meeting to hear him discuss it," Hyman said. "They know too well that they cannot trust any agreement the International may make, but that 'secondary' trouble kept secret by the International are likely to nullify even such terms as it has secured, as experience in the past has proved."

Rejects Hull Clause to Branch Bank Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—National banks have given their fight to kill the Hull Amendment in the McFadden branch banking bill. The amendment was rejected by a vote of 228 to 166. The Hull Amendment would forbid national branch banking in states which do not now permit branch banking.

$2,000,000 BROOKWOOD DRIVE.

KATONAH, N. Y., (FP).—Endorsement of the $2,000,000 building and endowment fund drive which Brookwood Labor college is launching has been given by the New York state federation of labor and the New York central trades and labor council. Committees have been issued by the city body to representatives of the fund.

REPRESENTATIVE HUDDLESTON DEMANDS COOLIDGE OPEN BREAST TO CONGRESSMEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Notice that opponents of the administration's foreign policy will demand an extra session of congress unless the Nicaraguan and Mexican situations are cleared up by March 4, was served in the house by Representative Huddleston (D.) of Alabama.

He called upon President Coolidge to say whether he will submit the Mexican dispute to arbitration.

"We do not want to go home and then be called back here and told that we must declare war," he said.

Mexican War Unpopular

Reactionary Show Public Wants Arbitration

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24.—Administration officials let it be known today that President Coolidge still believes the controversy engendered by Mexico's drive to free many workers and from many grooves in the social structure, can be settled by arbitration of the Mexican land question.

President Coolidge feels that his policy of provoking a war with Mexico, if necessary, in order to guarantee the American oil companies in full possession of their immensely profitable wells is unpopular among Americans who care no oil land in Mexico.

Public Resentment.

The President is of the opinion that the American public sees sordid and unworthy aims in a situation in which it has always been the official theory that nothing but the most idealistic principles rule—the public as a whole, the recent resolutions show—not seeming a the to destinguish between a threatened war over the sacred principles of private property (already stated by President Coolidge to not be subject to any arbitration) and a mere merchant adventuring, in which American oil companies secured from various reactionary Mexican governments a more or less clouded title to lands, and a somewhat doubtful exemption from taxes.

Against Land Law.

The American people do not appear, say the President's friends, to understand the iniquity of the Mexican land law, which declares the mineral wealth below the soil of the nation to be a national trust, and thereby conflicts with the claims of American and other foreign oil and mining companies.

An assurance that no war with Mexico is expected is issued by administration officials in close touch with the President, but this is accompanied by a considerable amount of talk in favor of lifting the embargo on arms and ammunition shipped from the United States to clerical rebels, savage Yaqui Indians, and other discontented elements in Mexico, including the expected uprising of former President Adolfo De la Huerta, now in Los Angeles, Cal., near the border.

The situation of the administration is not rendered any more comfortable, say the President's friends, by the fact that the Senate Committee on foreign relations has reported in a resolution providing for arbitration of the Mexican difficulty, and that this resolution coming from a republican controlled committee, is greeted by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, democratic floor leader, with the expression, "I welcome it!"

The President is reported to be considering a special message to Congress, setting forth his views on the Mexican question, similar to the message on Nicaragua which he made when popular dissatisfaction with the course being pursued by the State Department became audible.

LANSBURY'S WEEKLY IS ANTI-COMMUNIST, BUT AMAZED AN IDIOCY OF "PICKLING COMMITTEE"

LONDON, January 24.—Lansbury's Weekly, representing a section of British labor unionists, anti-Communist in policy, discusses the American "Committee for the Preservation of Trade Unions" under the title of "A Strange New League". Lansbury's goes on to say of the movement of Sigman, Hillman and certain reactionary A. F. L. chieftains:

"And from what are the American trade unions to be preserved? Is it from the savage brutality of the ironmasters and coalmasters of the United States? Or from the more insidious slave-driving of the Henry Fords? From neither. This imposing organization, which claims, and probably possesses, the allegiance of the rank and file of the workers generally, as well as of the right and center leaders, exists for nothing else but to fight the Workers (Communist) Party."

After a review of the published statement of "The Committee for the Preservation of Trade Unions," and its statement against Communism, the editorial continues:

"Therefore we are not likely to be suspected of partiality when we say that the new organization is the silliest of which we have heard for years. Any trade union leader, whether it is Mr. Jones, of Yorkshire, or Mr. Sigman, of New York, who spends his time in organizing a bogey hunt against a section of his own members is playing the fool, and befriending nobody but the capitalists. Have the American leaders never heard of the conditions in their own steel industry? Don't they know that their own miners will soon have to fight the toughest struggle of their whole career? Do they not know that trade unionism is forbidden in great sections of the United States engineering trade? There are ample tasks for them there.

"The only man who is secure from Communist or other attacks is the steady and reliable fighting official, who cannot be suspected of truckling to the employers. If American "new leaders" had a little more backbone they would be less feared of the Communists. A league for more ginger in the American unions is what they need more."

This is considered here the judgment of the rather conservative groups in British trade unionism on the fantastic adventure of the reactionary elements in American unions.

Freiheit Recognizes an Ally

We greet The DAILY WORKER and recognize the great help it will be to the struggle now being conducted by the Jewish and other language press of the left wing in the New York unions against the destructive tactics of certain reactionary leaders. The DAILY WORKER deserves the utmost support of all working men.

False Income Report Perjury.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Wilful attempt to evade income tax by making a false return is punishable as perjury, the Supreme Court ruled today in reversing a Circuit Court decision which had held that the Dyer Act of 1921 reversed a section of the penal code.

for a week. He represented the progressives. The jury was in the minority.

It is reported from administration circles that if Hapgood is not frightened out by this, or kept in jail on charges of bribery, an attempt will be made to bar him from the floor when the convention starts.

Lewis has issued a statement that the convention will consider a new wage contract, to take the place of the one which expires on April 1. But he has carefully avoided stating whether his policy involves a reduction of wages.

Unorganized Must Strike.

The militants are determined not to take a reduction, but realize that Lewis' policies have so weakened the union, that a strike in only the organized fields with sixty-five per cent of the coal production already coming from the non-union fields, could not win. Their fight will center on action to force the Lewis administration to place in the unorganized fields the vast army of "international organizers" now held almost entirely in union fields where they take part in union politics to keep the international and district machines in power.

To Elevate Big Guns On U. S. Battleships

Washington, Jan. 24.—Elevation of the big guns on all American battleships was recommended today by the house naval affairs committee, in violation of the understanding between former Secretary Hughes and Great Britain.

This came in a revised report to the house providing for funds to modernize the battleships Oklahoma and Nevada, but without mention of the Oklahoma and Nevada, but recommended elevation on the other big ships.

Some years ago, great Britain protested elevation of the guns and Charles E. Hughes, then secretary of state, came to an understanding with the British ambassador, thereby ending the English protest. By this action, the understanding is considered in official circles here to be abrogated.

Lynchings.

Thirty-two lynchings were recorded in 1926 against 18 in the twelve months of 1925, and increase due to, a great extent, it is believed, to the failure of Congress to take action on anti-lynching legislation. A considerable decrease in cases of mob violence is shown in the 1926 record—from 40 in 1925 to 21 in the period.

McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill Must Not Be Republican Football

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE New York World sums up two possibilities confronting the McNary-Haugen farm relief measure now before congress as follows:

"If it passes Lowden will get the credit; if it is defeated Coolidge will get the blame."

The only inference that can be drawn from this declaration is that the measure is being used as a political football to determine who is to be the presidential nominee of the republican party in 1928.

With little more than a month remaining of the present session of congress, it would be easy for President Coolidge to prevent the passage of the measure. In the words of The World, "at most all he has in the east, where his strength already lies, but it can only injure him in the west."

The injury in the west is expected to rebound to the benefit of Frank O. Lowden, the multi-millionaire, who is expected to catch the republican unpopularity created by Cal Coolidge and turn it into the republican popularity that is necessary to retain the rule of Wall Street's pet party in Washington.

The growing power the workers and farmers, therefore, is not only to rap Coolidge on the knuckles, forcing him to drop his grip on Wall Street's ruling class sceptre in Washington, but also to give Lowden the boot so that in his gyrations he will miss the White House by many a mile.

The McNary-Haugen legislation has been the central rallying point for agrarian discontent for several years. That discontent has been growing, contrary to the deep expectations and the fond hopes of the leading reactionaries of both the old parties that conditions would improve. Low prices, however, hit the cotton and corn belts especially hard, while little improvement was shown in other crop producing sections of the nation, with the result that even the staid and reactionary Farm Bureau federation, the loose semi-radical utterances, even declaring that it is time for closer contacts with the workers in the cities. The St. Louis joint gathering of the cotton and corn growing areas as blocks early in itself. Everywhere that farmers gathered, the Coolidge-Mellon administration was damned along with the Wall Street bankers and the profit-gorged industrialists.

It is easy to understand that, under this mounting storm of protest, the house committee on agriculture under the chairmanship of McNary, "should add another knuckle in the administration's bag of blows by unanimously voting a favorable report on the McNary-Haugen bill." The World adds that this bill "is much gayer passage now than at any time during the three years it has been before congress."

Whether the bill passes or not, it should not be a case of "hate Coolidge" and "love Lowden," but rather of turning the wrath of the farming population against both these "birds of a feather" who prey on the whole working class.

Great beginnings have been made in the cluster of states that extends from Minnesota to the Pacific coast from Minnesota.

Here the farmers say, "Let us take the McNary-haugen farm relief bill if that is the best we can get now. But it surely does not satisfy our needs. We are going to keep on fighting, however, until we get what we want."

This spirit finds its reflection in the staunch attitude of the city and land toilers in Minnesota in support of their farmer-labor party. It was expressed in resolutions adopted at the first convention of the progressive farmers of America, when resolutions were adopted declaring for the labor party. The growing reply to the Coolidge-Mellon administration, that refuses relief to the farmers and that fights the industrial workers with every weapon at its disposal, is independent political action through the labor party, raising the call for "the Labor Party in the 1928 Elections."

Insurgents Plead Need to Lend Armies of China

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24.—In spite of the more extensive protection given foreigners in China by the naval forces now on the scene, a request for reinforcements for the allied navies in Chinese waters.

Full responsibility for the protection of all foreigners in China has been placed on the shoulders of Admiral C. S. Williams, Commander-in-Chief of the American forces there, it was learned today.

As ranking officer over either the British or Japanese commanders, he can give the necessary orders to the allied armada now gathering, it was stated.

At the same time it was learned that Admiral Williams' report to the state department was to "shot of dynamite" that its publication was suppressed so as not to unduly alarm the public.

New Mexican Crisis Arises Over Land Law

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 24.—A new crisis is forcing the issue between the Mexican and United States governments over the application of the laws for carrying out article 27 of the 1917 constitution. The crisis is seen in the action of the Mexican government in cancelling the drilling permits granted last year for lands for which the companies failed to ask "confirmatory concessions" under the petroleum laws before January 1.

Managers in the Tampico field are in direct communication with their principal offices in New York relative to the course of action to be pursued to meet the situation.

The cancellations thus far made extend as far back as last autumn and affect such companies as the Huasteca Petroleum, Transcontinental Petroleum, and the Mexican Gulf, formed by the Standard Oil, as well as other powerful United States interests.

Firemen's Wages Are Under Consideration

At a conference held in the Waldorf Astoria, G. W. W. Hanger of the railroad mediation board discussed the wages of locomotive firemen with a committee headed by D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. A separate conference was held a little earlier between Hanger and a committee of railroad managers led by vice president J. C. Walker of the New York Central. Negotiations continue.

Lynch Nearly Twice as Many.

Twenty-eight cases of interference with meetings were reported during the year and a constitution of affiliated meetings of Communists, Socialists, K. K. K., the Salvation Army and unaffiliated liberal and radical speakers. Many of these reports filed by leaders of speech have been traced to propaganda emanating from the war department, the American Legion and patriotoering societies. Such the dressmakers have had a strike of months, the paper box makers have been for 18 weeks meeting the clubs of the New York police on picket line, yet Passaic is still carrying on. Remembering all they have endured, remembering the courage and determination in those faces at mass meetings, one knows that they will continue until every one of the mills—the last to strike as well as the first, which has already settled —agrees to recognize the workers' union and its chosen representatives.

As they sing and shout at Passaic, "Solidarity forever, for the union makes us strong!"

"Passaic" Means Strike

BY HELEN BLACK

Great events like great people are usually born in obscurity. When they have become famous it seems impossible that there could have been a time when they were unknown. "How strange," we say, "that no one realized on this date history was being made and the course of the world changed."

Today it is hard to believe that a year ago when the workers of the Botany Worsted Mills at Passaic walked out on strike, with Gus Deak at their head, almost no one knew about it. Very few paid any attention to it. Even the labor world did not realize that one of the greatest events in America's union history had begun with this defiance of a few thousand unorganized workers in a New Jersey mill town.

World Famous Now,

Today there is probably no country in the world that has not heard of the Passaic strike. This is literally true, for as more and more workers came out on strike and the wrath of the employers was given vent through the clubs and bombs of the police, Passaic became a symbol of labor's battle front and even outside the ranks of labor it was forced upon the notice of people in many lands.

Policemen's Clubs.

As news of the strike spread, the word "Passaic" came to mean "strike" and immediately brought up pictures of sadistic police clubbing men, women and children on the picket line and newspaper and camera men on the sidelines. "Passaic" meant the fire hose and tear gas bombs used to defend workers' rights, mass injunctions against mass meetings, arrests and excessive bail, police lawlessness and brutality almost unprecedented in America.

Courage Plus.

But in this year of brave and vigorous striking, "Passaic" has come to remind us of other pictures besides these. Anyone who has seen one of Passaic's mass meetings can testify to the spirit, enthusiasm, the courage, the determination which is seen in the faces of those plucky workers. For hours they stand packed in a meeting hall or an open field—old women with shawls over their heads, young girls, children, old and worn grandfathers, vigorous young and middle-aged men, all with a patience born of years of suffering, but all with a new faith which has come from these months of solidarity in the strike. This mass of workers seems to show unmistakably that they believe unionism has shown the way out. Before January 1926, everything seemed hopeless. What could a lone worker, with wife and children, do against a powerful boss determined to cut and cut wages below the starvation level; what could he do to make his working conditions decent so that he might keep them decent and premature old age? There was no answer to this problem until suddenly the Botany workers walked out on strike, and the Passaic textile union started.

Since the Passaic strike began, the furriers have had a long and bitter battle, the dressmakers have had a strike of months, the paper box makers have been for 18 weeks meeting the clubs of the New York police on picket line, yet Passaic is still carrying on. Remembering all they have endured, remembering the courage and determination in those faces at mass meetings, one knows that they will continue until every one of the mills—the last to strike as well as the first, which has already settled —agrees to recognize the workers' union and its chosen representatives.

"Success To Daily" Says Manager Local 2

Class conscious workers and comrades of New York: Let us greet the coming of The DAILY WORKER to the City of New York, the city that has of late become the battlefield of the progressive workingmen's movements, and where at the present time the greatest struggle the labor movement has seen is taking place.

At this moment, when the Sigmans, and Beckermans, aided by the discredited press of the S. P., and with the aid of the bosses have begun the campaign to dominate or to ruin and to break up the unions, the coming of The DAILY WORKER is surely an omen of hope to the English reading masses, and with the truth and sharp language with which The DAILY WORKER represents the American masses the fight of the progressive workers in these labor organizations will be aided tremendously.

We, the Needle Workers, particularly, greet the Daily Worker, for we well remember how very struggle that we have partaken in was the struggle of the Daily Worker, and the nearer our friends are to us the more courage is our fight for the preservation of our unions, ruled and controlled by the rank and file of the working class.

Let us all strive together to make the Daily Worker the paper of the masses. Success to the Daily Worker, for the success of the working masses. — JOSEPH BOUCHOWITZ, Manager Cloak Operators Union Local No. 2, I. L. G. W. U.

Coolidge Nominee Turned Down.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The nomination of Cyrus E. Woods of Pennsylvania, to be a member of the interstate commerce commission, was rejected by the senate by a vote of 49 to 38 today.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A senatorial investigating committee reported today against the Bruce bill for federal investigation of the disfranchisement of Negro voters in Southern states.

POWER IN CHINA

Ready to Land Troops in City of Shanghai

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 23. Admiral Clarence Williams, commander-in-chief of the American fleet in Asiatic waters, has been given the widest possible powers to act in protecting the interests of American immigration in China.

The powers conferred on Admiral Williams are similar to those granted General Latimer in Nicaragua. It should be kept in mind that Latimer landed Nicaragua and placed a puppet president in power in that country in the interest of Wall Street financiers.

Admiral Williams is empowered to carry out hostile demonstrations on Chinese soil without being obliged to appeal to Washington. Already the admiral has organized landing parties of sailors and marines, in readiness for the opportune moment. Thus the armed forces of American imperialism are bringing the blessings of American democracy to the people of China.

Ready To Shell Shanghai

It is reported that the imperialist warships are ready to rain shells on the city of Shanghai but hesitate lest they kill their own nationals. This also indicates that the Cantonese army is on the verge of capturing Shanghai.

The State Department announced that Admiral Williams was authorized to act in concert with Great Britain in hostilities against China.

Admiral Williams has directed a concentration of warcraft at Hankow, which is about 600 miles up the Yangtze river from Shanghai.

Cantonese Sweep Forward

The victorious Cantonese army is sweeping down the Yangtze valley and carrying everything before it. This army is headed for Shanghai.

While the revolutionary armies are waging a bitter fight against the imperialists all are agreed that victory is almost certain to rest with the Cantonese.

This is said to be particularly noticeable in Shanghai, where even those held by troops hostile to the Cantonese, the masses and even the soldiers show signs of smouldering resentment against the imperialists.

Officials expect the Americans and the British imperialists to make their last stand here. The British have a large force on the way.

The United States has ships under sealed orders rushing from the Philippines, one a transport with marines aboard.

FIND SUBSTITUTE FOR INSULIN

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Discovery of a new drug which will act as a substitute for or auxiliary to insulin was announced here today. The preparation is the work of three German researchers, Drs. Frank, Nothmann and Wagner, in the laboratory of Prof. Neuwahl, of Breslau.

The secret of insulin has not been discovered. Its drawback is the fact that it must be given daily and can only be administered by injection under the skin. The new drug can be taken through the mouth and is absorbed by the digestive tract. It is not necessary to administer it every day as its effects are slower than insulin.

UNITED STATES MAY TREAT WITH THE CANTONESE

Minister M'Murray Favors Joint Action

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The movement to have the United States take independent action in dealing with China received added impetus today with the announcement by Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister, that full protection would be afforded nationals of governments which would take steps to negotiate new and more equitable treaties.

In this connection, Chen's denunciation of England as "the mother of imperialism in China" was considered particularly significant by officials here.

Secretary of state Kellogg has been delaying his promised "restatement" of the American policy because of the desire of the American minister at Peking, John Van A. MacMurray, to have the United States act in unison with the other powers.

It is now believed certain, however, that the government will override the wishes of MacMurray by issuing a memorandum within a few days setting forth the conditions under which it will agree to a considera-tion of a new treaty.

There is no opposition on the part of the state department to replace MacMurray at this time, though a step may come if the government decides upon independent action. Reports that the department is quietly planning to send a substitute to Peking have been frequently denied.

Admiral Williams has already been empowered to take whatever action he believes necessary for the protection of American interests. He has not, however, the state department asserts, been authorized to take part in any joint movement with the troops or naval forces of other powers for the suppression of anti-imperialist outbreaks.

KUOMINTANG SENDS DELEGATES TO BRUSSELS CONFERENCE ON WORLD IMPERIALISM; FIVE GO FROM U. S.

Kuomintang Sends Delegates Too

The Kuomintang party of America will be represented at the world congress against imperialism that meets in Brussels on Feb. 10. This is the word received by the all-American anti-Imperialist League. United States section, with headquarters here. A representative of the league discussed before the Los Angeles convention of the Kuomintang and urged them to send a delegate. The vote of the convention was overwhelmingly in favor of being represented.

Five Others From U. S.

Representatives of five other organizations in the United States will present credentials when the world congress opens, coming from four distinct oppressed minority groups in that country. The delegates from Junta Pro-Santo Domingo and the Comite Liberista Mexicano will speak for Central Americans in the United States. Negro will be heard in the persons of delegates from the national association for the advancement of colored people and the American negro labor congress. The delegates from the Sun Yat Sen society, in addition to the Koo Nimtung, will represent Chinese in America, and the Hindustan Gadar party will send a representative of the Hindu minority in the United States. The American Civil Liberties union will also be represented.

Many Latin-Americans

The unity of interest between the oppressed minorities in the United States and the people of the Latin-American countries, who live constantly in the menacing shadow of American imperialism, is demonstrated by the variety and number of delegations being sent from these Central American republics. Five Latin-American countries have already announced their participation in the congress, Mexico sending the largest number of delegates. Cuba, Porto Rico, Venezuela, and Peru are the others. The Mexican delegation speaks with a real mass voice. A half-million peasants will send their representative through the National Peasants' league. Students and Intellectual elements will speak through the Mexican Students' Federation and the Accion Ibero-Americana. The Mexican section of the all-America anti-Imperialist league will have its delegate there.

Cuba to Protest "Protection"

Cuba will protest against United States "protection" of its interests through representatives from the Universedad Popular "Jose Ma" and the Cuban section of the all-America anti-Imperialist league. The latter organization will also send delegates from its sections in Venezuela, Peru, and Porto Rico. The national party of Porto Rico will be represented.

From day to day comes information of additional delegations. It is expected that every Latin-American country will be represented when the sessions begin.

Use Business Republic Failures in Argument

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—German Nationalists, under leadership of Count Westarp, are resuming propaganda for a revolt against the republic and for reestablishment of the German monarchy. The latest attack of the nationalists is inspired by their failure to muster enough strength in the reichstag to form a government cabinet.

Appeals to Workers.

The spectacle of a monarchist appealing to the workers to overthrow the present government and bring back the Hohenzollern regime was enacted in a meeting in the Prussian Diet hall when Westarp addressed the "association of German employes," an organization of white-collar clerks with nationalist tendencies.

Flays Dawes Plan.

Westarp pictured the great unemployment situation in Germany and flayed the Dawes plan. "Twenty-five thousand men and women have rushed to Berlin in the last few weeks hoping to find work," he said, "while there are 100,000 here jobless, living on scanty doles, with other thousands skirting starvation on alms."

Then Westarp waxed lyrical on the "freedom and liberty" that would come with the return of the monarchy to Germany. "Liberty will return to Germany only after it has freed itself of the government which does not correspond to its history and character and is retored to its tradition."

American Professors Request Coolidge to Arbitrate in Mexico

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. — One hundred professors of American colleges, all specializing in law, economics or political science, and teaching in thirty-five different colleges today requested President Coolidge to orbitrate the American government's dispute with Mexico.

"The question at issue," said their statement, "are appropriate for settlement by the judicial method. Protracted delay may be dangerous. The property questions which are at the base of the difference may become obscured; the issue may become one of national pride and sentiment; feelings may be aroused which will make impossible the judicial settlement now practicable."

The administrative committee of the federal council of churches issued a strong statement favoring arbitration.

Who Mangled Robe of Empire? Hu Did It. Once Laundryman

Mr. Hu, former New York laundryman, who is still remembered by many folks in the neighborhood of 125th St., and Sixth Ave., is today an important figure in the Canton government of China.

Learning English while in this country, he is now using his knowledge for the benefit of the Chinese masses. When the Soviet Ambassador was in Peking, he got in touch with him and later became a trusted worker in the fight for Chinese liberation.

Many other leading figures in the revolutionary government of China are likewise fighting for the cause of the formerly despised ranks of the proletariat.

Latimer Passes to West Coast of Nicaragua with Sacasa's Word to Diaz

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24, Admiral Latimer, entrusted with full powers by the U. S. government, is reported passing through the Panama Canal yesterday for Corinto to confer with Diaz, recognised by the state department as the president of Nicaragua.

Before leaving the east coast Latimer had a conversation with Dr. Jauan T. Sacasa, supported by the majority of Nicaraguans and recognized by Mexico and other states as president of Nicaragua.

State department officials do not comment on the situation, beyond stating that they hope Latimer will be able to effect a compromise.

Jails Breed Crime.

NEW YORK.—Ninety percent of the county jails in the United States make their inmates worse instead of better, Dr. Hastings H. Hart, consultant in delinquency of the Russell Sage Foundation, told the monthly meeting of the Monday Club in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Auditorium.

"We made a prison survey of various cities," Dr. Hart said. "Most of the prisons were unfit as places of detention for human beings."

CHARGES AGAINST B. S. A. U. LEFTS

Would Expel Opponents Of "Picking Com."

The right wing fight on progressive trade unionists is to be carried into the Bookbinders, Stonecutters and Accountants Union tonight when several members of the union are to appear before the grievance and trial committee to answer charges preferred by Emerich Stalaberger.

A letter sent to the members to be tried, states that the charges are: "That you are a Communist, and are either a member of the Trade Union Educational League or the Workers (Communist) Party, or both. That you are opposed to the policies and principles of the American Federation of Labor."

This letter was sent out indiscriminately, in many cases to members who have never been members of the Workers Party nor attended any meeting of the T. U. E. L. They are, however, members of the B. S. & A. U. who are opposed to sending a representative to the traitorous "Save the Trade Union Committee," and for this reason they are being tried.

Two weeks ago, at a meeting of the B. S. & A. U., president Leonard Fright presided sending a delegate to the conference of the "Save the Trade Union Committee," and the members present voted 48 to 2 against the resolution. After announcing wrathfully that he did not care what the majority voted, president Bright sent two "observers" to the conference in the name of the union and then he had the minutes of this meeting state that there was no vote taken on the matter.

At a regular meeting on January 17, a vote was taken as to whether the minutes should be "corrected" to indicate that the vote had been taken and had stood 48 to 25 on the question; in other words, last Monday's meeting was asked to vote on whether the truth should go into the records or not. All those who voted in favor of correcting the minutes and having the truth inserted are the ones now being brought up on charges. Their crime will be judged tonight at 3 West 16th Street by a committee of the union headed by Ernest Bohm, the secretary.

Higher Compensation Payments to Injured Workers Are Urged

BOSTON, Jan. 24. (FP.).—Higher weekly compensation payments are recommended by the special legislative commission on workmen's compensation, created by the last Massachusetts legislature to investigate the operation of the present law. Raising minimum and maximum payments from the present $7 and $16 to $9 and $19 is advised.

Total maximum payments should rise from the present $4,000 to $5,000, the commission urges. Two dollars a week should be allowed to dependent children, instead of to a maximum of five children only.

Putting occupational disease definitely into the compensable class is one of the most important recommendations.

Mellon Cuts Down Huge Liquor Fine on Brewer "Friend"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Rep. La Guardia of New York charged in a speech in the house that secretary of the treasury Mellon had approved a compromise of fines totalling $268,000 against the Howell & King brewery in Pennsylvania for $20,000

"Senator Joyce of the Howell & King brewery supported Mr. Mellon's candidature, and not until after the Pennsylvania primary was there any talk of settlement," asserted La Guardia.

SENATORS CLASH OVER FREE SEED FOR FARMERS

Bruce's Stand Against Agrarians Challenged

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24.—Senator Bruce (D) of Maryland, was dubbed "the senator from Pennsylvania" by Senator Norbeck (R) of South Dakota, during a sharp tilt over farm legislation in the senate today.

When Bruce objected to consideration of a bill to provide free seed for farmers in drought stricken areas, Norbeck shouted angrily: "Yes, if it's a farm bill the senator from Maryland is against it; if it is a railroad bill, he is for it. I wonder if the people of Maryland will stand for a third senator from Pennsylvania after the next election?"

Maryland has already been noted for its courteous gentlemen," interrupted Senator Stewart (R) of Iowa "but apparently she has fallen on evil ways."

Such vituperation does not deserve a reply," retorted Bruce.

Chicago Woodcarvers Denounce Coolidge's Imperialistic Policy

(By Worker Correspondent)

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—A resolution, emphatically protesting against the invasion of Nicaragua by the U. S. marines, against the threatening attitude of the state department towards Mexico, and against the sending of warships to China, was passed by the Chicago local of the International Woodcarvers Association, in its membership meeting Jan. 20. The secretary was instructed to wire the protest to Senator Borah.

At the same meeting steps were made to organize and eliminate scenes of the Furniture Manufacturers' Association, when the union found that its plans of action have been repeatedly revealed to the bosses by someone operating inside of the union.

The bosses' organization is out to crush this militant union, and one of its tactics is to discriminate against those who are supporting the progressive policy of the union, for better conditions, and more wages.

But the members are made to realize that if they show weakness this moment, it means loss of all the gains made through many hard struggles in the past.

The progressives in the union strive to lead the organization in a manner to defeat the onslaught of the bosses.

SHAW, PRAISING MUSSOLINI, PASSES FROM PINK SOCIALISTS TO FASCISTI

Bernard Shaw is now definitely in his dotage, in the opinion of his many former admirers here who have not made the "flop" with him from pink Socialism to the Black Shirts.

Shaw, in a signed statement to the London Daily News, praises Mussolini as a model of efficiency, serving the interests of the public, and contrasts him with the British oligarch. Just as able in the way of oppressing but more hypocritical, and without good points of the fascisti.

Shaw says in his letter:

"The clear self consciousness and unaffected self judgment of Signor Mussolini certainly makes an amusing contrast with the self delusion and mock modesty with which we lecture him for doing in Italy what we have never hesitated to do in England and Ireland on half the provocation he has had.

"One would think that our cabinets of oligarchs had never suspended the habeas corpus act, suppressed a newspaper or prosecuted a Corbett or Kirkwood.

"The British oligarch, it seems, can steal a horse while the Italian Dictator may not look over a hedge.

"Mussolini is not popular. Some demagogues are popular. The people are too much afraid of him. They think him indispensable, which must mean that they find him useful.

"But in the meantime let us remember, as we did not dare to call Signor Mussolini's bluff at Corfu and are clearly afraid of him, that we had better treat him with distinguished consideration as a matter of policy no less than of good manners. (Signed) G. B. S."

its readiness to negotiate separately with any powers for the settlement of treaty and other cognate questions on the basis of economic equality and mutual respect for each other's political and territorial sovereignty."

Rushing Armed Forces to China

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Great Britain is mobilizing every available soldier and every available battleship for war with China. From India, Malta, Gibraltar and from every other station in the empire ships are embarking soldiers and marines for the war against China.

Your correspondent learned today that several labor leaders including Philip Snowden, J. R. Clynes, Arthur Pugh, C. T. Cramp, Mr. Citrine, secretary of the Trade Union Congress, and Robert Williams, held a secret meeting in the home of Lord Wimborne, where the government was represented by Winston Churchill, the fascist chancellor of the exchequer, who is now in Italy conferring with Mussolini. About this time Mr. Citrine issued a statement denouncing Soviet Russia for carrying on anti-British propaganda." It is believed the Chinese situation was discussed at the conference.

Baldwin Consults MacDonald.

Later on Stanley Baldwin called in Ramsey MeDonald and Lloyd George for a discussion of the Chinese crisis.

The week-end orders for troop movements reveal that 13,000 troops were under orders to sail for China. One thousand British marines embarked at Portsmouth today. Motor, mounted, foot and military police units have been ordered to assemble near Aldershot to await embarkation orders.

The admiralty has commandered several lines. The war office announced today that as soon as transports could be gotten "ready several thousand more soldiers and marines would be sent to Shanghai. The latest liner to be requisitioned is the steamship Assaye.

Making the Masses Mad.

The tory press is whipping up the patriotism of the masses in stereotyped style. The left wing workers are holding protest mass meetings against the war on China. The right wingers as usual, the professed pacifists and foes of workers' "dictatorship" are offering no effective opposition to the government policy.

The tone of the government organs, the Times, the Daily and the Morning Post is decidedly hostile to Japan and expressive of a wistful hopefulness of United States aid against the Chinese.

Soviet Union Changes Tax Law to Suit New Increase of Income

MOSCOW.—(Tass.)—The Council of People's Commissaries of the Soviet Union has recently adopted a new income tax law. The returns from the income tax are increasing from year to year. In the federal budget of 1922-23 they amounted to 12,700,000 roubles, in 1923-24 to 64,200,000 roubles, in 1924-25 to 100,000,000 roubles, and 1925-26 to 150,000,000 roubles. According to the budget estimate for the fiscal year 1926-27, which began from October 1, 1926, the income tax returns are expected to reach 165,000,000 roubles in 1926-27.

The following groups are subject to taxation under the new income tax law: all persons gainfully occupied, all kinds of joint-stock and limited liability companies, as well as foreign companies which are permanently doing business on the territory of the Soviet Union.

These persons and enterprises will be subject to the income tax, if their income exceeds a certain minimum. The non-taxable minimum varies from 600 to 1,200 roubles, according to locality.

Taxpayers are divided into three groups: persons working for wages or salary; persons working for their own account, and persons not engaged in any gainful occupation. The rate of taxation varies according to group, the relative burden of taxation being expressed by the proportion of 1:3:4.

On an average the rates of the second group have been increased by 5 per cent, and those of the third group by 32 per cent.

MORE than one million votes were cast against the action of the General Council of the British Trades Union congress in calling off the General Strike. The vote was cast at a recent executive meeting of British trade unions. Two million delegate votes were cast in favor of the General Council's action. This is significant. It means that the majority of the British trade unionists are for a progressive policy. In view of the fact that most conventions are "framed" by those who control the machinery it is reasonable to believe that elected conference would repudiate the action of the General Council.

Eight-Day Bazaar to Help Passaic Strike

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 24.—Organized labor of this city, in response to the acute relief situation in Passaic, has decided to hold an eight-day bazaar for benefit of the Passaic strike.

Committees were elected by the Paterson Trades and Labor Council and by the Building Trades Council to work on the bazaar, which will be held at Carpenters' Hall, 56 Van Houten St., from February 19 to 26, inclusive.

William Johnson, president of the Passaic Trades and Labor Council and a member of the Paterson labor body, was elected chairman of the bazaar committee. The delegate from the full fashioned hosiery workers was elected secretary.

What the Communists Want in the Factories

By JACK STACHEL
(Org. Sec. Workers' Party, Dist. 2)

The Workers (Communist) Party, like every other Communist Party, has adopted the factory group as the basis of its organization. A factory group is the organization of all the Communists in a given factory into a unit or branch of the Workers (Communist) Party. These factory groups are also known as shop nuclei. In addition to organizing factory groups the party also has street nuclei (also known as international branches) in which are organized all members of the party who cannot be organized into factory groups, namely those working in small factories, housewives, professionals, etc.

The party is centering its attention at the present time to increasing its influence among the workers in the large factories and in the most important industries.

Into Basic Industry.

The aim of the party is to have the great bulk of its membership in the large factories in the basic industries. From this it would follow that while the party is organized on the basis of factory groups and street groups the dominant form of the party organization is the factory group.

The Workers (Communist) Party is a political party. Every other political party in this country including the socialist party is organized on the basis of the state, city, county, and assembly district. Why is it that the Communist party adopts a different form of organization? It is because the form of organization of every political party must be suited to the political objective of the party.

Territorial Form Not Ours.

If the party participates only in elections, then the form of organization based on the assembly district is suited for that purpose. The socialist party like the republican and democratic parties is merely an election machine. The socialist party is a reformist party and it believes that it carries through its program by electing its candidates to fill the positions in the present day capitalist state machinery.

The Workers (Communist) Party on the other hand while it participates in parliamentary election campaigns, does not stop there, but takes part in every struggle of the working masses.

The Workers (Communist) Party participates in the work in the unions, in all the workers' fraternal organizations, in all struggles against imperialism and capitalist militarism, in the struggles for the liberation of all oppressed races and nationalities, for the protection of the foreign born, for the relief of the unemployed, etc. In fact in all struggles of the masses the party is to be found on the scenes playing a leading role.

To Organize.

The objective of the Workers (Communist) Party is to organize the American workers and other exploited sections of the population in a struggle against capitalism. In this struggle the workers play the dominant role. While the poor farmers must be won over as the allies of the revolution and many sections of petty tradesmen will support the revolution, the workers in the factories play the leading role in the struggle, and the workers in the large factories and basic industries must be won over by the Communist party before American capitalism can be overthrown.

"Every Factory Ours."

It is for this reason that the Workers (Communist) Party, true to its principles and aims, while it participates in all the workers' movements, centers its major energies in the factories. It was because the Russian Communists realized the slogan of Lenin, "Every factory must become our fortress" that the Bolsheviks were able to overthrow the Czaristic feudal-capitalistic government and organize the Soviet system, and build up socialism in Russia. The American Communists following the teachings of Lenin are out to realize this slogan in the United States.

COMMUNIST ACTIVITY IN THE FACTORIES

"Wherever there are Communists in a factory they organize a factory group. If there are not enough to form a Communist factory group then one or more in the factory carries on Communist work there.

The Communists are realists and the work carried on in each factory is suited to the conditions of the factory. For example when a shop is unorganized the Communists have as their main task the organization of the workers into the union.

Start Unions.

Where the union exists in the industry the Communists try to get contact with other workers in other shops and form a nucleus of militant fit to the American Federation of Labor. When a factory consists of union men, but the employer has not yet recognized the union, the Communists mobilize the workers to fight for recognition of their union. When a shop is organized the Communists are always on the job seeing that the agreement is strictly union shop, that all rules and regulations of the union are lived up to. Also as to the methods of work—it varies according to the conditions.

In those factories where the Communists would be fired if it became known that they are Communists, they work secretly. That is they make it known to the workers that there exists a factory group through the publication of the factory bulletins, leaflets, workers' correspondence in The DAILY WORKER, etc., but the members of the factory group are known only to the closest sympathizers.

Always For Workers.

In the factories the Communists always fight for the interests of the workers. They educate the workers and mobilize them to struggle for better wages, better conditions, shorter hours, etc. They utilize every evil from which the workers suffer to point out to them the necessity for organization as a protection against all these evils such as bad foremen, poor ventilation, fines, factory spies, etc. At the same time the Communists utilize the every day shop issues to raise the political level of the workers by connecting up the occurrences and admonitions in the factory with the broader political life of the city, state and nation.

Distribute The Worker.

The Communists in the factories distribute and sell The DAILY WORKER, try to get subscriptions to The DAILY WORKER, and also get as many of the workers as they can to become worker correspondents for The DAILY WORKER.

JOIN THE WORKERS COMMUNIST PARTY

In the past year the Workers (Communist) Party has been active in many important struggles that have won for it great influence among the unorganized as well as the organized workers. The Workers Communist Party has great tasks ahead of it. At present the immediate tasks before the party are to strengthen the organization of the unorganized, to fight against the labor bureaucrats' scheme of converting the existing unions into semi-company unions by increasing the militancy of the masses (in the unions and to stimulate the formation of a labor party. The above tasks are of immediate necessity to the American workers.

Win Confidence.

There are thousands of workers who have fought side by side with the Communists in the past year who have learned to place their confidence in the Workers Communist Party, who follow the party in all its struggles, help it in every way possible, attend its meetings, but who have not yet joined the Workers (Communist) Party. The Workers (Communist) Party calls upon you in the name of Lenin, to join its ranks, become a real fighter for the principles of Leninism.

You have received an envelope with a card to write your name and address for which we will consider as an application to the Communist Party. If you are not yet ready to join make a cross in the box on the card and we will place you on the mailing list for literature meetings, etc.

If you are reading this after the meeting look in your pockets and find the envelope with the enclosed card. Decide to become a real fighter for the principles of Lenin by becoming a member of the Workers Party. Mail the envelope now to 1113 West Washington St., Chicago, or if in New York, to 108 E. 14 St.

Angora, Minn., Raises Its Quota for Daily Worker.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—The small Workers Party nucleus in Angora, Minnesota, consisting of ten members, have raised their $50 quota in the Keep The DAILY WORKER Drive. This is an accomplishment worthy of emulation by larger units with more resources at their command. Angora is small, poor farming community, in an outlying region of the district, where little money is realised by the farmers throughout the year. This group of determined comrades worked resolutely in spite of these hardships, until they had achieved their purpose, because they were convinced of the necessity for keeping The DAILY WORKER for further service in the class struggle.

Lectures by Bedacht.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 24.—"The recent discussion in the Russian Communist Party," a subject in which there is common amount of interest has been evinced by Communists and sympathizers will be fully explained by Max Bedacht, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party at the next Sunday lecture of the Chicago Workers' School.

The school conducts educational lectures on subjects relating to the Communist movement and the working-class struggle generally every Sunday night at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves. C. E. Ruthenberg has just completed a course of three lectures on the history of the Communist movement in this country.

Farm, Cotton Lobbyists Boost McNary-Haugen Bill Before Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Farm and cotton representatives are urging passage of the McNary-Haugen Bill, the "farm relief measure," before the senate agricultural committee.

Sam H. Thompson, president of the American farm bureau federation and P. W. Kilgore of Raleigh, N. C., chairman of the board of trustees of the American cotton growers' exchange, endorsed the measure because "it offers the best solution to the surplus problem."

West Virginia's Right Thumb Drops on the Anti-Evolution Disease

CHARLESTON, W. VA., Jan. 24.—West Virginia will have none of Tennessee's anti-evolution laws, at least not before the next session of the legislature two years hence, it became apparent today.

The house of delegates squelched the attempt of Delegate Street, of Barbour county, to have enacted measures similar to those around which the famous Scopes anti-evolution trial centered, defeating it by an overwhelming vote.

CAPITALIST PRESS BEST KNOWN BY OWN EMPLOYES

(By a Capitalist Newspaper Reporter)

Liberal metropolitan newspapermen should hail the arrival here of The DAILY WORKER, for one never formerly suppressed by the capitalist press because it conflicted with its "policies," will find its way into print.

Even in this advanced age of journalism, when newspapers loudly proclaim their "independence," the New York dailies are published, edited and written in most cases by men and women too prejudiced to accurately mirror the day's events.

I join in welcoming The DAILY WORKER because it will provide me, and all other conscientious newspapermen who still hold a regard for the truth despite the contrary teachings of the school of experience, with a medium for expression—while policy is humanitarian, not commercial.

SAILOR FROM RED CRUISER "CHERVONA UKRAINE" TELLS STUDENTS OF LIFE

Dear Comrades. We are sending you this letter from Kharkov, the capital of the Ukraine, U. S. S. R.

Our enclosed is attached to the Kharkov Educational Institute which has over two thousand students. There is also a Workers' Faculty in this Institute, where young workers and peasants are sent for preparation to the Universities. Almost all the students previously worked in enterprises, in agriculture or in the social-political field. The proletarian students are provided with living quarters and an allowance. All the students conduct some kind of work, in enterprises, among the military elements and in the villages. Our Young Communist Organization has the patronage over the Red Fleet, and the Kharkov organization, as a whole, has patronage over the cruiser "Chervona Ukraine".

Life of Soviet Sailors

Meetings take place once a week; questions from current political and economic life are discussed and information reports are made. Recently at one such meeting, a sailor from the cruiser "Chervona Ukraine" made a report. He spoke of the life of the sailors and on the journey to Constantinople and Naples; how the cruiser was met by the Fascisti, about the sailors not being permitted to go ashore.

Besides the Leninist Young Communist Organization, there is also in the Institute a Party organization, a trade union organization of Educational Workers and a voluntary society of "MOPR" ICWPA, "AVIAKHIM" and others. There is in the Institute a club and a reading room. The study period in the Institute lasts 4 years, in the Workers' Faculty—3 years.

For the present we shall conclude. On receipt of a reply from you we shall be glad, in our future correspondence, to describe more fully our everyday work. Let us know, comrades, about your life, where are you working, wat are the conditions of work and also about your social-political activities.

Please accept our heartiest greetings,

With Communist greetings,

Signed: Migalo Danilchenko.

Our address: Ukraine, Kharkov, Institute Narodnogo Obrazovania, Komsomolskaya Yacheika, Komsomoltsam: Danilchenko, Migalo.

FARM MACHINE YOUTH IN KHARKOV, SOVIET UNION, LIVE REAL LIFE

U. S. S. R. Kharkov
Factory "Hammer and Sickle".

Dear Comrades: In assigning the patronage work in the CC of the LYCL of the Ukraine, the Factory Organization was chosen to be in charge of the work of keeping uninterrupted contact with you.

Our factory produces agricultural machinery and implements. Altogether there are about 3,500 young workers between the ages of 16 and 23 years. We have a school for factory apprenticeship where 350 pupils are being taught.

The youth take an active part in trade union work. The average wage of the young workers (including the apprentices) is from 70 to 75 roubles a month. There are many women employed in the enterprise who likewise take an active part in the trade union and social work.

The collective of the Lenine Young Communist League is in existence since 1918 and at the present it has 697 members, out of which 47 are girls. The Collective is divided into 8 shop-nuclei. Recently a school for political education was opened in the factory which is being attended regularly by Young Communist Leaguers. The object of this school is to raise the political level of the LYC Leagueers. The school is attended not only by members of the LYCL, but also by other young workers. Recently we celebrated the Ninth Anniversary of the October Revolution. This proletarian holiday was spent in a very pleasant and lively manner. On the eve of the holiday there were festive meetings, theatrical performances, radio-concerts and cinema shows. On the morning of the 7th of November the workers began to assemble for the demonstration, then they marched in good order to the building of the AUCEC where speeches were made. The proletariat is building its industry for already nine years without the aid of the bourgeoisie, under the leadership of its Communist Party. Tremendous work has been accomplished along the lines of constructing Peoples economy, and also improving the social conditions of the workers and peasants. On the occasion of the celebration of the October Revolution there was issued by the cultural commission of the factory committee a printed newspaper "Molotilka". Hitherto our factory issued a wall newspaper "Molot" (Hammer) in typewritten form.

Dear Comrades, let us know how you are organizing your forces for the struggle against capital, how you are working, write to us about your life and what interests you most.

In our next letter we shall write you more and will try to acquaint you with our questions appertaining to our life and work.

Awaiting your early reply, we remain

With Comradely greetings,

Collective of the LYCLSU.

Our address: Ukrainia USSR, Kharkov, Korsikovskaya Ulitra No. 15 Collective LYCLSU Shefskaya Kommissia.

Nationalist Religion Has Relics, Says Hayes

Characterizing nationalism as a "religion with a special brand of worship," Prof. Carlton J. Hayes of Columbia university declared that "the fruits of the religion of nationalism are ignorance, intolerance and docility of the masses." He was speaking before the committee on militarism in education, which is studying the spread of compulsory military training in American colleges.

Hayes poked fun at patriotic "cults" who pay religious homage to the flag, national anthem and other nationalistic symbols. "The religion of nationalism," he said, "has its own shrines, images, icons and relics. Take the Liberty bell, for instance, with a crack in its side. Why, when it was taken across the country by railroads, groups of old ladies flocked to the trucks to interrupt its progress. They kissed it; yes, kissed the brass side of this relic."

Fight Herrin Mine Case.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 24.—Attorneys for the Southern Illinois Coal Company filed a petition with the supreme court for a review of the verdict of the Cook County court affirming the award made by the Illinois Industrial Commission as an aftermath to the Herrin mine shooting of 1922.

The review is asked in the case of an award of $17 weekly for 250 weeks to Eleanor Shoemaker, executrix of the estate of John E. Shoemaker, an engineer in the company's mine, the scene of the battle and near where the foray occurred, ending in the surrender of the mine guards.

The court was told that a like petition will be presented in the case of C. Kline McDowell, mine superintendent, also killed during the fight.

CHICAGO STRIKE ENDS WITH OPEN SHOP STILL IN

Workers Lose Demands But "See the Light"

By HOWARD HARLAN
(Worker Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—After valiantly fighting for the past nine months, to uphold the principle of the open shop, the carpenters of San Francisco were forced to succumb to the inevitable, and go back to work on conditions that were practically dictated by the Industrial Association.

Conferences Fail.

After a number of round table conferences were held between the contending factions during the past few weeks, at which fruitless discussion ended in suspending negotiations for the time being, economic pressure was brought to bear, and a hurried up half-hour meeting resulted in the strike being "called off." At this conference representatives of the unions, the builders, the international unions, and the Industrial Association were present. No discussion was permitted on the chief bone of contention—the open shop. Both sides had to concede the promise that the so-called American Plan must prevail for the present.

From the builders' side, optimistic statements emanate anent "industrial harmony," "return to normalcy," and "an era of greater prosperity," etc. They are naturally jubilant over the outcome and declare that mutual satisfaction for all parties concerned has been achieved.

From the carpenters' standpoint, there is no ground for exultation. The result has been the direct opposite of what they fought for since the beginning of the strike. They now go back to work on similar conditions to those they denounced nine months ago. So far as determination and solidarity is concerned they did well. A real fight was waged from beginning to end and no doubt the compaign has resulted in many of the men becoming acquainted with a social situation they understood but dimly before.

Leaders Rapped.

On every hand one hears expressions of disapproval concerning the ending of the strike on terms that palpably favor the contractors. They accuse their leaders of being too tame and conciliatory in their demands. This is a healthy condition. it opens the way for left wing propaganda that will serve to awaken the men to a realization of their functions and power. So the strike has not been entirely lost.

Private Owners Get U. S. Vessels Cheap

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. — One hundred and one ships were sold by the Emergency Fleet corporation of the U. S. government during 1926 for a total of $14,736,924, according to the report of the shipping board. In the sale there were ninety-two cargo ships, five passenger cargo vessels, and five drydocks.

The sales were made in accordance with the policy of transferring the government-owned ships to private companies. The sale price is only a fraction of what the ships cost the government.

[illegible] IN THE [illegible] THE CHICAGO [illegible]

BY A MACHINIST (C. 43)

[illegible]

The Anderson-Johnston Fight.

THE district election presented [illegible] that in the main, the [illegible] Union Forces in the District and bore up the same side of the fence the previous year, backing Anderson in his fight to oust "C. A. O. BUD" Johnston from the Presidency of the International.

THE left wing had its own candidate during the nomination period, but these failed to get either first or second place, thus failing to appear on the election ballot. The left wing had an elaborate program dealing with amalgamation, development of shop committees, restoration of district autonomy, organize the unorganized, independent working class political action, against racial discrimination, against worker-employer cooperation as the Baltimore and Ohio Plan, for biennial conventions, and against expulsions. The left wing was unalterably opposed to Johnston; it sought to enlist Anderson and his followers for the left wing program. Anderson came out for amalgamation and declared against Johnston's expulsion policy. Several other members of the Anderson slate endorsed some demands of the left wing. The left wing therefore endorsed Anderson.

THE history of that fight, of Johnston's steal of the election, of his expulsion of Anderson, of Johnston's subsequent withdrawal from the presidency, and the acceptance of Wharton as the new president by both sides had to concede the promise that the so-called American Plan must prevail for the present.

The Anderson Forces in the Chicago District.

AND what of Chicago? Fry and Ullman led the fight for the Anderson forces, seeing a method of getting full control of the district, and using the elections for that purpose. They united with the left wing, accepting the support of the left wing, including the Communists. But the fight of the left wing had one fatal defect. It did not establish regular meetings of the rank and file of followers of the left wing together with those of Fry and Ullman. This would have made a solid bloc of the membership, around certain issues. But this was not done. Fry and Ullman were thus allowed to make use of the left wing for their own purposes, of intrenching themselves in power, without being compelled to come out for progressive measures. The left wing made no organized gain for the development of a progressive bloc. It was unable to make the "election alliance" a permanent bloc.

An Ideological Struggle.

WITH this defect in mind, the progressive forces drew up a program for the district, which called for 1.) a militant organization campaign throughout the metal trades, with particular attention to the specialist. 2.) a struggle to increase wages and to get better shop conditions, and especially position to the B. & O. Plan. 3.) a fight against injunctions. 4.) absolute freedom of expression. 5.) bringing closer together the wages of specialists and machinists, and 6.) separation of the union from the bosses parties and for support to the movement for a labor party. Candidates were selected who agreed with that program.

The Anderson Forces in the Struggle.

It must be remembered that the progressive forces entered the fight with the membership very opposed to the backward politics of the reactionary machine. And so the reactionaries made the central issue of the election the charge that "the Communists were out to capture and destroy the union", and in support of this, "half-witted Fry". Daily, a business agent, found that the Communists had already made a start in this direction by appropriating the name of the district of the I. A. of M. He had looked up the phone book and had seen that the Workers (Communist) Party was calling itself District 8 (the same number as the Machinists Chicago district organization). Crime of crimes! What if the Chicago District of the Workers Party had been called District 8 for the last 5 years? How could Daly know a thing like that?

Fry Forced Out in the Open.

CHARLES FRY, business agent of the Local Lodge 126, has had the District Council in his pocket for the last year. He planned the administration slate: candidates being known as "Charles Fry's men." He intended to stay behind the scenes and manage the campaign. But when Wm. Waterworth, progressive candidate for district president, earned the nomination from 337 and 390, the first two lodges to nominate, Fry came out of his den, and announced himself as a candidate for that office, when he knew that under the union rules, he was not eligible for the office. Fry openly bellowed that he went into the race to keep the "Communists from destroying the organization." Old timers like John Reed, Secretary of the District Council, were called dupes of the Communists, because they supported a program for the betterment of the union. The entire progressive slate was smeared with red by Fry and Ullman.

Reactionaries Fear Publicity.

To keep the progressives from effectively reaching the workers, printed election material was prohibited. For the progressives to have printed election leaflets would have rendered them liable to whatever charges the Council was primed to inflict. Fry also introduced in the district council a resolution calling upon "the group around the Daily Worker" to cease and desist from any active in the election fight, to suspend their activities within 30 days. If the local lodges did not take the necessary action (possible expulsion), the district council would. And to cap it all, Fry announced in his speech: "If you can't handle them, my local 126 boys will take care of them". A threat of gangsterism.

It was in such an atmosphere of threatened violence and official persecution that the progressives carried on their campaign for office on the basis of a program. Most of the progressive candidates were present at the nomination nights of the various lodges to present their views. And almost without exception, the progressives confined themselves to the issues before the union.

Company Union Helps The Speed-up System

By SIDNEY TEPPER
(Worker Correspondent.)

"Those who think they are working too hard, should report to my office personally, and I will take care of them."

So replied the chief of the Eastern Division of the Western Union Telegraph Co. to a protest against the speed-up system, made by a group of workers than their spokesman. The representative of the workers was a company union official, so he accepted the answer of the boss in good faith.

The workers, while being angry, could not go any further, as they know well that the fake company union will not fight for them in case they are in trouble. Having no real union to fight for them, they submitted to the nerve-wrecking speed-up system.

SCHOOL OPENED IN PASSAIC TO CONTINUE CLASS UNITED FRONT COMMITTEE STARTED

By VERA BUCH
(Secretary of Passaic Workers' School)

PASSAIC, N. J. Jan. 24.—The workers of Passaic and vicinity celebrated the opening of the Workers' School, J. O. Bentall, old friend of the textile strikers, gave a talk on "The Meaning of Workers' education." He showed how a union man or woman cannot do his work of building up the union unless education, the "boom-fixer of the mind," trains him to a real understanding of labor problems.

A year ago, an English class was started in Passaic by the United Front Committee, in connection with its efforts to organize the textile workers. Only a few lessons were held, when strike broke out. The great volcano of pent-up rebellion exploded. Ordinary life was thrown into the air.

Period of Settlement Over.

Now the great year of struggle is passing. During the present Period, the period of settlement, the workers feel themselves once more approaching a settled way of living. They are able to take stock of themselves, of the strike, and of the time ahead. They become conscious of their needs.

The opening of the Workers' School demonstrates that the workers have broken forever with the past of exploitation and dumb suffering. They have become conscious of the class struggle. They know that the period ahead of them is one of slow and patient struggle to build up a strong union. It is a period during which the workers will forge weapons for the struggles to come. In order to do this, they must understand the struggle and prepare themselves by study.

English Classes.

The Workers' School offers first of all classes in English. Never before has there been such a gridden desire among the foreign born workers to learn English. Also, there is a class in Fundamentals of the Class Struggle. Other classes will be added, and the Workers' School in Passaic will grow as the school in New York has grown, to fill every need of the workers.

An open forum will be held every second Sunday night, where the best speakers will lecture and the workers may discuss from the floor.

GET MOONEY'S ANOTHER STAY OF EXECUTION

Prosecution Would Kill Him to Stop Testimony

BOSTON, Jan. 24. (FP)—Celestino Madeiros, star witness for Sacco and Vanzetti, gets a stay of execution till April 27 to permit his testimony to be taken at the April sessions of the Massachusetts supreme court when the new trial appeals for the two radicals will be heard.

Execution of Madeiros, convicted in another murder case, was originally set for early last summer. He has been respited three times as a Sacco-Vanzetti witness.

From Sacco and Vanzetti

Sacco and Vanzetti, in a warm message from their prison cells, thank the friends who have been writing them letters of encouragement and support.

"We wish to tell those who spoke that we understand the whole value of your words," says the message, "and we appreciate your gifts, moral and material, beyond expression.

"We are convinced that our words be murderers are determined to burn us within this year, 1927, and that it is most probable that they will succeed. And our hearts' wish is that the new year may give us liberty or death—but meanwhile we are ready to bear our cross to the last."

Western Union Forcing Workers to Join Fake Union for Wage Raise

(By a Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The vice-president of the Western Union Telegraph Co. has notified all plant superintendents not to grant any wage increases to their workers unless they agreed to the company union.

This ruling was made in order to tie all workers of the company to the company union. The company wants the employers' association to function to prevent the workers from organizing a real union.

Another Method.

On another occasion the president of the company told the representatives of the company union that he would take no appeals from workers unless they have been taken up first by the association (company union).

The company claims it does not force anybody to belong to the company union, but the officials say: "If you want to have your case heard, you must belong to the association."

CARLSTROM SAYS HE'S STILL LOYAL TO FRANK SMITH

Small Is Silent With Troubles of His Own

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 24.—After his office had issued a statement to the press that he had still "implicit confidence in the probity of the senate to sit in judgment on its own members," Attorney-General Carlstrom of Illinois early arrived in Washington, reported from there as having denied that he deserted the cause of the banned senator-delegate, Frank L. Smith.

Chicago papers quote Carlstrom as saying, "I am now contending and shall earnestly and vigorously continue to contend for the right of the state to have Col. Smith seated in the United States Senate."

Governor Troubled.

In the meantime, Governor Small, who has appointed the slush fund candidate to fill the place of the deceased Senator McKinley, is maintaining a discreet silence. He has troubles of his own. He is worried about impeachment proceedings that threaten him in the state legislature for failing to account for $2,000,000 while he was state treasurer.

There is some talk of the governor recreating and appointing Fred Lundin, a former Thompson republican side-kick who has been lately running his own political show. A Chicago newspaper has unearthed what it claims is a deal between Small and the legislature to keep the Small impeachment charges off the floor. Small on his part is to do favors for Lundin on the state controlled Chicago park boards, a rich source of loot.

Fresaul Small.

Present gossip about Lundin going to Washington in McKinley's shoes would indicate that he is pressing the governor for more concessions to stop the impeachment.

Carlstrom is a Frank L. Smith man and this accounts for his being in Washington putting up a fight for the Colonel's seat. The statement from his office is unexplicable in view of this.

Carlstrom, as attorney-general, is the gentleman who prosecuted and convicted Gov. Small for his $2,000,000 defalcation. Naturally, the relations between the two are strained. The appointment of Lundin, or for that matter anyone else besides Smith, would be like exploding dynamite in Springfield. But the governor is desperate, considering that he has been convicted of a crime.

Corrupt Politics.

This is but a small side-light on the very complicated and more corrupt web of bought-and-sold politics that operates in this state. Not the least personage in the mussie is Samuel L. Insull, traction magnate, who bought the Colonel's seat in Washington for him.

The first course will include men's garment cutting and designing, pattern making and grading; alteration on block patterns, men's tailoring.

Classes meet Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, from 7 to 9 o'clock, at 128 West 31st Street.

Average Worker Laid Day of 1926, Total Is Raised to 14 in U. S.

Instead of diminishing the total of "goblins" in 1926, the number was raised to 14 on the final day of the year, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People states.

A wood chopper named "George Buddington was the final victim of the year. He contracted to work for a white woman at a certain sum. When she offered him less on completion of the job, he protested. The colored worker was accused of "insulting" the white woman in the argument and accordingly was lynched by a white mob at Waldo, Fla.

NEW YORK JAILS "CRIME SCHOOLS" SAY COMMISSION

Prison Overcrowding Makes Inmates Worse

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 24.—New York City's prisons are branded as "schools for crime" in the annual report of the state prison commission, made by John S. Kennedy, president. Kennedy attacks the prisons for insanitation and for the system of grouping together indiscriminately convicted persons of all types.

Institutions are Disgrace

"The penal institutions of New York City are a disgrace to the city," says the report. "Men and boys, first-offenders and recidivists, mentally normal and feeble-minded, sane and insane, enebriates, pilferers, thieves, bandits, yeggs, drug addicts, thugs, moral degenerates, sex perverts are dumped together into insanitary cells and dormitories, doubled up in cells, jailed with the hopeful, two-thirds without any employment, no educational facilities—simply time servers until they go out, many worse than when they come in.

"If there are any places that can merit the designation of school for crime and vice it is the penitentiary and allied institutions on the island. Kennedy blames the churches and parents for some of the conditions which make criminals of youths.

Textile Trade Editor Testifies His Paper Modulates the Truth

Truth for the trade and truth for the public are not stated the same way, according to the testimony on cross-examination of E. Howard Bennett, editor of a textile trade paper. Bennett had been recalled to the industrial survey commission by Labor's representative, Emanual Koveleski, when contradictions between the editor's previous testimony in the commission and writings in his paper had been discovered.

Bennett had blamed the closing of Massachusetts mills almost entirely on the 48-hour law in his earlier appearance. This time, with the aid of anti-labor members of the commission, Bennett hedged and said that the 48-hour law was the one condition which the mill men could not change to improve the situation. Mismanagement, over - production, southern competition, graft, old machinery, etc., were factors stressed by his publication as causes of the mills' decline more particularly than the shorter hour law.

PACKINGTOWN IN CHICAGO IS NOW BEING 'FORDIZED'

"Speed-up" Is Getting Under Workers' Skins

By THURBER LEWIS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 24.—Chicago's world famous Packingtown is being "Fordized" by the Big Four—Swift, Wilson, Cudahy, Armour. The rambling yards and packing houses of the South Side, where 60,000 men and women drive, slaughter and slice millions of cattle, hogs and sheep yearly is being turned into a "laboratory" for experts in speed-up and time-cutting.

The complete abandon with which these "Taylor men" are cutting wages and packing more work into fewer minutes to cut down over-head is getting under the skins of the packinghouse workers. There are still thousands of men in the yards who remember that the whole district was once organized 100%.

No Union Now.

Save the company union there isn't a shadow of an organization left. The men are at the entire mercy of the bosses. The bosses are driving them harder every week. The butchers, drovers and laborers are feeling the open sign of resentment according to workers on the killing floors.

As an example, there is the Omaha Packing Co., a Swift subsidiary employing eight hundred men. In the past seven days 200 of these have been let out. The same killing schedule is being maintained, however, and more are soon to be let go with cut reducing production.

4 Experts to 800 Workers.

In this little plant of 800 men and women (women, mostly Negroes, clean and pack cuts) four experts have been at work for several months. It is the same story that is being told in all big production units thruout the country—work sixty minutes of every hour. "Speed ex" given for back-breaking coordination and don' dare miss a stroke.

Loses Hand.

A Negro was working on a cut machine (a grappler for stripping guts out of the carcass). He was speeded up. His hand slipped. The flesh was torn off his entire hand leaving a white skeleton, bare and ghastly. A stockyards' worker who saw the tragedy told me of it. A Polish worker was sent on the machine ten minutes later. He told the foreman that he must be allowed to have at least five an hour considering the hazard. The foreman told him that plenty of men could be gotten for less. The Polish worker was discharged.

Such is the toll that "Fordization" takes in the stockyards.

Cheated of Pension.

One of the best hog cleavers and splitters in the Swift plant with 28 years of continuous service whose sure and steady hand has, of late years, become less trustworthy due to the ravages of rheumatism contracted from the wet and bloody floors, was due for his pension in two more years.

The new "system" came in. His splitting machine was speeded up to an inhuman rate. He couldn't keep up. He was discharged for the killing foreman at the suggestion of an expert. He loses his pension of some seventy a month.

Once Well Organized.

In the period from the close of the war until the winter of 1921-22, these things may not have happened. The butcher workmen were organized then. They were not docked an hour's pay for a minute's tardiness in those days. They were making a wage it was possible to live on. They had shop stewards to thresh out complaints with the foremen.

45,000 Struck.

On Dec. 5, 1921, in the dead of winter, 45,000 stockyards workers marched out on strike. It was during the open shop drive when the big employers decided to wipe out unionism in all large industry. They put up a brave fight but in the end they were beaten. Instead of the raise that they struck for, they got a vicious wage-cut and went back prostrate, the known leaders being blacklisted.

Since then, wages have gone further down, they are still being cut. The fake company union came in, numerous schemes were introduced. House organs were issued—and now the "system."

Low Wages.

The best hog-butchers in Swift's and Armour's, skilled workmen, can make no more than 62 and a half cents an hour. Most of them get 47. Laborers work for 42 and a half. The highest skilled men in the yards, the cattle-butchers, can make no more than 82 and a half. They get overtime. But it doesn't begin until after 48 hours. The bosses see that they don't work more than forty-five.

Another article will tell how the Packingtown speed-up, known to the bosses as the Bordeaux or B system, works.

Japan's Changed Policy in China

The DAILY WORKER recently published an editorial which called attention to the pronouncements of Foreign Minister Shidehara of Japan on the question of relations with the Soviet Union and China. The minister declared that Japan would not interfere in the domestic affairs of China and also expressed his government's appreciation of the friendly relations that existed between the Soviet Union and Japan.

Recent developments in China have not detracted from the significance of Shidehara's statement. Japan has refused point blank to accede to Great Britain's request for joint action against the Chinese revolutionary armies. It is reported that Japanese representatives are holding conferences with the Cantonese with a view to recognition.

A Moscow dispatch by Walter Duranty to The New York Times, states that a steady rapprochement between the Soviet Union and Japan has been noticeable in the past few months and that Japanese representatives are now in Moscow conducting a series of important economic negotiations with the Soviet government. Timber and fishing concessions are the main objects of this economic discussion.

It is now apparent that Japan has drawn the financial props from under the anti-Soviet militarist, Chang-Tso-Lin, whose comparative inaction in recent months was no fault of his. Japan, according to Duranty, considers Soviet friendship in Northern Manchuria and Siberia more valuable than Chang's.

Japan's decision to throw in her lot with the Soviet Union's policy of friendliness to China and the right of the Oriental peoples to determine their own destinies, to use the substance of a phrase that rolled pleasantly off many a tongue in the days of Woodrow Wilson, is due to stark necessity and not to a change of heart on the part of the Japanese imperialists. Ever since the Washington Arms Conference when England ditched the Anglo-Japanese alliance in return for concessions from the United States in the matter of naval supremacy, Japan felt her isolation keenly. Her present orientation towards the Soviet Union is impelled by the same consideration that drove Germany into signing the Rapallo treaty with Russia. Both are marriages of convenience. While the Soviet Union has observed her treaties with all powers scrupulously, it is idle to believe that a Workers and Peasants Government and an imperialist power can avoid diplomatic irritations since one power is committed to a policy of exploitation of the masses and the other, the Soviet power, is in existence to build a system of society where all exploitation will cease.

Regardless of the fact that an understanding between Russia and Japan is one between governments at pole ends socially, at the present time such an arrangement cannot fail to exert a decisive influence on the Chinese situation. It practically completes the front of the Oriental peoples against the western imperialists.

It is no accident that Admiral Clarence Williams of the United States Asiatic fleet has fifty-five warships at his command with full power to use them as he sees fit in the Chinese situation.

The presence of such a large flotilla in Oriental waters is at least as much of a threat against Japan as against China.

The Oracle Has Finally Spoken.

Ever since the most recent invasion of the rights of a Latin-American country by the United States government and the threat of war against Mexico by the president, we have patiently awaited an expression of opinion on the question from William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor. While radicals, liberals and even bourgeois congressmen and senators were leaping into print with criticisms of the government policy, there was not a peep out of Mr. Green.

Finally the oracle has spoken. Writing in the current issue of the American Federationist, Mr. Green, with all the unctuousness of a baptist deacon scratching the back of a generous supporter of his church, declares that: The American Federation of Labor has long advocated the reference of disputes arising between nations, which do not involve honor or sovereignty (emphasis ours—Ed.) to arbitral tribunals for settlement."

This could have been written by the most subservient capitalist flunkey in Wall Street. "Honor or sovereignty!" Did any nation, not governed by a set of lunatics, ever go to war for anything less altruistic? Of course Coolidge and Kellogg can easily convince Mr. Green that there is nothing to arbitrate between the United States and Mexico, that American prestige and American honor are at stake both in Mexico and Nicaragua.

That the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor (honorable exceptions will be gratefully recorded), is part and parcel of the ruling capitalist political machine is as clear as crystal.

While Green and his yellow "socialist" allies are busy waging war on the radicals in the trade unions, Wall Street and its government are waging war on the semi-subject and subject peoples of South America and the Orient.

COOLIDGE TO DECLARE CHINESE POLICY

5,000 CHEER IN CHICAGO LENIN DAY MEMORIAL

Working Class Sets Face Against Imperialism

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 25.—No less than 5,000 workers jammed the big Carmen's Auditorium on Sunday, Jan. 23 to pay tribute to the memory of Nicolai Lenin and declare their solidarity with the Latin American and Chinese victims of U. S. Imperialism.

"Today, millions of workers are demonstrating in this country, in China, in Latin America and throughout the world that the workingclass has set its face sternly against imperialism and will struggle for its extermination—this is the greatest tribute the workers of the world can pay to their great leader, Lenin, whose memory we, in common with other millions, are commemorating today," said Jay Lovestone, speaker of the day.

In opening the meeting, Chairman Arne Swabeck pointed to "the record of achievements that have been made in the fight against imperialism since the death of Lenin; the successful struggle of the Chinese nationalists; the nationalist rebellions in Egypt, Morocco, Korea and Java; the rallying of the people of Latin America: and even in the United States itself the militant workers have resisted the attacks of the imperialist minded labor officialdom."

Sam Darcy spoke for the Young Workers League stressing the importance of organizing the youth against imperialism and its logical result, war.

Stage "Strike".

"Strike," a mass recitation by Michael Gold introducing a drama [illegible] was then rendered. It was acted with distinction by fifty working-class participants, some of whom spoke their lines from the audience.

The novelty of the experiment, its dramatic power and its fitness for the occasion won the audience to unrestrained acclaim.

Resolution Popular.

A resolution against the invasion of Nicaragua and China by U. S. troops was passed with a unanimous "aye" that veritably shook the building. "Resolved that we thousands of workers who are today assembled in honor of the memory of Comrade Lenin, record that the workers and farmers of America have no interests in common with the imperialis: designs of Wall Street and the U. S.

POWERS DREAD AN ALLIANCE OF THE EASTERN PEOPLES

Report Japan Rejects Chang-Tso-Lin

BERLIN, Jan. 25.—Russia, Japan, China—close on to 600,000,000 people. Is that the great triple entente of the future that western imperialism notably American, finds itself confronted with?

That is the question about which there is much thought and concern in more than one European chancellory and a result of the daily developments in China, according to reports in diplomatic circles. Information reaching Berlin is to the effect that powerful forces in each of those countries are working towards that goal geographically and in interests which are quite logical and natural.

Dispatches to the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, semi-official organ of the German foreign office, emphasize the news from Moscow that Japan and Russia are coming daily closer together on a joint or cooperative policy in China.

British Prestige Shaken.

The paper says that recently on the occasion of the observance of the third anniversary of the death of Lenin, speeches made in Moscow stressed that British prestige in China is badly shaken and that Japan now realizes that opposition to Soviet Russia in China does not strengthen Japanese influence there.

The Soviet press emphasizes the importance of the speeches of Japanese Premier Wakatsuki and Foreign Minister Shidehara in parliament and deduce therefrom that Japan is disposed to discuss the China question with the Canton government and with Moscow.

Tokio Plans with Chang.

The official Soviet news agency is circulating a Tokio dispatch stating that the Japanese general staff has decided to give up working with Marshal Chang Tso Lin and draw nearer to the kuomingtang party. Soviet agents in the orient are alleged to have been instructed to stress the friendly relations between Russia and Japan.

A dispatch from Tokio to the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung states that the Japanese government has decided not to send any land military forces to China unless unforeseen events make it imperative.

A dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung declares that Japan rejected the British proposal for joint defensive measue at Srhanghai

COAL OPERATOR SENATORS SMASH WOODS CHANCES

Coolidge Suffers Worst Defeat So Far

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—President Coolidge is seeking a new appointee for the Interstate Commerce commission as a result of the senate's overwhelming rejection of Cyrus E. Woods of Pennsylvania, named by the President at the behest of Pennsylvania influences.

Although the president and Secretary of Commerce Hoover threw all their political resources into the fight, the senate refused to confirm Woods with as little compunction as though he were a village postmaster instead of a former ambassador to Spain and Japan. The vote of rejection was 49 to 20.

Hit Coolidge Hard.

The senate's action, to many political observers, definitely marked the extent of the split between the executive and the senate. Administration leaders admitted afterwards that no executive within memory had suffered so crushing a defeat.

Southern Coal Miners Win.

The vote incidentally served notice on the white house that no Pennsylvanian can serve on the interstate commerce commission for some time to come, unless the senate has an unexpected change of heart. It also gave notice that the present preferential freight rates on soft coal from the "open shop" mines of Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee are due to remain for an indefinite period.

The whole fight against Woods centered around those rates. To the states producing the coal and to the many other states consuming it, the appointment of Woods appeared to be a threat for the removal of the rates. This belief prevailed, first because Woods came from a hard-coal, nnionmine state like Pennsylvania, which protests that it is discriminated against by the rates, and second, because Senator Reed (R) of Pennsylvania, Woods' chief sponsor, once declared Pennsylvania "needed protection" on the commission.

Big Railroad Man.

The battle to defeat Woods was made easier, too, by the fact that he admitted owning a fortune in the stocks and bonds of five different railroads and a number of hard-coal companies. He also managed the recent primary campaign of Senator George Wharton Pepper (R) of Pennsylvania. These two issues threw the whole republican insurgent bloc against him.

Miners' Union Progressives Are Strong

Gunman Implicates Lewis In Murderous Assault

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 25.—Under the leadership of John Brophy, president of District No. 2 of the United Mine Workers of America and candidate for international president on the "Save The Union" ticket in the miners' union elections last month, the progressives entered the convention today in strength.

A bitter fight is momentarily expected over attempts of the credentials committee, part of the official machine, to keep out the left wing delegates and seat a large number of administration supporters who represent locals created on paper, over night, in order to maintain a majority for Lewis.

Hapgood Won't Quit.

Powers Hapgood, refusing to be intimidated by the attempt to kill him a couple of days ago, is actively assisting Brophy in rallying the large numbers of uninformed delegates who have come in without instructions from their unions. These delegates are the key to control of the convention.

In the past, the progressives, though courageous and sometimes numerically strong, were still a minority. The machine is always a minority, and represents principally payroll followers of Lewis.

Hitherto, in each concrete issue, as it arose on the floor of the convention, the machine, by its superior organization and planned intimidation of wavering delegates, carried its way.

This time, the progressives have a clear program of throwing out the reactionary officers, securing justice for expelled or disfranchised militant miners, labor party, preventing of wage cuts, and especially of organizing the unorganized. These are exactly the things which the Lewis administration, with its policy of conciliation with the employers, of yielding to all company pressure, cannot permit if it is to continue in power. There will be a bitter contest.

In the struggle beginning today,

REACTIONARIES JOIN FORCES AS MINERS CONVENE

Lewis and Fishwick Fear to Go It Alone

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 25.—The further amalgamation of the two strongest machines in the United Mine Workers of America was made evident shortly after the Thirtieth International Convention of the union went into session today, when International President Lewis appointed President Harry Fishwick of district 12 to be chairman of the scale committee.

Fishwick inherits the Frank Farrington machine in Illinois, and controls a district which includes something near a third of the membership of the entire union. Farrington, before he acknowledged himself last summer an employee of the Peabody Coal Co., used to fight Lewis when he felt secure, and ally himself with Lewis when either was menaced by progressive forces. Fishwick has never had the independence of action that Farrington boasted, because he had an election agreement with board

House Foreign Affairs Urges Government to Negotiate New Treaties

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Without a dissenting voice, the Senate this afternoon adopted the Robinson resolution urging that differences with Mexico be settled by arbitration.

The resolution also set out that American property rights in Mexico should be protected pending the final outcome of arbitration proceedings.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The American government is preparing to act independently of other powers in the present Chinese crisis, it was plainly indicated at the White House after today's cabinet meeting at which the situation was discussed.

President Coolidge does not consider there is any similarity between the American situation in China and that of the other foreign powers.

He pointed out to callers that the British and other foreign powers have extensive concessions in China, where the United States has none. Therefore, he does not believe the respective situations are analagous.

Simultaneously with the promulgation of this official viewpoint in the White House, the house foreign affairs committee voted this afternoon unanimously to report favorably the Porter resolution, calling upon President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg to pursue an independent course in China, and to negotiate treaties with China on a basis of equality.

PEKING ENVOY QUITS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—An important announcement of American policy in China is expected from the state department in a few days.

Whether it will embrace formal recognition of the Cantonese-Nationalist government, which has gained the upper hand in that country, remains to be seen.

This is suggested by some as the shadow recognition of the Cantonese government by the United States.

In any event, International news service learned today that Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese minister to the United States for many years, will close the legation here in a few days and retire.

To Maintain Legation.

It is believed here that the United States will continue to maintain its legation in Peking for the time being at least.

Sze is represented as having reached his decision to retire because of the loss of power and prestige of the Peking government by which he was originally sent here. Peking's control has been virtually wiped out in the last few months and now extends no further than to the borders of the federal province of Chih-li.

Sze conferred with Secretary of State Kellogg and Nelson T. Johnson, chief of far east affairs, yesterday for more than three hours, it became known today, and although the subject discussed was not made public it is reliably reported to have concerned Sze's plans for departure.

Tension Has Lessened.

Meanwhile indications have multiplied both here and in China that the tension in so far as Americans themselves are concerned has lessened. A well defined tendency has developed among the Cantonese leaders, who

SENATE DEBATES ARBITRATION OF MEXICAN CRISIS

Robinson Scores Favoritism in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Vigorous debate on the administration's Mexican policy broke out in the senate this afternoon, featured by demands from democratic and insurgent republican senators that the land law controversy be submitted to arbitration.

The debate hinged upon the Robinson resolution, which calls upon the president to arbitrate.

Claims Congress Has Rights.

No sooner was it called up than Senator Norris (R) of Nebraska, introduced an amendment setting forth that protection of Wall Street interests should not go to the extent of using the armed forces of the United States without the consent of congress.

Senator Lenroot (R) of Wisconsin, defended the interests of American oil interests in Mexico though he declared himself in favor of the resolution.

The protection of American property rights in foreign countries does not mean "projecting America into war," Senator Harrison (D) of Mississippi, told the senate in protesting against the administration's present foreign policy. He urged immediate arbitration of the Mexican dispute as a means of averting war.

Explains Silence of Democrats.

Harrison pointed out that the democrats had withheld criticism of the Coolidge foreign policy even while disapproving it. He said the democrats had not endorsed the "apparent favoritism" manifested by the state department in Nicaragua, the "creation of neutral zones there, the landing of marines or prompt recognition

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

WHEN reading the capitalist press for news of happenings in China and Mexico be careful to read between the lines. Capitalist papers are never trustworthy where labor or other victims of imperialism are concerned but in times of comparative peace, capitalist editors are allowed the privilege of getting an occasional thrill out of their work by printing the truth occasionally. But when a crisis has been reached as is now the case in Mexico and China, all the capitalist papers without hardly an exception begin to lie their worst and capitalist correspondents compete for the boss' favors by racking their brains for the most plausible falsehood.

THE propaganda mills in the Orient appear to be grinding out the kind of stuff that Great Britain wants to feed the public with. Still the machinery is not running smoothly yet. One New York newspaper had a front page story that Japan had agreed to co-operate with England against China. Another newspaper had a three line item buried away in an obscure corner of the paper to the effect that the Japanese government had officially declared that it turned down England's request for "co-operation." Unless one is in close touch with the international situation it is hard to pick the truth from the lies.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Ricciotti Garibaldi, who has been ordered deported by the French government, may enter the United States as a visitor, the state department announced today. Garibaldi had previously applied at the American consulate in Paris for a visa permitting him to come here.

The state department has no objection to him coming as a visitor, but he will not be permitted to take up permanent residence, unless he qualifies under the Immigration Quota law. There is no objection to Garibaldi because of his political views, it was added.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 25.—Major Thomas Lamphier and twelve of his first pursuit group pilots hopped off from Selfridge Field, Mt. This follows on the heels of another "good will" flight of military planes now making an entire circuit of Latin America.

UNITED MINE WORKERS CONVENTION MUST OUST LEWIS TO FIGHT BOSS

By JACK KENNEDY.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 25.—No convention in American labor history has ever faced such a serious combination of internal and external problems as the convention of the United Mine Workers which opened here this morning at Tomlinson hall.

Fighting for life to rescue itself from the grip of a reactionary crew of officials who have gutted the international union since the last convention in 1924, the delegates also confront problems in the coal indnstry itself which seem almost insoluble.

With the slate wiped clean of Emperor Lewis and his gang of plunderers, the convention would still be obliged to deal with America's most chaotic industry. Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, direct representative of the big commercial interests in the Coolidge cabinet, has de-

MEXICAN MASS MEETING SNORES U.S. IMPERIALISM

Yaquis Ready to Quit War on Government

MEXICO, Jan. 23.—Joseph Gotteres, speaking before a mass meeting of workers under the auspices of the Eighth Conference of Labor assured the United States government that nothing every present to invade Mexico and bring all Latin America under the heel of American imperialism.

Lashing opposing the march of American imperialism, Gotteres said that a Mexican labor would have the support of the workers throuot the world.

The uprisings which were featured with much prominence in the news from the United States are flickering out rapidly.

Blame U. S. Imperialism.

The sense of all the speeches at the labor meeting was, that "Mexico's present economic crisis and rebel disturbances are caused by American politicians with the object of extending their imperialism to all the weak peoples of America."

"Liberty, justice, democracy, which the American imperialists cackle about," the speaker declared, "are empty phrases to disguise their thirst for rapine and pillage."

The clergy and other factors that were acting as the tols of American imperialism in Mexico were denounced by the speakers.

Hold Peace Conference.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 23.—Rebellious Yaqui Indians today were holding a peace council of their own, considering possible terms of surrender to the federals, according to a message received by the war office here from Sonora.

The council is being held under the tribe's traditional rules requiring all the members of the tribe to speak through one spokesman. It may be three or four weeks before an agreement is reached by the council, it was said.

Latimer's Mission To Diaz.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 23.—Admiral Julian L. Latimer, commanding the Special Service Squadron in Central American waters is nearing Menoqua for a conference with the puppet president Diaz who was put in office by United States marines.

The overwhelming majority of the people are against him and in favor of his liberal opponent, President Sacasa. There is a tendency here to believe that the administration would like to locate some other puppet rather than Diaz who has been theroly discredited in the United States as well as in Nicaragua.

Dr. T. S. Vees, Washington representative of the Liberal Government of Nicaragua declared that president of Salvador sold 1,000 rifles and 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition to Diaz. It is believed here that the Salvador president was only a middle man between the United States Government and Diaz.

Urge Arbitration With Mexico.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 25.—Methodist ministers of Chicago adopted a resolution urging arbitration of the differences between the United States and Mexico and expressing hope that the dealings of the government with Nicaragua would be "free from every appearance of selfish interest."

WEST COAST LEWIS TO FIGHT BOSS SMITH, MELLON

shared such coal to be the owners functioning supply," he said.

Two Years Ago.

"Two years ago we were faced in these figures. The coal and industry can easily supply more than one of coal a year and with the same of coal and physical labor, can produce about a billion tons. But the country needs only a little over 500,000,000 tons a year, and that figure declines constantly due to the efficient consumption of coal and the higher use of water power and oil. Nevertheless more and more mines are opened, with over-production ever becoming a more serious problem.

Expansion Is Speeding

Expansion is proceeding most rapidly in West Virginia and adjacent Kentucky, and Virginia, where most of America's finest soft coal is produced. Lewis said his record has scuttled the union in West Virginia. Operators there have not only high grades, but low cost coal, with markets readily available at low freight rates in New England, New York, the Atlantic seaboard, the cities of the Great Lakes and on the Ohio River.

Use Starvation.

Competitive union-mined coal of Pennsylvania and Ohio is slowly being shut out of these markets, while the union miners are either driven out of the coal fields or starved out slowly by unemployment.

Soft coal production last year was 575,000,000 tons, or 50,000,000,000 over the mark for 1925. Of this excess production, 20,000,000 went to England above the normal foreign export, while 40,000,000 tons went into storage. Added to this storage figure as the carry-over from 1925 and the increase left by more efficient use of coal in locomotives, boilers and furnaces, so that on December 1 the total in storage was estimated at 60,000,000 tons.

Storing Ammunition.

This is far above the usual reserve. And why?

The expiration of the Jacksonville agreement on March 1 leaves the probability of a strike of union soft coal miners on April 1. The coal trade, therefore, has encouraged the accumulation of a huge surplus in an effort to break the strike. With West Virginia, Kentucky and half of Pennsylvania in non-union hands, the operators and industrialists hope to take care of all normal demands by the use of the surplus and heavy production in the non-union territory.

Treachery In Fight.

Thus the Miners' union must deal not only with the treachery of John Lewis, but with the critical results of his criminal policy in allowing the operators to take West Virginia, key to the national coal situation, away from the union.

Two startling examples of the coal production from a union to a non-union basis are given in two traffic reports.

Shipping Significant.

The Pennsylvania Railroad in 1920 ran largely through union coal territory. Then it carried 17 per cent of all the coal transported in this country. Now it carries but 7 per cent.

The Chesapeake & Ohio runs through the very heart of the non-union districts. In 1920 it carried 16 per cent of the nation's coal, or less than the Pennsy did. Last year it carried 27 per cent. All so-called southern roads which carried but 40 per cent of the country's coal in 1920, now transport 63 per cent. The southern territory includes West Virginia, Kentucky and states to the south.

The other example is Detroit. In 1919 the auto city drew two thirds of its coal from the southern field. Today it draws but one third. The rest is mined and shipped from the non-union fields of West Virginia, Kentucky and Virginia.

Operators Aggressive.

This entire problem is summed up in the statement by the Talbot Smokeless Coal Co., of Cincinnati, Jan. 15. Representing all unionized mines in western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, they declared in a flexible sliding scale arrangement to "meet competition with West Virginia." If the union scale is not cut 30 per cent or more below the Jacksonville scale of $7.50 a day, they will shut down their mines on April 1, they threaten.

A union under resolute pro-union leadership intent on organizing West Virginia, could easily choke this threat down the operators' throats.

Will Fight Hard.

Crippled as it is by the pro-operator "leadership" of President John L. Lewis, the United Mine Workers will fight on bravely. But the delegates realize the plight of the union, precipitated by the thoroughly rotten administration of Emperor Lewis. There will be, not one showdown, but a series of showdowns day after day on the convention floor which will leave Lewis exposed utterly to the contempt of his rank and file and the American labor movement as an agent of the non-union coal operators of West Virginia.

B. S. & O. Officials in Drive to Eliminate All Active Union Members

Ignoring the sentiment of the Bookkeepers, Stenographers' & Accountants' union, which expressed itself at the last meeting, as interested in the problem of organization confronting the office workers, the union officials are making their first disruptive efforts to eliminate all active members who disagree with their methods. This is being done by raising a charge of "Communism."

Several members took the floor at this meeting and stressed the need for intensive organization. They were attentively listened to by the general membership but when a motion was made for intensive organization. They were attentively listened to by the general membership but when a motion was made for intensive organization. # Coolidge Talks for "Dollar Diplomacy"

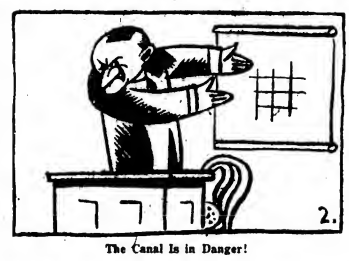
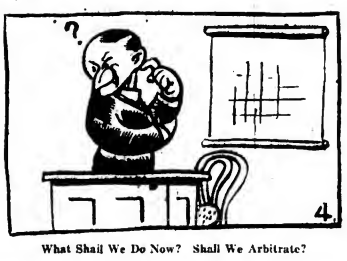
We Must Defend American Rights in Nicaragua.

My God! The Bolsheviks!



The Canal Is in Danger!



What Shall We Do Now? Shall We Arbitrate?

...S TREATMENT FOR MEXICO WAR

His Staff Is Ready; He Wants to Use It

By LAURENCE TODD
(By the Federated Press.)

Coolidge has forcibly asserted endorsement of his threatening attitude toward Mexico from a body of citizens. The board of officers of the National Patriotic Council, announced by Maj.-Gen. Amos Fries, chief of the chemical warfare service and head of the American Legion in the District of Columbia, has come to his support. It calls upon all patriots to refuse to "lend themselves to insidious pacifistic propaganda" by taking part in alleged voting contests conducted by newspapers or chains of newspapers. under such glaring captions as "Do you want war? Yes or No?"

This appeal by the Council's officers, who have frequently denounced the alleged bolshevistic influence of most of the liberal and working-class movements in the United States, refers to the straw vote taken by the Scripps-Howard chain of papers, which showed a ratio of 40 to 1 against war with Mexico on the basis of facts to date.

Explains Straw Ballots.

Gen. Fries and his fellow officers point out that "highly sensational editorial or news matter emphasizing the terrible consequences of war with Mexico or Nicaragua," generally is printed in the papers that contain the straw ballots.

"Seriously," they say, "there is no suggestion of war in the very properly firm attitude of the Department of State in its maintenance of the age-long tradition of protection of the lives and property of Americans abroad. Legislation by Mexico, confiscatory of the property of American citizens, under this policy of course will not be tolerated. As a matter of fact, the mere presence of an American gunboat off the coast of a little country of Central or South America, or the landing of a few snappy American marines, has on various occasions prevented civil strife and useless bloodshed in the distressed countries thus visited. It is believed that a cessation of civil strife speedily will follow the landing of U. S. marines in Nicaragua.

"Pray to God to guide our beloved land to its high and proper destiny; keep your gun handy and your powder dry, in the event that they should ever properly be needed; but don't waste your pencil points or worry the state department with senseless and meaningless votes on war."

Jolt From Baltimore.

In the same mail with this encouragement the Department received a jolt from the Baltimore mass meeting which adopted resolutions demanding that secretary Kellogg be "peremptorily dismissed from office, as being temperamentally, intellectually and morally unfit," a copy of those resolutions and a leaflet.

The leaflet, signed by Mercer Green Johnston as secretary, read:

"Which? Shall we shut down the Statue of Liberty Enlightening the World from its pedestal and replace it with the statue of Fury Scattering Slander and Flame? If not, all Americans in Congress and throughout our land who believe in the essential American tradition symbolized by the Statue of Liberty speak NOW in language that the State Department and the White House cannot fail to understand—or else hereafter forever hold their peace when the name of Liberty is mentioned among honorable men!

"Who? Liberty looks down today asking 'Who's a slacker now?'"

The resolutions demand withdrawal of American armed forces from Latin America, and adoption of a friendly policy toward those republics.

Women Workers Protest.

The White House is hearing also the protest of members of the National Women's Trade Union League against the Mexican and Nicaraguan aggressions. Telegrams and letters, urging arbitration and friendliness toward Latin America are arriving in response to an appeal issued by Rose Schneiderman, president, and Elisabeth Christman, secretary of the League, from its Chicago office.

"Organized working women," they said, "believe that the rights of American citizens to make money out of oil concessions, lumber, fruit, land or any other resources of other countries are a subject which is never a justifiable cause of war."

Hit Intervention in Nicaragua at Meet Here Sunday Afternoon

Intervention in Nicaragua is to be protested by prominent liberals at a meeting arranged for next Sunday afternoon, at 3:30, in the Lyric Theatre.

Arbitration of the Mexican problem will also be urged by this gathering which is to be held under the auspices of a committee headed by the Rev. Dr. J. Howard Melish, chairman. The Rev. W. Russell Bowie will preside and the speakers will be Hubert C. Herbert, leader of the American unofficial investigating [illegible] which has just returned [illegible] Mexico, and Norman Thomas, who was arrested last April in his attempt to test the "Riot Act." The U. S. Supreme Court's refusal to re-hear the case of August Dorchy marks the end of the spectacular attempt of the former leaders of District No. 14 of the united mine workers to break the Kansas Industrial Court law. The picketing of shops not on strike as a means of organizing non-union workers is forbidden by New York city judges, nine unionists are held in contempt of court for violating an injunction forbidding such picketing.

Troops In Indiana.

Civil liberty issues were also prominent in industrial conflicts in Indiana, where state troops were called on strike duty at non-union mines. In the Rhode Island textile strike troops were used also. Hundreds of strikers were arrested while picketing in the fur workers and garment workers' strikes in New York City, the authorities evading a court test of the drastic anti-picketing injunctions by making arrests on disorderly conduct charges. The police brutality against strikers in these and the paper box workers' strikes called forth protests from public-spirited citizens.

No New California Cases.

Prosecution of workers under the state criminal syndicalism and sedition laws has practically ceased. In California, where most of the prosecutions have occurred since 1919, no new cases have been reported since 1924, and no cases are pending at this time. Fifty-five criminal syndicalism prisoners serving sentences in California prisons were released in 1926 either on parole, by expiration of sentence or on reversal of conviction. Only one person entered prison under that law in 1926. He was convicted in 1929. Four of the five syndicalist prisoners in Washington were released during the year.

Jail Communists.

In Pennsylvania alone has there been a continuance of prosecutions for opinions. Two convictions of Workers Party members under the state sedition act took place, and police raids on homes and headquarters of members in the steel districts resulted in several arrests. The only other sedition conviction in 1926 was that of Anthony Bimba in Massachusetts, who was charged also with violation of the state blasphemy act passed in 1697.

The number of state political prisoners on January 1, 1927, is 18 as compared with 77 on January 1, 1926.

Suggests Tell Workers How They Think of Them

In connection with the opening of the Workers School on Jan. 31, we will send copies to those on all of the Workers Schools in U. S. and Canada, asking for criticisms of the lectures, courses, etc., given in the Workers School of the Bronx.

This will give the teachers an opportunity to get direct criticism and suggestions from the student body and at the same time to give the student body a notion of what the teachers are trying to do and what kind of co-operation they require. We suggest this to be a frank and free discussion, the key-note of which shall be constructive criticism, leading toward the use of the highest type of teaching methods in the Workers School and toward a closer cooperation between teachers and students.

No teacher should fail to be present to get the benefit of the critical discussion of his work. No student committee should fail to be present and all other active students, who are interested in attending this discussion, are welcome as well.

BERTRAM D. WOLFE, Director Workers School.

SMITH AND VARE TO BE DENIED OATHS—NORRIS

Predicts Barring of Slush Senators

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A permanent barrier, which will block Col. Frank L. Smith, of Illinois and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, from ever entering the United States Senate, was erected by the vote denying Smith his oath, it was predicted today by Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, leader of the insurgent block.

Even as attorneys for Smith began drafting an appeal to the Senate elections committee to recommend the admission of Smith on his credentials as the appointee of Governor Len Small, the insurgent leader declared the effort was doomed to failure and that both Smith and Vare would be barred from the Seventieth Congress without being permitted to take their oaths.

Make Final Drive For Tax Reduction

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A final and apparently hopeless drive for tax reduction legislation has been inaugurated by Democrats in the House.

Representative Garrett of Tennessee, Democratic leader, offered a motion instructing the ways and means committee to report for passage the Garner $335,000,000 tax slash bill.

Under House rules, Garrett explained, the motion must be supported by signatures of 218 members. Forty-six Republicans must join a solid Democratic majority to make the effort successful, he said.

Philadelphia Workers Theatre Giving Gold Play on January 28

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 25.—The Workers' Theatre Alliance of Philadelphia is the result of effort initiated several years ago by Comrade Alfred Sobel. After much hard work he succeeded in effecting an organization that has grown stronger, and stronger since then, having given many presentations of proletarian productions.

In September 1925 the first performance of three one act plays was given, "Slave With Two Faces" and "The Red Spirit" and the Pioneers gave "Schooldays." In December of the same year another presentation was given.

The Alliance has also played for the benefit of the shirtmakers during their strike here, and later went to Passaic for the benefit of the textile strikers. All these performances have been very successful.

The Alliance is now rehearsing Michael Gold's "Strike" to be given at the Lenin memorial meeting, Friday, Jan. 28th, at the Labor Institute, Eighth and Locust streets, Philadelphia.

It is the desire of Comrade Sobel and those associated with him to strengthen and broaden their scope until the alliance becomes the center of proletarian culture in this city. There is much undeveloped talent and ability among the workers, and the alliance is the vehicle for its expression. Why, instead of attending movies and theatres, where bourgeois themes are shown, should not the workers attend their own theatre and see their hopes and struggles presented by their own class artists?

Every interested person is urged to communicate with Comrade Sobel, at this address: 2612 S. Philip street, Philadelphia, Pa.

KLAN TERROR OF DENVER NEGRO; THIRD ATTACK

Received Many Letters Warning Him to Move

DENVER, Jan. 25.—Police here placed the home of E. C. Carrington, a colored man, under special guard, following the third attack within two months made on it by race-prejudiced neighbors.

The latest attack was made on January 15, when a bomb was hurled at Carrington's front porch at 6 o'clock in the evening, just as the family was sitting down to its evening meal. Carrington rushed out of the door, seized the bomb and tossed it to the street.

The bomb exploded as it neared the pavement, the concussion shattered the windows in the nearby houses. A bomb that was placed under the porch at 2 A. M. on December 10, the date of the first attack, blew a hole in the porch, arousing the neighborhood. The second attack occurred on January 2, when six shots were fired from ambush into the kitchen, three shots narrowly missing Mrs. Carrington's back. The shooting continued thru the night.

Mr. Carrington has received repeated threatening letters warning him to move from the neighborhood, which is chiefly occupied by white people. The Denver office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has taken up the case. President George W. Gross has appealed to the authorities for protection, and an investigation is now under way to ascertain the sources of the bomb terrorism.

WE ALL SUPPLY SOCIAL CAPITAL BUT BANKERS COMPLETELY CONTROL ITS ANNUAL INCLARES ANNALIST DESCRIBING INSURANCE COMPANIES

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

An answer to one of the most persistent arguments against socialism appears ready made in an article by Arthur R. March in the annual economic survey of The Annalist, New York financial weekly. March's business, that is, capitalist expert shows how society could provide its own capital funds without the intervention of a privileged owning class.

March naturally points to the protection of 58,000,000 policy holders and their dependents against the financial loss due to the destruction of earning power by death, as the primary service rendered by life insurance. But he continues:

Capital Accumulation.

"Of scarcely less importance to the economic fabric of the country, however, is the function of life insurance as a gatherer and distributor of liquid social capital—the funds received by the insurance institutions and held as reserves to provide for the maturing policies.

"The assets held by the legal-reserve life insurance companies of the United States at the end of 1926 aggregated in value $12,850,000,000 or about 3.6 per cent of the total national wealth, now estimated at $360,000,000,000. The gain in assets during the single year 1926 was $1,315,000,000, or certainly much more than 3.6 per cent of the year's increase in national wealth."

Liquid Capital.

This means that insurance assets form a larger and larger proportion of the country's liquid capital. According to March they represented 1.1 per cent of the national wealth in 1880; 1.2 per cent in 1890; 2 per cent in 1900; 2.3 per cent in 1904; 2.4 per cent in 1912; 2.7 per cent in 1922 and 3.6 per cent in 1926.

"These insurance assets, moreover," he continues, "now constitute the greatest single source of investment capital in the land and the mere figures of their distribution among the principal categories of investments afford an impressive demonstration of the extent to which they assist the productive and constructive work of the country."

How Insurance Grew.

March outlines the investments of 52 life insurance companies holding about 92.4 per cent of the total assets of all legal-reserve companies in the United States as follows:

(1) Farm mortgages. $1,960,000,000.

(2) Other mortgages. $3,123,000,000.

(3) U. S., Canadian and foreign government bonds, and state and municipal bonds, $1,116,000,000.

(4) Railroad bonds and stocks, $2,435,000,000.

(5) Public utility bonds and stocks, $819,000,000.

(6) Other bonds and stocks, $166,000,000.

(7) Policy loans, $1,437,000,000.

(8) Real estate, $214,000,000.

(9) Collateral loans, $15,000,000.

(10) Cash, $100,000,000.

(11) Other assets, $491,000,000.

Taking into account the fire, marine, and the casualty and liability insurance companies of the country March concludes "that the various insurance institutions now have aggregate resources of almost $17,000,000,000, or 4.7 per cent of the entire national wealth; that they collect annually from the American people insurance premiums totaling about $4,000,000,000, or almost 6 per cent of the entire earned national income; and that their total income from all sources last year was more than $4,750,000,000, or almost 7 per cent of the earned national income."

Bankers Control.

Here is real social saving in which social capital is being provided by 58,000,000 individuals, or more than one total gainfully employed. All that is lacking is social control of this huge investment fund. But the people are leaving the control in the hands of the bankers to further their desire for domination. It is none the less proving that capital can be provided socially as it would be in a worker republic. Various Australian labor governments have demonstrated that insurance can be successfully managed by the state at far lower cost than in private hands.

American Negro Writer Finds Russians Eager To Translate His Work

Letters have been received by the national association for the advancement of colored people, 69 Fifth avenue, from William Pickens, field secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., who has visited Russia on his European lecture tour.

Mr. Pickens states that he addressed an audience in Moscow including 22 Chinese generals, a number of Russian leaders and representatives of ten to twelve nations and races. The entire group, writes Mr. Pickens, was photographed at least 50 times, motion pictures being made of the speakers in action.

Among the Russian leaders Mr. Pickens has conferred with are Kalinin, sisterr of Trotzky and Lenin, and prominent editors. He reports that "The Fire in the Flint" by Walter White, and "Bursting Bonds" and "The Vengeance of the Gods" by Mr. Pickens himself are to be translated into Russian, and perhaps put on the stage as well as made into motion pictures.

Mr. Pickens has written a comprehensive article on lynching during the past forty years, detailing the campaign conducted for seventeen years against this evil in America by the N. A. A. C. P. This article is to be published in newspapers in Moscow, Berlin and Paris, writes Mr. Pickens, who has also written for Russian magazines on American race problems.

The Youth Column

YOUNG WORKERS GET LITTLE EDUCATION AND IT IS NO GOOD—NEED OWN LEAGUE

By OLGA GOLD
(Young Worker Correspondent)

WITH growing capitalism and simplification of machinery, more and, more youth are involved in factory life. For the last eight or nine years the number of young workers employed in industry has doubled. At present there are eleven million young workers employed in various industries in the U. S. Who are they?

They are the sons and daughters of the many adult workers whose wages are so low as to force their children into industry.

Very Young Must Work.

Hundreds of thousands of young boys and girls under the age of 14 have to spend their young lives in factory prisons, where they are stunted, crippled before maturity.

In the United States there are institutions for the development of the youth. However, they are closed and denied to the majority of children of the working class. Perhaps, among the higher institutions of education, in the high schools, colleges, etc., you will find a very small percentage of working class students. Can these students enjoy the leisure contrasted with those of the rich in order to help them study with a clear mind? No, not at all!

Little Education.

Official investigation in New York City have revealed large numbers of school children in working class districts to be deficient in school work, due to malnutrition and starvation. Also they have to be the victims of many other sufferings, i. e., the parents out of work, or slack seasons, strikes and struggles with exploiters. These conditions undermine their spirits and prevent them from obtaining a better education.

Even where the working class youth succeeds in getting some measure of education, the greatest amount of school time is spent in teaching the students an anti-working class ideology.

Few in Higher Schools.

Many of them are compelled to drop their education. Consequently the percentage of working class children in educational institutions decreases each year, while on the other hand the percentage of young workers in the factories is constantly increasing.

The youth are to the bosses the reserve army to keep the wages down and to break the union where one exists. They are the first ones to be called upon to protect the interests of the imperialists in war.

The industries in which the great majority of the youth are employed are the most oppressive and unorganized. The bosses are taking advantage of the unorganized state in which the youth find themselves. They seek to exploit and oppress them more. They make repeated attempts to cut wages and increase the hours as, for example, in the textile and many other industries where a great majority of he youth are employed.

Bosses' Organizations.

We also find that the Young Workers are controlled by the employers in other fields. In order to distract the attention of the young workers he bosses create organizations thru which they spread their poisonous propaganda.

Such are the Y. M. C. A., the Boy Scouts, the Y. M. H. A., etc. These organizations are the tools of the bosses and are not for the benefit of the workers. Such organizations will not not help the workers to improve their conditions.

Young Workers' League

Here in the U. S. we have such an organization, namely, the Young Workers' League. The Young Workers' League is a militant organization which fights to organize the young workers and improve their conditions, at the same time fighting against the needless destruction of young lives in capitalist wars. It gives the working youth a militant leadership in the daily working class struggle.

Every young worker who is anxious for the improvement of his or her condition should join the Young Workers' League and fight together with the rest of the workers to better their conditions.

Boston Progressives Hold Meeting Despite Gangsters' Warnings

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—The Progressive trade unionists of Boston answered the challenge of the right wing gangsters in an impressive manner when they held their meeting in Boston.

The progressives recently organized a large needle trades mass meeting at Temple Adath Israel. The meeting was well advertised and the entire main floor and balcony was filled. This is the first time the progressives were well organized and ready for open action. Gangsters did not dare to repeat their tactics in preventing the meeting from being held.

The Gangsters Attack.

Nearly a month ago a similar meeting of this kind was invaded by the gangsters of the Sigman machine and the whole meeting was broken up and the hall was cleared by the police. The right wing at the time announced that no further meetings of this kind would ever be held in Boston. The splendid spirit at the Tuesday meeting and the wonderful organization of progressive workers ready to protect their meeting was a crushing answer to their challenge.

For Unity.

The meeting was addressed by Rissaglia of the Amalgamated and Weiss of the New York Joint Board. The speakers were enthusiastically received. A resolution was unanimously adopted dehouncing the disrupting tactics of the Sigmund machine, the attack on the Furriers union and the expulsion policy in the Amalgamated. The meeting pledged itself to fight for unity for the trade union movement against disruption and splitting tactics of Sigman & Co. Full support was also pledged to the New York Joint Board in their struggle for unity and against the attempts of reactionaries to split the union. At the meeting several applications were made for the Joint Board bends.

LETTERS FROM READERS

Editor, DAILY WORKER: The coming of The DAILY WORKER to New York City is a big and important event for the New York workers. At the present time all the reactionary forces are combined to fight the militants in the needle trades unions. These reactionary bureaucrats are acting the part of capitalist provocateurs. In order to hide the real issue involved they raise the smoke screen of Communism On this basis the yellow Wall Street tyrans is giving all possible assistance to these combined black forces.

The DAILY WORKER is the only weapon in the hands of the rank and file, and serves the purpose of bringing the matter before the American masses. It is the duty of the honest rank and file of all the trades to do all in its power to establish The DAILY WORKER as a real workingclass mass organ.

I suggest to the editor of The DAILY WORKER that a column be opened in which the readers of the paper can offer their suggestions for bettering The DAILY WORKER.

New York, Jan. 24.

P. S. I have several suggestions in mind which I will send in some other time.

Editor of The DAILY WORKER: It is a great satisfaction to know that we are to have "The DAILY WORKER" close at hand. If only it could find the way into the home of every worker in the metropolitan area, New York would be the center of a new world. May the editors be able to strike the key that will win the workers' hearts and thereby guarantee unbounded success for the paper and its mission.

Judge Denounces Lowman Lynchings

AIKEN, S. C., Jan. 25.—South Carolina's most famous lynching—the Lowmans—was scathingly denounced from the bench here this afternoon by Superior Court Judge J. Henry Johnson.

He announced that W. W. Rodgers, private detective of Ex-Governor Blease, and Solicitor Bertie D. Carter will present the evidence against the lynchers of the three Lowmans before the Aiken County Grand Jury tomorrow.

"Two of the preceding judges in this circuit have covered in condemnation of the foul crime," Johnson said.

"A small band of headstrong and misled men have besmirched the name of South Carolina. Lynching is always deliberately cowardly murder, and the lynching of a woman is the utmost of low crimes."

THE SECRET ELECTION IN THE MACHINERY UNION IN THE CHICAGO DISTRICT

(BY A. MACKENZIE (V. G.)

The Major Committee forces.

TWO major issues were the Dicrin Committee, Committee and the Militants and Other Plan in the Machinery Union, a year ago last October. The progressives contended that the District Organization Committee, under progressive leadership, had increased the membership of the union considerably (which had been admitted in the District Council by the business agents some time before). Also that the plan brought in by the progressive forces (the committee and adopted by the District Council was a splendid one (admitted even by the District Council, a sub-committee elected by the latter to bring in even one change or improvement). As a campaign stroke, the District Council abolished the District Organization Committee, after denying its accomplishments.

THE substituted districts council plan called for local organization committees (which was nothing new, since they were also called for by the original plan of the district organization committee), a central machinery to consist of heads of local lodge organization committees, the lodge presidents being recommended for heads of committees. The district council had sabotaged the request of the district organizer, by assigning a business agent with no organizing ability. The business agents had failed to stimulate the shop workers to plug the shops in their vicinity. And despite this, the progressives had some real organizing work.

The Speedusmatic B. & O. Plan.

THE other issue dealt with the Speedusmatic Company, where the "worker employer cooperation" plan was introduced (meaning the extension to a contract shop of the B. & O. Plan formerly in practice only on some railroads). This was the only place in the entire country where this was done.

It was explained by the district council that the president of the firm had asked the grand lodge for such a plan. Captain Beyer, the B. & O. Plan originator, drew up the agreement. The business agents did not bring this to the local lodges for discussion. They called in the workers in the Speedusmatic Shop, advising them to consent. After this, the district council refused to hold its over for one meeting, until the delegates had a chance to consult their lodges. The plan was pushed through.

NOW, every meeting of the company and shop representatives is concerned with elimination of waste, increased production, better machinery, etc. Ullman did not dare to come out openly for the plan, but wanted it given a chance. The workers have had two lay-offs since the plan was adopted. The progressives fought the introduction of this plan, and contended that this means the final development toward company unionism.

The progressives pointed out that the way to better union conditions was not to increase production for the boss, but to carry on an organization campaign throughout the industry. They warned the membership against this plan, which the officials had foretold would be extended to other shops, if in their opinion, it proved satisfactory.

Progressives Poll Strong Vote.

OF the total of slightly more than 1900 votes cast, the progressives drew an average of all offices of thirty-five percent (35%), varying from 40% for sergeant-at-arms down to 20½% for one of the business agents. The progressive vote for the various offices was as follows: For district president, Waterworth 40%; vice-president, Iverson 33⅓%; recording secretary, Weydert 45½; treasurer, Schlissinger 31%; sergeant at arms, Schlimback 49%; business agents, Reir 28%, Holt 20½%.

FOR all the officer except business agent, it was a two cornered fight. In the race for business agent, however, two independent candidates crept in. The combined opposition vote to the machine was not sufficient to win, Ullman and Daly, successful machine candidates for re-election as business agents getting 60% and 50% respectively, or an average vote of 55%. Breivogel, independent, got 11%, but the other independent, Radovan, got 24%, which was higher than that obtained by the second progressive business agent.

HAD the opposition been unified in the race for business agent, it would have drawn 42% of the total vote (assuming that those who voted for the independents would have voted against Ullman and Daly). To the extent that this assumption is incorrect, this percentage would be diminished. But at any rate, the progressive vote would have been increased to a great extent.

The progressives knew the value of united progressive and shop efforts to settle this. Radovan was present at the progressive caucus at which the progressive agreed to abide by the decision of the group, and when he failed of selection, he pledged his support to the entire ticket. He had come out for the progressive program shortly before, to announced his independent candidacy and while he spoke for the progressive program in his own local, he was not allowed it at others.

It is obvious that for future elections, more strenuous attempts must be made to unify the opposition, of course, around a program for the betterment of the union.

One of the drawbacks in the past campaign was that the candidates were selected by the progressive group only a few days before nominations began in the local lodges. Had greater preparations been made, it might well have been possible to draw in other elements into the campaign, thus insuring greater success.

Strong Progressive Group Needed.

CONSIDERING that the recent district election was conducted by a progressive group, hastily formed for the elections, the results are good, but only as a beginning. During the campaign, many meetings of the progressive group were held. Now, after the election, one of the most important tasks is the organization of progressive groups in the local lodges, which shall conduct a fight for the progressive program throughout the year. It is not enough for a few individuals to work on individual propaganda at the meetings. All progressives must be drawn into a group, benefiting from the experience and knowledge of all, and taking an active part in the fight against the reactionary machine. And even in lodges under progressive leadership, such a group is required to insure the spread of progressive propaganda and organization in the lodge, and to forestall the possible loss of influence should the leaders change front.

Progressive Groups Not Merely for Elections.

SUCH progressive groups have a definite part to play in the present international campaign in the I. A. of M. But progressive groups must be formed not merely with a view to an election, but for a constant struggle. To wait until the next district elections to form progressive groups would be akin to suicide. Such haphazard formation would prevent waging a strong campaign. Progressive groups must be organized in all lodges immediately. They must become functioning groups, meeting regularly to take up the problems facing the union. How often they can meet will be determined by the problems facing them, and the will of the group itself.

THE election for business agents showed that independents can still play too prominent a role in elections. This can be overcome, if the progressive groups are organized. If only a few energetic campaigns, if the lines of division between progressives and reactionaries are made clear independents will be forced to declare themselves on the issues, not merely at election time, but throughout the year. This will make it less possible for the independents to get an average vote for business agent of 17½%. (the progressives getting 24½%).

Progressives Must Coordinate Their Activity.

THE progressive forces in the past have not coordinated their activities in the district council with the work in the lodges. Issues are not exploited to the full by the progressives in the local lodges and in the district council, because they have been left to their own resources. The machine carries through a uniform policy. The progressives must also unify their forces, so that progressive delegates to the district council will carry out the policy of the progressive forces, and to the best advantage.

The progressive forces must widen their influence. While in some local lodges, considerable influence has been secured, there are some lodges where the progressive group has no following. Such contacts must be sought out and established, as quickly as possible.

THE immediate need for the machinists' union as disclosed by the district elections is the extension and consolidation of a strong progressive group, in the local lodges and in the district council. The progressive forces in the United Mine Workers of America, under fire from the reactionary officialdom, showed that through a determined campaign, of organized mass meetings and a progressive paper, they could mobilize the membership for a "Save the union" program. The progressive campaign in the U. M. W. of A. proves the tremendous power that progressives can wield through organization around a program based on the needs of the union.

Politics and Programs The Trade Union Press Strikes—Injunctions Labor and Imperialism

Stewards Strike in Panama Liner When Placed on Deck Job

New York City, passengers arriving on the Panama Mail liner Colombia, from Central America, damned the mess room crew because of a stewards' strike between Cristobe and Balboa, which forced the ship rich to do "their own housework."

Captain Judson, captain of the ship, ordered three stewards to scrape iron pipes because the Colombia endeavored to cut expenses in the deck department.

But they refused because this work comes within the jurisdiction of seamen.

So the captain locked them up in the brig.

Then the passengers were eating it the whole stewards' crew went on sympathetic strike and the ship's guests waited nearly an hour for the next course. It did not cease so that they had to satisfy their anger by damning the "unruly 'red' waiters." That night they prepared to take turns in serving meals.

When the Columbia reached Balboa Captain Judson had the whole stewards' staff arrested. They were held in $500 bail, something a seafaring man can seldom furnish. Fourteen "scab" stewards proceeded with the ship to New York.

Toiled Forty Years at Useful Labor; Junked For Uselessness Now

Sick, jobless and friendless, Michael Murphy, 60 years old, was removed from a lodging house at 160 Park Row to Bellevue Street Hospital, where he is now recovering from malnutrition and bronchial pneumonia.

For forty years Murphy has worked as a laborer, in railroad camps, and on the streets, never receiving more than twenty-one dollars for a week's work. Because his snowy white hair and tottering steps belies his physical ability to work, he has lately found it hard to find a job.

Like thousands of others, he found it necessary to make his home in the "quarters a night Bowery houses" because of his poverty. The bad food served at the cheap restaurants, and the unsanitary condition of all living quarters wrecked ruin upon his health.

Last Saturday, when snow and wind swept furiously about the city and kept well-dressed New Yorkers indoors, Murphy mushed thru the snowdrifts delivering packages to respectable his empty pocketbook, his only protection against the elements being a torn, light and well-worn overcoat, and an extra pair of socks lent to him by a fellow lodger because his broken shoes seamed sadly in need of repair. Three days later he was forced to take to his bed.

For Anti-Imperialism

Editor, Daily Worker: Enclosed is my subscription for a year and some contribution to the Daily Worker. For forty years or more my only political hobby is anti-imperialism and I will therefore do my best to keep the only daily anti-imperialism paper I know going.

The more I study the matter, the more convinced I am that imperialism is and always was a losing game of a dying race. Statesmen seem to believe that it is the warrior with his sword that has conquered the world but nothing can be farther from the truth than that. The farmer with his plow is the conqueror, a people that forsake the plow for the sword is heading for perdition. I have always been sure that the British empire must go where all other empires have gone but I did not expect it so soon and if the British statesmen had been wise they could have picked a softer spot to fall on; as it is, it will cost them more to lose their empire than it has cost to gain it. It is no use talking about disarmament and peace as long as one nation remains subject to another.

Ponsonby Comes Here To Preach Pacifism

Arthur Ponsonby, M. P., British pacifist, arrived here today on the Cunarder Laconia, for a three-weeks' lecture tour.

On his arrival Mr. Ponsonby stated that he will not speak of specific American problems, but will deal in general with war as being "futile and imbecile." He did not mention the British aggression in China

Officers Wink at Law Violations Every Day

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—United States senators, and nearly all other government officials, connive and conspire daily in violations of the prohibition law, Senator James W. Wadsworth (Republican) of New York, declared in the senate today in urging modification of the law.

"Senators and other public officials do not differ from the great mass of human beings that make up our population," asserted Wadsworth. "The attitude toward the law pervades every stratum of society. If you will but tell the truth, you will admit that it is the prevailing national attitude."

Wadsworth declared that dozens of senators have encountered evidence "clear and incontrovertible," of liquor law violations, and yet did not report it to the proper authorities.

"The bootleg trade," he declared, "has reached to every community in the nation, its customers are counted by the millions. As a matter of fact, the bootleg business is now one of the largest in the country."

The speech provoked lively debate. Senator Heflin (Democrat) of Alabama, a dry, declared that "all the wet senators in the senate could be put in a taxi."

"Yes," retorted senator Bruce (Democrat) of Maryland, a wet, "and all the senators in the senate that I have seen endless times since I've been here could be put in less cubic space than that of a taxicab."

ANTI-LABOR LEGISLATION COMING; JOIN LABOR DEFENSE TO PREPARE

By PAT DEVINE.

All over the world militant workingclass fighters are lying rotting in capitalist jails. Hundreds of fighters have been murdered and hundreds of dependents left destitute.

In America we have seen anti-labor legislation compelling the workers to fight with their hands tied behind their backs.

We know of the cases of Mooney and Billings, Frank Little, Rathenberg, Foster, Gildow, Sacco and Vanzetti and the hundreds of other workers persecuted by the bosses.

Sacco and Vanzetti are lying in jail, pining away for a crime everybody knows they did not commit. Six and one half of the best years of their lives have been spent behind prison bars. It is public knowledge that only the organized protest of the workers of the world kept them from being legally murdered six years ago.

A very important case is before the law courts at the moment. Enes Sormenti, a militant, fearless worker, is threatened with deportation to Italy where Mussolini, the bloody dictator, whom all capitalist defenders are trying to emulate—awaits with an impatient thirst for his life. Mr. John J. Davis of the United States department of labor is acting as a bloodhound for the leader of white terror and proposes sending Sormenti and all other political refugees back to their homeland—into the jaws of death. The workers must raise their voice in protest against such action. By agitation and mass support the life of Sormenti and the other political refugees can be saved.

Who is fighting the battle of the oppressed workers the world over? Who is championing Sormenti, Sacco and Vanzetti and all the other workers threatened with capitalist persecution?

The International Labor Defense is the organization trying to rally workers of all shades of opinion under its banner for the great and glorious work of defense.

The International Labor Defense is combating the attack of the bosses in the law courts, in the street and everywhere it shows itself. To do this more successful it needs the support of every one who believes in freedom for the workers.

By agitation and organization we can strike a blow for working class freedom.

The power of the workers is invincible if organized. Resolve today to do your duty!

Introduce Resolution To Postpone National Origin Act for a Year

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Representative Jacobstein, New York, introduced a resolution in the house today to postpone for one year the application of the national origin section of the 1924 Immigration Law.

Jacobstein said that this postponement would enable the President to clear up the uncertainty surrounding this method of fixing immigration quotas. He pointed out that the tentative quotas recently announced provide large decreases in German, Scandinavian and Irish immigration and a large increase in the British quota.

PROFESSOR MILLIKAN IS SHOCKED

"THE Scopes trial gave me the most violent shock of my life," said Professor Robert A. Millikan recently. "I have had 15,000 volts of electricity shot through my body, but it did not give the shock the Scopes trial did. We thought that type of thought had passed away 100 years ago with the Inquisition. When such a thing can happen in our day of enlightenment and progress it is time for us to sit up and take notice."

When they awaken to the real character of the capitalist press the workers will receive even a greater shock than did the professor. Most workers swallow the publicity of the capitalist press without any doubt or question. It is only when a serious situation arises that they actually see its true character. There is no doubt that the sixteen thousand textile workers of Passaic received electrical shocks when they saw the lies which were published about their struggle against the textile barons. There is no doubt that the striking subway strikers of New York City were similarly shocked when they read the twisted stories of the plute press. During situations of strife and conflict the capitalist press shows up glaringly its real character. We find it shown also during the present period when the United States Government is seeking to impose its war propaganda upon the workers.

The question is whether the workers need an electrical shock to be awakened or whether they can realize in time the danger that confronts them in the capitalist news sheets. It is the function of The DAILY WORKER to open the eyes of the toilers of this country to the fact that there is this powerful force—the capitalist press—which acts as a barrier to their further progress. For this reason The DAILY WORKER should be energetically supported in its effort to establish itself as a mass paper.

The Attack on Powers Hapgood.

The cowardly attack on Powers Hapgood, member of the United Mine Workers of America, by agents of President John L. Lewis after being lured to a hotel by a telephone call, is a typical example of the methods used by the labor bureaucrats to discourage union members from actively working for a stronger union and a more progressive leadership.

The story of this outrage published in The DAILY WORKER proves that the reactionary leaders of the United Mine Workers, just like their prototypes in other unions, are ready to go to any extreme to hold on to their offices.

Had Powers Hapgood chosen to throw in his lot with the Lewis machine and place his abilities at their disposal nothing would be too good for him. Were he of the type that is willing to do any dirty work, provided the salary is right, Lewis would find a sinecure for him at the expense of the membership as he found a place for the fink, Ellis Searles, editor of Lewis's official organ, the gentleman, who paid a detective agency a large sum of union money for alleged evidence of "subversive activities" against progressive members of the miners' union.

The attack on Hapgood shows better than words that the position of the machine rests on brute force and thuggery, rather than on the good will of the membership. A leader confident of his strength would not have to resort to such methods. Needless to say Lewis will gain nothing by this cowardly assault. It will only have the effect of increasing the resentment of the miners thruout the whole international union against him and his corrupt machine and make them more determined than ever to give the organization a policy and a leadership that will enable it to march forward, to organize all the coal fields in the United States, to fight for the nationalization of the mines and in full to put into effect the policy under which John Brophy, the progressive candidate, conducted his campaign in the recent election.

Some Rabbis Face the Class Struggle.

The class struggle forced its way into a national conference of Reformed Jewry in Cleveland the other day and the hitherto quiet and peaceful gathering of rabbis and synagogue delegates became a battleground of warring tendencies. Reformed Judaism, which thought it was in agreement on everything, found that it was in fundamental disagreement on the most important question of the day—its attitude toward the labor movement.

For four hours the rabbis and the laymen of the 278 congregations there represented quarreled over the report of the "Committee on Social Justice." The majority of the delegates suddenly forgot their religious role as representatives of "Jewish Idealism" and remembered that they were garment bosses, businessmen and manufacturers. "There is a feeling abroad," confessed Rabbi Philipson of Cincimati, "that Reformed Judaism is a religion of the rich." "We are plunging right into a sea of trouble by talking this way," warned Rabbi Solomon Foster of Newark as he thot of the future shudders of his rich pantsmakers and vestmakers when he makes his report.

Just as the Episcopal Church has its Bishop Brown and the Catholic its Father McGlynn, so the debate revealed that the Jewish Reformed Church also has its martyrs to plainspeaking on the cause of the workers. Bedlam broke loose when young Rabbi Isserman, of Toronto, began to tell how he had been expelled from a synagogue for "expressing my views on the dispossessed, the poor and the disinherited. I paid for my views but I am proud I paid."

The indignant rabbis moved to expunge Isserman's speech from the record and the motion carried. Isserman was "paying for his views" again and the convention vote proved his point. But you don't get rid of the class struggle by expunging it from the records. Every institution that seeks to talk to men will have to take ideas on the most important question of our day. Ostrich tactics will not end the class struggle. It will not down until it is settled and settled right by the victory of the workers and the workers' rule. And the idealists like Isserman and Bishop Brown will learn by bitter experience that they cannot espouse labor's cause in the synagogues and churches that are endowed and built by business men and controlled by vested interests.

In the next: "Who's Who in China?" will be the name of Mr. Hu, who formerly ironed shirts for indigent artists in the neighborhood of Greenwich Village. He is now helping to clean out the foreign imperialists and iron out the affairs of 400,000,000 Chinese.

George Bernard Shaw in praising Mussolini has given some enterprising novelist an excuse for writing a sequel to: "A Hind Let Loose." The hind was a journalist with an elastic conscience who wrote with equal enthusiasm and conviction for both sides of a question. Next week Shaw may write a tribute to the late Matteotti, victim of the murderer Mussolini.

The Bookkeepers', Stenographers' and Accountants' Union of New York proclaims that it aims to organize all the clerical workers in New York. Pacifists used to point with pride to the Chinese as models for christian nations because, the millions in number they refuse to resort to violence against the oppressors. Assuming for the sake of argument that the Chinese were ever more peacefully inclined than any other race, we submit for pacifist consideration the idea that the Chinese are thrown much more consideration now, when they use rifles than before when they had none to use.

The Fears of Senator Borah

SENATOR BORAH is afraid that the government is being controlled by the financial interests. He is afraid that the government is not responsive to the will of the people. He is afraid that we have a republic in name, but a plutocracy in fact.

Senator Borah does not have a worry. We already have a plutocracy. At the present moment, one employe out of every eleven persons gainfully employed in the United States is on the public payroll, local, state or national. This does not include the army and navy. Besides the government's prohibition snooping activities and the swarms of spies and all the red tape clerks, the Coolidge administration and its immediate predecessors are demonstrating that they have made of our government "a republic in name, but a bureaucracy in fact" by putting the government openly at the service of big business. The latest example of this is the putting of our navy at the service of the bankers—Brown Bros., Seligman and Speyer — for the invasion of Nicaragua; the putting of our state department at the service of the oil interests for the bullying of Mexico; and the navy at the service of big business to carry out its interests in China. Again we have such recent decisions as the Dorchy case in which the Supreme Court has made itself an open tool of the bosses in declaring that a strike may be illegal may thus be the means de facto of breaking the strike. This makes it possible to use the full force of the government against labor.

THERE is no doubt whatever that money in our governmental affairs has become powerful in the United States and particularly during and since the world war, to make it count more openly as the instrument of the bosses for whatever they want to put across. "Our" president sent "our" army into West Virginia against "our" enemies, the coal miners who are trying to organize against the coal barons. At the command of the steel trust, "our" president sent a full division of "our" army under Major General Leonard Wood into Gary, Indiana, to smash the steel strike; and the national guard was shipped all over the country during the railway shopmen's strike to help the railway bosses defeat that also.

Republican and democratic administrations are alike guilty. It was Wilson who put the army at the service of the coal barons and the steel trust in West Virginia and Gary. And it was the Harding-Coolidge administration that used the national guard to smash the shopmen's strike. The Smith-Tammany state and local government put the police and the local courts at the service of the bosses in the same strike. Borah, LaFollette & Co. are perfectly blind to these facts.

OUR one time "government of the people, by the people, and for the people," is becoming more and more openly a government of the corporations, by the corporations and for the corporations. These corporations control both old parties.

The only remedy is the formation of a labor party locally and of a Farmer-Labor Party nationally, which will be controlled by the workers and poor farmers who make up the overwhelming majority of the nation. Such a party would fight to change our corporation government into a government of the workers and farmers. The Workers (Communist) Party has carried on a fight for the last few years to awaken the masses of the country to the need of such a Farmer-Labor Party. In the coming municipal campaign, this paper and the Workers Party will give major attention to the need for a Labor Party in this city and by 1928, when the presidential campaign begins, the workers and farmers of the U. S. will be in a position to form a National Labor Party capable of conducting a national fight against big business government and for a Workers' and Farmers' government.

Free Education in Free America

By NORMAN SILBER.

This country is free and offers equal opportunity to all. The boast of free Americans is the universal public school system. The country has attained its wonderful ideals because of its public schools which offer an opportunity of education to all, and reach the most remote rural communities—to a certain extent.

My faithful service to my master led me through one of these remote rural communities and afforded me the privilege of observing the operation of one of these wonderful public schools, supported by tax money extorted from poor farmers. This school is by no means unique, and there are many more around it in the same category.

A Carolina School.

By the roadside in a sparsely settled river section of South Carolina stands a small unpainted shack. There are no windows nor is there a chimney. Two window-sized openings covered with wooden shutters to be nailed closed, no light penetrates from that source.

There is ample ventilation through the cracks in the roof and walls, and when the door is open, sufficient light enters to show the ramshackly circus-style benches, with no backs, made of undressed and unpainted slats. I passed this shack many times without taking any undue notice of it, having mistaken it for a barn or a church.

Around a Fire.

One bitter cold and windy day I passed this shack again and noticed a flock of Negro children huddled around an open fire in the front yard, endeavoring with difficulty to keep the fire burning. Immediately realizing that this was a public school session, my interest was aroused and I stopped to investigate.

The school had an enrollment of 32 pupils and pretended to teach from the first grade to the ninth (the second year of high school). One terribly starved looking elderly man, blind on one eye and dressed in shabby ragged clothing constituted the teaching staff. By way of equipment the whole school possessed two second grade readers, a wooden blackboard (no chalk) and a blackboard eraser.

There was not a single pencil, no paper and no other equipment in the whole school—not even a hihc. The worst part lies in the fact that there is a compulsory attendance law in South Carolina which requires every child under 14 years of age in that district to attend that school.

Paid Officials.

Yet this same county employed a superintendent of education and an assistant superintendent of education. The chief duty of the latter official was to visit each school in the county once a year and to submit a written report of the visit.

Ten to One.

Each school district in the South must have two schools—one for whites and one for Negroes. The money for education is divided on the basis of ten to one ratio. For every dollar spent on a white child in public school they should spend ten cents on a Negro child. More often they spend even less on the Negroes. Of course the Negro bears his full burden of the taxes. Indirectly he pays "the Lord knows how much," but directly he pays more than his share.

Senator In Bad.

A state senator of South Carolina wanted to make himself popular by introducing a bill in the state legislature which would separate white school tax money and use it on white schools, and operate the colored schools on the school taxes collected from Negroes. The proposed bill killed the political career of the senator. It was calculated that some white schools would not have sufficient funds to operate three days a year under such an arrangement.

Opportunities for free education are wonderfully equally distributed in the South.

THE UNION OR NOTHING

Slogan of the Passaic Strikers After One Year of Struggle

By JOHN J. RALLAM
Secretary National Textile Workers' Progressive Committee.

THE Passaic Textile Workers have not only established a record for militancy and determination, but also for endurance. The anniversary of the Passaic strike which began January 25, 1926, finds the workers rejecting the Forstmann-Hoffman letter over the heads of Mr. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers, and Mr. Starr, vice-president. The letter from the Forstmann-Huffmann Co. speaks for itself. It was presented to a mass meeting of 1,500 Forstmann-Huffmann strikers at Belmont Hall, Garfield, N. J., January 20th. The rejected letter follows:

Forstmann & Huffmann Company.

Passaic, N. J., Jan. 17, 1927.

Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Kernan,
Honorable W. Carrington Cabell,
Passaic, New Jersey.

Gentlemen: I am in receipt of your letter of the 14th inst., and while the general labor policy of the Forstmann & Huffmann Company has already been explained in my previous letters and public statements, I am very glad to add a few words on the points you raise:

1. This company has not objected in the past, nor does it object now, to the membership of employes in legitimate outside organizations, whether religious, social or otherwise.

2. As soon as business conditions will permit us to re-employ still more of our former workers than we have already done so far, the company will insist, its employes according to their individual fitness, without discrimination on account of membership in legitimate outside unions.

I trust the above statement will answer your purposes.

Yours sincerely,
JULIUS FORSTMANN.

Mr. McMahon, after stating that he never would have called the strike of Forstmann-Huffmann workers because they did not get wages at the same time as Botany did, was interrupted by a Polish striker in the audience, who declared, "The strike today against Forstmann-Hoffmann is the principles. We are fighting against Forstmann - Hoffmann's company union and to compel Mr. Forstmann and Mr. Reinholdt to recognize the U. T. W."

Ellen Dawson, financial secretary of Local 1603, U. T. W., of Passaic, presented a motion that the Forstmann-Huffmann letter be accepted as a basis for further negotiations and that Mr. McMahon be instructed to carry on further negotiations with the Forstmann & Huffmann Co. for the recognition of the union. When the motion was put, it was carried unanimously by the 1,500 strikers, and the proposition to go back to Forstmann-Huffmann on the basis of the letter didn't receive one vote.

This is the spirit of Passaic after twelve months of struggle. These strikers look to the labor movement for continued support. If this is forthcoming, they will break the resistence of Forstmann-Huffmann and compel them, together with the Gera mill, New Jersey Spinning and United Piece Dye Works Co., to yield upon the same terms as the Botany, Passaic Worsted, Dundee and Garfield mills have done.

Local unions should answer the appeal of Passaic and make a substantial contribution to the relief funds as a birthday present for the heroic textile workers. In passing this contribution, organized labor must realize that the textile workers in Passaic are fighting the light of the whole labor movement against the common enemy and against company unionism and the open shoppers who are attempting to destroy every trade union in America.

For one year the Passaic strikers have held the fort against the onslaughts of the enemies of organized labor. They have broken the backbone of the resistence of the mill owners. They have already compelled the old industrial autocrat, Mr. Julius Forstmann, to receive their power. Victory is within their grasp and January 25, 1927, finds the heroic textile workers of Passaic as uncompromising in the struggle and as determined to win as they were on January 25, 1926, one year ago today.

French Ambassador To Moscow Publicly Pays Tribute to Krassin

MOSCOW.—The following letter of J. Herbette, French Ambassador in the USSR has appeared in Soviet newspapers:

"The death of Mr. Krassin has caused feelings of deep sorrow amongst those who knew him more closely. When I was informed of his death it seemed to me that I have lost a personal friend, although I knew him only since his arrival to Paris in capacity of the first Soviet Ambassador in France. But from my first conversation with Krassin I saw his constructive mind, passion for work and sincerity which made him so attractive to everybody. After that we met very often and each time our friendly relations grew stronger and stronger. Before his last departure from Moscow, in spite of serious illness, he still spoke with me as a man who thought only of his country and work. He was thinking then of his task in England and wanted to undertake it as soon as possible. Then he got ill and his recovery was a long one.

"In the history of the revolution Mr. Krassin will occupy the place of an author and organizer of the monopoly of foreign trade. Each time we spoke about the monopoly of foreign trade, it could be seen that he considers it as his personal work, which he undertook with the approval of Lenin and entrusted with unflinching persistance. 'How could we retain results of our monetary reform,' said he, 'if we would not have monopoly of foreign trade.'

"Mr. Krassin knew that he has done his work and fulfilled his duty, as the conscience of a workman who has honestly finished his day of labor. This feeling of satisfaction, when one's duty has been fulfilled, is the best and most important thing that can be desired, because labor is the beginning of every joy and measure of every dignity."

CHAPTER XVIII

THE FLIGHT.

This summer of 1923 was a pleasant one for Bunny. To be one of the editors of a little paper, and be able to say what you thought, and print it week by week and distribute it, with no Dean Squirge to take it away from you, and no police or patriots to raid your office! To mail it to everybody you knew, and flatter yourself with the idea that they were reading it, and being cured of their prejudices! Bunny had put all his former classmates on the mailing list of "The Young Student," and in the fall the "Upsala" were going to sell it on the college campuses, and maybe trouble would begin then, and they would get some advertising free!

Dad was slowly picking up. He read the little paper every week, a sort of loving censorship. But it wasn't needed, because Rachel, orthodox Socialist party member, was wasting no space on the left wingers. When these extremists got hold of Bunny and cajoled him into thinking that both sides ought to have a hearing, Rachel would say, what was the matter with their getting out a paper of their own? So to keep Bunny, being "hosed" as usual—and by a woman! It was almost as bad as being married!

Another source of relief—Vee was not quarreling with him so much. She had been so shocked by his mad proposal to go off and get himself killed in heavy industry, that she was glad to compromise and take half his time, and let Rachel and "The Young Student" have the other half. Vee was working hard on her new picture, "The Couch of Couch," telling about an American darling of luxury who fell into the tolls of a fake prince from some Balkan country. To play the part they had got a real Roumanian prince, who had most charming manners, and was willing to devote himself to Vee at all times when Bunny was busy with his Socialist Jewess.

Also they were getting agreeable letters from Bertie, who had been transferred to heaven. Such a brilliant world, with such important things going on! She had lunched with the Prince de This, and dined with the Duchesse de That. Why wouldn't Dad and Bunny come over and visit them—Bunny might make a really brilliant marriage. Dad chuckled; the idea of him going to Paree and trying to polly voo Francy!

The blackmailers were busy, of course; but since his illness Dad had left all that trouble to Verne. Congress was on vacation, which meant a partial respite, the sensational reds might denounce the oil leases in their home states, but the papers no longer had to print what they said. A curious superstition, that when things were said in Congress, even the most respectable newspapers found it necessary to mention them. Such things brought politics into disrepute with business men.

The drilling of the Sunnyside tract was under way. A dozen wells were flowing, and justifying all that had been expected of them. Sometimes Dad was driven to the office, but most of the time the bright young executives would come out to his home, and sit in the den and get their orders. Such clean-cut efficient young men, with all their faculties concentrated upon getting oil out of the ground! No visions tormenting them, no strains of music haunting them, no hesitations, no uncertainties, never a doubt that to get oil out of the ground was the purpose of man's life! So they kept their wits about them, and mastered their departments, and increased their prestige and their salaries; and when any one of them had taken his departure, there was an unuttered sadness between Dad and his son. Why couldn't Bunny have been like young Simmons, or young Heimann, or young Bolling?

The doctor had said that Dad must not think about business more than two hours a day; so Bunny would tempt him for a stroll, a very slow one, and perhaps they would hear a sermon of Elli's as they walked along the street, and that never failed to divert Dad's attention and set him to chuckling. He took a kind of malicious delight in watching the cheap sweep of the Thief Revelation, by proving that the masses were boobs, you made it all right to take their naval reserves! Dad subscribed to a little paper item by item, one of the rival religious showmen of the town, full of denunciations of Elli and exposures of his trickery.

The regular churches were jealous of this new Revelation, which had burst so rudely upon them. Eli was an upstart and a mountebank, and Tom Peober, the clerical rival, declared that he faked a lot of his alleged cures, he hired people to stand up and tellthem their crippled limbs had healed and their cancers had disappeared! Also, Elli's folk never had any keen willing to give up their customs of rolling and talking in tongues, and Elli had had to build for them a number of sound-proof rooms in the Tabernacle, where these rites were carried on. "Tarrying rooms," they were called, because you went there to "tarry with Jesus"; and when things got going, you would see a hundred men and women rolling on the floor, pawing one another, tearing off their clothing; you would see a woman jerking her head back, or leaping several feet at a time here and there, exactly like a chicken with its head cut off. The orgies would end with a mass of human creatures piled into a heap, writhing and writhing, amid a smell of sweat that would make you ill.

The Reverend Peober would print such things, and send reporters to sell the paper in front of the Tabernacle; the newsboys would be fallen upon and beaten, and the police would fail to arrest the assailants, or having arrested them, would turn them loose. Were the politicians of Angel City afraid of the power of this stuff, I prophet? Tom Peober would ask in large capital letters, and Dad would chuckle—in the mood of that Western pioneer who came home and found his wife in a hand-to-hand conflict with a bear, and read his gun upon the scene and took a seat and called out, "Go it, woman! Go it, bear!"

DRIVE ON FORTY-FOUR LEGISLATURES TO SAVE CHILDREN THRU BETTER CHILD LABOR LAWS; COMMITTEE ANNOUNCES FEW STATES HAVE THEM

(By the Federated Press.)

A drive to be conducted in the state legislatures is announced by the National Child Labor Committee. The committee is not giving up the campaign for a national child labor amendment but it sees that some important reforms can be gained in the meantime by the passage of strong prohibitive legislation within the boundaries of the respective commonwealths. The drive will hit 44 states whose legislatures are in session this winter.

Telling of the value of the child labor days of January 29, 30 and 31 the committee emphasizes the seriousness of the problem:

"The startling truth is that child labor is increasing," it declares. "According to the 1925-6 report of the federal children's bureau of the U. S. department of labor, the number of children between 14 and 16 years legally at work increased during the last year in 34 out of the 39 cities and in 8 out of the 13 states, submitting statistics. This does not include the large number of children, many under 14 years, employed in occupations for which work permits are not required, nor the number working illegally.

Minimum Requirements.

"Child labor involves more than the mere question of the age at which a child should enter employment. A satisfactory child labor law must meet certain minimum standards, and these include the prohibition of (1) any gainful employment for children under 14, (2) night work for children under 16, (3) a working day longer than 8 hours for children under 18, (4) the employment of children in physically and morally dangerous occupations.

"Few states now meet these standards. In 15 states the law carries an exception upon which makes it possible for children under 14 to work in factories or canneries. In 12 states it is not unlawful to work children under 16 from 9 to 11 hours a day. In only 17 states is the night regulation adequate. In 28 states there are no laws prohibiting children of 14 from working around explosives. In 32 states it is not unlawful to employ children at 16 to run elevators. In 17 states there are no laws prohibiting children from 14 to 16 years from oiling, cleaning and cleaning machinery unless."

OPHY SPEAKS FOR FIGHTING PROGRAM

British Urging New Terms on Cantonese

May Be Result of Isolation or New Dodge to Court Popular Opinion for War

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The British government through Charge de Affaires L. S. T. O'Malley, stationed in Peking, has made definite proposals to the Cantonese government, which are said to be of a nature to warrant a belief that they will form the basis of negotiations between the Cantonese government and Great Britain according to an official announcement made here today.

No inkling of the character of the proposals was given out but it was stated that O'Malley was in touch with Cantonese officials at Hankow. Either the government gave out this statement to draw public attention from the war preparations and to allay public alarm or else the refusal of the other powers to accede to Britain's request for joint action compelled the government to make concessions.

Jockeying For Position.

It is also possible that Britain is seeking to jockey itself into a more favorable position with public opinion and create the impression that it is resorting to every expedient to avert war in the hope that it can throw the onus of hostilities on the Cantonese and go to the country for popular sanction with the story that it is waging a defensive war, an excuse that proved serviceable in 1914.

The conduct of the Japanese in refusing the British request for cooperation has not aroused as much anger in government circles as the action of the United States. Japan has been known to be hostile to Britain since the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was ditched at the Washington Arms Conference in 1922, but in world politics. Britain now feels that her diplomats purchased a cat in the bag.

Chang On The Market.

There are reports current here that the attempt of the British to purchase Chang-Tso-Lin, who is said to have been bounced off the Japanese payroll, has failed, Chang's son, having made a declaration that the northern forces were willing to make a united front with the Cantonese to drive out the imperialists. It is believed that Chang was talking through his hat and that Japan was turning the crank of the graphaphone.

The British cabinet met today to hear a lengthy report on the Chinese situation by Austen Chamberlain. It is understood that the refusal of the United States to take joint action in China was given serious consideration.

Hindoos Oppose Sending Troops.

The radicals in the Indian Assembly introduced a motion over the protest of the government protesting against the government's assent to Britain's dispatch of Indian troops to China. The governor general then disallowed the motion on the ground that it was "detrimental to the public interest." Thus the British representative in India gave further proof of the futility of the Indian parliament.

The Indian newspaper Forward protests against sending troops to make war on the Chinese "thus making India the unwilling instrument for perpetuating the slavery of China" branding the troops "assassins hired to perpetuate greed."

British Official Replies.

The British Empire Broadcasting Company, a government monopoly, tonight put on the air a speech by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lester, president of the Board of Trade, in which Sir Philip attacked Eugene Chen, the Cantonese Foreign Minister, for his attack on British imperialism.

The speaker repeated the protestations made by the British government in the early days of the late world war that "the British empire does not seek to extend its borders by one single inch in any quarter of the world." Sir Philip declared there was nothing imperialistic or aggressive in the tory government's policy. Britain had no other aim in China than to help the Chinese and protect British subjects. Unfortunately for Sir Philip and his empire the Chinese can point to the graves of their dead, killed by British bullets for proof to the contrary.

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

IT is not safe to commit murder in this country unless you are a clergyman or a millionaire and a clergyman has a better chance of dodging the noose in the southern states than even a millionaire. The Rev. Nevin, who shot a wealthy backslider dead, because he insisted on having an argument with the preacher was acquitted by a hundred per-cent American Texas jury of the same moral type that found the young teacher Scopes guilty because he believed in evolution. This shows how the scalps of several professions in its wigwam but of none is a promise than of the prediction that Harris would walk out of court a free man to go on as a nationwide issue for Aimee and his bank account.

WITH the Rev. Norris coming from the south and Aimee McPherson coming from the west the devil had Aimee was from a reader in Denver, Colorado, who sent us a picture of Aimee "laying hands" on the sick. Our correspondent who is a skeptical person was of the opinion that Aimee's hands were too close to her patients' pockets for financial safety.

THE Robinson resolution expressing the sense of the senate in favor of the arbitration of the differences between the United States and Mexico was passed too unanimously. Every senator voted for it. But it does not amount to much, since it is not binding on the president who can do just as he pleases in the situation. The G. O. P. strategy towards the resolution was to speak against Mexico and the land and mineral laws, stress the need for protecting American lives and then votes for the resolution. They are for arbitration in principle but—United States marines and soldiers continue to travel towards the Mexican border.

SENATOR Heflin of Alabama continues to do the right thing by his anti-catholic constituency by stepping on the pope's coattail. Heflin states the truth when he says that the Knights of Columbus are financing the guerrilla revolts against the Mexican government. Yet senators of both parties, catholic as well as protestant, pounce upon the hardy southerner and scorch him with fiery scorn. Heflin feigns astonishment. Is the catholic church so sacred in America that it cannot be taken to task for its actions in the United States senate? he asks.

It is. There is nothing sacred unless it has power. The catholic church was no more sacred in this country, before it developed its political machine to its present stage than a toot-full of Holy Rollers. The daily press was not closed to attacks on it. But today, while editors take sarcastic flings at the antics of the Ku Klux Klan, there is hardly a capitalist daily in the United States, particularly in the industrial sections of the states that dares express even a slight rebuke to this mighty political power. Senator Heflin should know that is the reason why the catholic church has so many defenders in the senate.

WHEELER FLAYS CAL'S POLICY IN NICARAGUA

Charges President Is Misinforming Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. — Demanding the withdrawal of American marines from Nicaragua, Senator Wheeler (D) of Montana, this afternoon charged President Coolidge with sending a "positively misleading" message to congress on the Latin-American situation, and the state department with fostering such a rule in Central America as to cause the American people to "hang their heads in shame."

Should Reverse Policy.

The duty of the senate, Wheeler declared, is "to reverse the administration's policy in Latin America, restore the United States to a post of honor in the western hemisphere and save her foreign trade from ruin."

The state department, he charged, has robbed Nicaragua of all its sovereignty, enslaved its people and practiced such a rule of "brazen tyranny, as to shame even George, the Third, of revolution memory."

Wheeler declared Sacasa, the liberal leader, was the constitutional President of Nicaragua and should be upheld by the United States. He pro-

American Oil Companies Try Economic Pressure On Calles Government

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, Jan. 26. —The great oil companies affected by the application of the land laws in regard to registration of leasing and payment of taxes have engaged in a conspiracy to curtail operations and thus interfere with the government finances at a period when clerical rebellion is threatened and partially under way.

Approximately one sixth of the government's annual income of $300,000,000 is received directly from petroleum taxes.

British Workers Urge Trade Unions Act on Threatened War on China

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The National Council of the Independent Labor party declared against a war with China. The council urged the British Trade Union Congress to urge its membership to take "industrial action if necessary" to prevent war with China.

The Independent Labor party is usually long on manifestoes, but short on action. The British Communist Party has carried on a persistent agitation for the organization of "Hands Off China" committees for months back.

Fascisti Squabble With Y. M. C. A. Over Symbols on Banners

ROME, Jan. 26.—The American Y. M. C. A. and its work in Italy was attacked today by the newspaper Tevere.

"If Catholic boy scouts must put the fascist emblem on their banners, justice demands that the American Y. M. C. A. shall adopt the fascist emblem in Italy," said this newspaper.

The newspaper declares that foreign organizations, such as the Y. M. C. A., with unlimited funds constitute a "dangerous menace" to the fascist educational institutions. Since they are based on different religious ideals they are highly undesirable, the newspaper adds.

North Carolina Court Rules Lash Legal

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 26.—North Carolina's law permitting the whipping of convicts by county officials was held constitutional by the supreme court today.

The opinion was rendered in the appeal of L. E. Revis, Buncombe county convict guard, against the sentence imposed on him by the lower court for the flogging of a young convict.

U. S. GOVERNMENT TO STAY NEUTRAL IN CHINA CRISIS

State Department Will Restate U. S. Policy

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The United States will continue its neutral stand in the Chinese civil war, it was strongly emphasized at the state department today. But notwithstanding this attitude the government is intensely interested in the movement of two great Chinese armies near Hankchow, where a battle on a stupendous scale that will seal the fate of Shanghai is momentarily expected between northern troops under Chang Tso-Lin and Cantonese forces under Chang-Kai-Shek.

A re-statement of the American government's policy in the whole Chinese problem will be made tomorrow by the state department. It is understood it will reaffirm the traditional friendship this government has for the Chinese people, and express sympathy for the Chinese in their nationalist aspirations.

Evidence that the United States has no immediate plan for increasing its naval force in Chinese waters was seen today in the order to the U. S. S. Huron, armored cruiser which had been held at Guam in event of an emergency in China, to sail at once for Puget Sound navy yard, where it will be recommissioned.

The situation at Shanghai, principal foreign port in China, was officially described by the state department today as being "very delicate."

Secretary of State Kellogg declined to say what instructions have been forwarded to Admiral C. S. Williams, commandant of the American naval forces there, in the event of an attack on Shanghai by Cantonese nationalist forces. It is assumed, however, that Williams will either land troops enough to protect American lives and property or evacuate those Americans who wish to leave.

Condemns Lewis For Loss of Membership

Calls Present Administration to Account for Disorganization of Whole Districts

By C. O. DAUGHERTY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 26.—President John Brophy of District Two, leader of the "Save the Union" forces, met in head-on collision with the Lewis machine in the United Mine Workers' convention this morning over the policies of Emperor Lewis in the past three years and his failure to organize the non-union miners of West Virginia.

Vice President Philip Murray, President Percy Tetlow of Northern West Virginia, Van Bittner, International representative in Southern West Virginia, and George Bassett of District Two, rushed to Lewis' defense.

The first open break in the convention came when Brophy took the platform to call upon delegates to adopt a fighting policy to save the union from impending disaster. He was defending a set of militant resolutions which had been denatured by President P. T. Fagan, of District 5, Western Pennsylvania and chairman of the resolutions committee.

Fagan recommended referring the resolution to the same International Executive Board which has lost West Virginia and imperiled the union in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Brophy analyzed Lewis' policies in deserting the 100,000 coke workers of Pennsylvania after the 1922 strike. This was the beginning of a policy which has caused non-union miners to lose faith in the earnestness or the ability of the mine workers' officialdom in fighting the non-union operators, he said. Signing contracts with operators for some union mines, while allowing them to operat non-union miners in adjacent districts was also denounced by the progressive leader.

Life Or Death For Union.

"This is a matter of life or death," he asserted in a stinging speech which brought tumultous applause from the delegates. "Unless we can formulate a major policy which will draw the 200,000 non-union miners of Pennsylvania and West Virginia into the union, I look upon the future with the deepest concern. Secretary Kennedy's report shows a loss of 19,000 members in the past six months despite the unusually favorable conditions in the industry since September. If we strike in the spring, we must have definite assurance that the non-union men who come out with us will not see a repetition of the disastrous experience of 1922 when 100,000 were not included in the settlement."

Murray Rushes In.

Vice-president Murray waved Fagan aside and took the platform, declaring the union was never stronger in its history. He condemned Brophy for presenting a truthful picture of the union's plight in a convention "where newspaper men are present."

Emperor Lewis' pinch hitter dragged in Communism, violence and revolution, charging that "New Yorkers and Chicagoans" were responsible for whatever troubles the union faced. Brushing aside Brophy's contention that the International's policy in the past three years had endangered Pennsylvania, causing loses of 100,000 members there, Murray placed the full burden of union losses in District two on Brophy's shoulders.

10,000 PASSAIC STRIKERS CHEER ONE YEAR FIGHT

Enthusiasm Over Brave Struggle

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 26—Over ten thousand textile workers and strikers packed two halls to capacity last night to celebrate the first anniversary of the biggest textile strike this city has ever had.

The same program was given at both the Belmont Park Hall in Garfield, and the Ukrainian Hall, in Passaic, and included speeches by strike leaders and friends from near-by cities, with musical numbers by local and New York talent.

Ellen Dawson, financial secretary of Local 1603, U. T. W., presided at the Belmont Park meeting, with Thomas DeFazio, Italian organizer, in charge at Ukrainian Hall.

Tells Strike Beginnings.

Gustave Denk, president of Local 1603, reminded the meetings of how the strike began in Botany with the demand for the return of the wage cut and of the summary dismissal of the committee presenting the demand. He told how the workers loyally followed the leadership of the United Front Committee and had the big mill completely tied up by the following day. He referred to the race prejudices, which he said the bosses had fostered among the workers, and of the wiping out of these prejudices during the white heat of "a crusade for better conditions". He praised the splended solidarity of the workers which had made possible the four settlements so far achieved. He referred to "those few who had lost courage and gone back to work, only to find themselves in disgrace when the union finally forced the mills to settle."

"Reds Not Wanted in Indiana"

Farmer-Labor Unity Necessary Declares State Mill Agent

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

CHICAGO, (FP).—"Anyone who tries to divide the farmer and the city worker is either consciously or unconsciously the enemy of both," declares F. D. Freeman, field representative of the state-owned flour mill of North Dakota.

Freeman is telling union audiences in Chicago of how the farmer legislatures of North Dakota passed the best state labor legislation in America, and how in turn the railway brotherhoods and other unions throughout the country supported the state's bond issues to put in operation the state-owned elevators and flour mills.

"REDS Not Welcome In Indiana" is the title of a five-column boxed front page editorial in the special United Mine Workers' convention number of "The Union," official organ of the Indianapolis Central Labor Union.

Taking as its text the refusal of local labor officialdom in South Bend, Indiana, to allow Albert Weisbord to speak in its hall and appeal for relief of the striking Passaic textile workers, "The Union editorial says:

"..... It was learned that five indictments had been brought against Weisbord for terms from 5 to 53 years, charged with violations of the law in connection with the New Jersey trouble. ..... The Central Labor Union of South Bend took the matter in

Record Shows Lewis Packs Miners' Meet

Reactionary Machine Bitterly Attacks Progressives But Offers No Constructive Plan

Special to The Daily Worker.)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 26.—On the basis of his own committee's committee report, President John L. Lewis has packed the International Convention of the United Mine Workers of America with literally hundreds of delegates from "paper" locals and long dead districts.

The progressives will continue to expose these frauds as the convention proceeds, but meanwhile the fake delegates make a responsive chorus of "Yes Men" to Lewis' fulminations against the left wing, against progressive, militant miners and all their works.

The machine has made a bad blunder in permitting the lists of credentials, as reported by the docile credentials committee, to get into the delegates' hands at the same time as the report of Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy, which shows the per capita paid from the districts.

Comparisons of the lists lays bare an almost incredible story of the attempt to stifle the progressives by swamping the convention with hand picked delegates who represent no regular unions. Even when the most liberal allowances are made for exonerated—one does paying—members, the swindle thus revealed is monstrous.

District 31, Northern West Virginia, has almost as many delegates as it has members. District 17, ruled by Capt. Percy Tetlow, an army captain on Lewis' payroll, strong for "law and order" and free in his condemnation of militant struggles in the past, sends 164 delegates, although it has only a few hundred members, and the miners' constitution provides for one delegate for the first five hundred members in a local, or one delegate per local for smaller locals.

Delegate For Three Members.

District 19, Tennessee, has fifty delegates, representing eight locals, most of which are moribund. Each Tennessee delegate represents three or four bonafide dues paying members. The entire state of Tennessee is entitled to only as much representative as a medium sized Pennsylvania mine would send. District 23, Western Kentucky, has more delegates in Indianapolis than it has members back home.

Thirty delegates are listed from District 23, although only four locals there have paid any dues at all in the last six months. In District 30, Eastern Kentucky, not a local has paid dues on any members in the last half year, but eleven delegates are here, representing 14 locals whose existence is entirely imaginary.

$300,000 For Votes.

These packed delegations have been carefully organized by international representatives, of whom there are 100 or more on the Mine Workers payroll, averaging $5,000 a year in salary and expenses. All told, Emperor Lewis has spent half a million dollars on this crew, in the last year. But there is not one man, mine or organised in the entire territory stretching from West Virginia through Kentucky to Tennessee to show for this enormous expenditure.

Mere Graft Coming.

Progressives say that a large part of the millions of organization funds spent in West Virginia were for the purpose of bringing over 150 delegates here from District 31, which has not even one single organized mine, and to maintain parasitic "organizers" there.

The administration plans another huge orgy of waste and graft in West Virginia after the convention closes, and has levied a two dollar assessment on all members to net half a million dollars. Progressives claim that promises of another "big campaign" are given now for the twofold purpose of assuring theward hose followers of Lewis that there will be a reward for them, and of running a bluff before convention delegates that some organizing may be done in the future to palliate the utter failures in the past.

Red Rant Hysteria.

Yesterday Signman, Schachtman, Beckerman and Woll, whose names signify to workers everywhere the extreme in right wing terrorism, and selfish boss-serving at whatever cost to the union, were joined by John L. Lewis in demands for expulsion of progressives.

Echoing his wild shouts for the expulsion of militant minors were his associates in office, Phillip Murray, vice-president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary treasurer.

Virtuous Sluggers.

This reactionary trio, who resorted to a conspiracy to have their agents slug Powers Hapgood in order to keep one more progressive off the floor of the convention, each of them raved in his official report yesterday afternoon about "left wing conspiracies to control the union."

Secretary Kennedy beat the locains of union destruction by declaring there is no place in the miners' union for progressives and left wing forces seeking the regeneration of the union.

Vice-president Murray echoed the determination to "clean house."

Lewis In Action.

President Lewis, in a dry and lengthy report, which even his henchmen could not refrain from sleeping through, pronounced excommunication.

Besides cursing his enemies, Lewis his dazzling policy which has lost to the union West Virginia, Kentucky, sections of Pennsylvania, parts of Ohio, most of Canada, and the entire South. He had no new or concrete program for saving what is left or recovering what has been lost.

A Reason For Accidents.

Murray lashed out in bitter condemnation of the Bureau of Mines for its failure to reduce America's appalling mine disaster record, the highest accident rate in the world. But he said nothing about official failure in the organized districts to enforce union or even state requirements as to safety. Machine officials in solidly organised Illinois regard with complacency the overspeeding of underground trains, the lack of cross braces, the failure to trim walls and roofs of projecting rock, etc. But Murray had nothing to say of this.

Progressives sat through these reports and smiled. They keep their powder dry, and wait for the first big fight, which will be over the question of challenged credentials.

CONDEMNS LEWIS FOR LOSS OF MEMBERSHIP

Not Fair Test.

George Bassett, a delegate from District two, was wheeled in to make a flank attack on Brophy. Bittner and Tetlow closed the debate, although many progressives were clamoring for the floor.

Emperor Lewis calmly shut off debate and ordered the vote. The strong progressive section voted no, but the committee's report was passed because of its indefinite nature.

Five hundred and fifty-six resolutions were showered on the convention this morning. Scores demanded a militant organization policy, criticizing the Lewis policy. Dozens called for alliance of rail and mine workers' labor party, honest election reports, nationalization of mines, endorsement of the Soviet Union and the sending of a miners' delegation to Russia, the six-hour day and the five-day week.

Asks Raise.

On the other hand, another batch called for raising Lewis' salary to $15,000 a year. He new receives a mere $8,000. One resolution suggested $20,000.

Election instead of appointment of international organizers, now the key to Lewis' machine strength, the demand for the promised check-off in the anthracite, condemnation of militarism, the tieing of hard and soft coal agreements together, free speech in the Miners' Journal, Secretary Kennedy's organ, and Vanzetti, investigation of huge union expenditures and alien registration received attention from locals submitting resolutions.

He Who Slapped Bethlen Cites Vorovsky Case

GENEVA, Jan. 26.—The trial of Ivan de Justh, secretary of the Republican party of Hungary, who slapped Premier Count Bethlen in the face last June, in the lobby of the league of nations building, is in process.

M. Moutet, attorney for the defendant, scored Bethlen, for taking this matter to court, and for not liquidating this affair by the duel method.

The defendant testified that he had administered the beating as a protest against the contempt and snobishness of Bethlen, and to discredit him before the world as an unfit leader. The defense counsel asked for acquittal of the charge, on the ground that the prosecution was not sincere in demanding that De Justh be convicted to insure safety for the delegates to the convention. He cited the case of the assassination of Vaslav Vorovsky, Soviet representative at the Lausanne peace conference. The assassinator, Maurice Conradi, was brought before a Swiss court and acquitted.

THUGS HIT WAITER IN PUBLIC; SHOUTS REACTIONARY MOB; HATES PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT

hotel . . . doubted whether Waldheim should not be allowed to speak. . . . There was no meeting of any kind."

Fear on Pupin.

The viewing of the author of the above is worth while. Recently, a little hall was held in South Bend at which Waldheim spoke and a little later the officials of the Central Labor Union, then dominated by themselves for being duped by labor's enemies, gave the Central Labor hall free for a meeting for Passaic relief.

But this is beside the question. What is most interesting in this issue of "The Union" is its outright appeal to the employers for support because of its hostility to the "red menace." It says:

"One thing ought to be clear to employers, that were it not for the conservative labor press, the Red movement in America would be bound to make headway. It is the conservative point of view as reflected in the conservative labor press that makes it very difficult for the Communist movement to advance in America. It is for this reason THE CONSERVATIVE LABOR PRESS IS ENTITLED TO THE SUPPORT OF THE BUSINESS INTERESTS OF THE COUNTRY. (Emphasis mine.)

A Lucky Word.

How extremely fortunate for this inspired writer that someone put the word "conservative" in the English language. Otherwise, unable to express properly his love for things as they are, the full flower of his slavish soul, unrecognised by the bosses, would have blushed unseen in the dark garden of silence. As it is, he can now get off such super-conservatisms as:

"The organized labor movement of America does not desire to take possession of capital nor to run private business. It does desire better working conditions, with SUCH AREA SUGGESTED AND BETTER WAGES WHEN IT IS POSSIBLE TO GET THEM IN A REASONABLE WAY." (Emphasis mine.)

If you are not "reasonable" you are a "red."

The voice of the great god Morgan has spoken to the labor Moses from the golden clouds of the Wall Street Sinai and said:

"The first commandment for thy flock is that it, each and severally, be reasonable.

"Ask and thou shalt receive—perhaps."

Demand, and it is prima facie evidence that thou art unreasonable and therefore a "red."

A labor editor who can justify the closing of a hall for a meeting for strike relief on the ground that the speaker stands in danger of life imprisonment because of his leadership of a strike, certainly has learned well the way to "be reasonable."

"Reds Cause Strikes."

In addition to the editorial quoted there are two more stories on the first page of the special convention edition.

Two of them strike the same note as the editorial and quote the president and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor to prove that the editor "knows his onions."

One of the stories is headed:

"Trade Unions In U. S. Being Purged Of All Radicals, Says Green. Communists Being Expelled From Every Organization Belonging To A. F. of L."

Why are the unions "being purged of all radicals"? The sub-head tells us: "Reds Cause Strikes."

The second news story is headed:

"Matthew Woll, in Phila., speaks kindly of Capital."

Is this not in sweet and kindly contrast to those workers who are inclined to disregard appeals to be "reasonable?" Just listen to the "reasonable" vice-president of the American Federation of Labor as quoted in "The Union," whose motto on its masthead is "The Sword Must Strike The Shackles From The Slave.' But It is Education, Organization and Arbitration That Makes Him a Free Man." Woll said in his Philadelphia speech:

"Labor and Capital thruout the country are becoming more closely united on a cooperative basis. . . . Employers are more interested in their workers' welfare and labor is buying heartily in stock of the corporations which employ it." (Emphasis mine.)

"God's in his heaven and all's right with the world."

The coal barons shut their union mines down for two years, starved 200,000 union miners out of the union fields and now demand a 15 to 20 per cent cut in wages and an agreement providing for enforcement of the speed-up system by the union.

"Labor and capital are becoming more closely united on a cooperative basis."

In the coal fields this "cooperative basis" consists of the coal barons strangling the union fields by stimulation of non-union production and loving labor to such an extent that they are willing to let 200,000 miners and their families starve in order to force submission to their terms.

Friends To Lewis.

"The Union" speaks here in Indianapolis for the powerful group of union officials known as the "Indianapolis clique" and which includes the officialdom of such unions, with headquarters here, as the Teamsters, Carpenters, Printers and United Mine Workers. The leaders of these unions are 75 of the "responsible" men. They are fully in accord with the policy of the Lewis machine at this convention and that policy is to launch an offensive against the "Save the Union" bloc instead of against the coal operators.

Those sections in the table which have fought against the starving of 200,000 miners out of the union, the members who demand nationalization of the mining industry, complete organization of the non-union fields, abolition of the coal operators' influence in the union, honest elections and a labor party based on the trade unions are to be denounced as enemies of American institutions, "agents of Moscow," disrupters of trade unionism and as menaces to the family, the home and society.

A "Reasonable" Machine.

Here in the stronghold of klandom and labor officialdom, the Lewis machine, if it does not trip in the thousands of yards of red, white and blue bunting with which Tomlinson hall is draped, or strangle itself with one or more of the four dozen American flags which hang from every projection, expects to prove with the assistance of the capitalist press that it is the most "reasonable" of all American labor leadership.

Fake Delegates Wanted.

But several hundred delegates, who have been fighting the coal operators for three years without any help from the Lewis machine, want to know what has become of the 200,000 vanished union members—and a number of other things.

There is such a thing as being too "reasonable" even tho one has packed a convention with machine delegates by methods so shameless that hardened henchmen would rather talk about something else.

"Reds are not wanted in Indiana" by the bosses but the "reasonable" reactionary officials will create a demand among the workers of Indiana for more red and less reaction in the policy of the labor movement.

Railway Clerks Local Condemns Imperialism As Wall Street Policy

RICHMOND Va.—A red hot resolution demanding the withdrawal of American armed forces from Nicaragua, where they are sent by "the Coolidge administration, acting in accord with the wishes of Wall Street" to aid the Diaz tyranny against "the duly elected head of Nicaragua, the late President," has been adopted by the Old Dominion Lodge, 91, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes.

The resolution also says, in part:

"Whereas, The constitutional government of Nicaragua is supported by the Nicaragua Federation of Labor, and

"Whereas, At the same time the American Government, in support of these same Wall Street interests, is threatening and increased wages, the shorter workday, better conditions, the abolition of child labor, equal pay for men and women, and other concessions, that would make for a little better life for the working class.

The Coolidge government in Washington, in its attitude toward Mexico, however, is as arrogant and iron fisted as the Gary tyranny in the steel industry, or the Rockefeller kaiserdom in the oil industry that declares, "There is nothing to arbitrate!" Coolidge claims that "the abrogation of American property rights in Mexico without compensation is not a matter to be arbitrated." The words are almost identical.

In the "peace" days before the world war, there was a school of socialists in this country, with Fred D. Warren, editor of the Appeal to Reason of Girard, Kansas, as one of its chief spokesmen, that declared the way to end capitalism was to buy it out. "Imperialism," speaking thru its government at Washington, seems perfectly willing to be bought out in Mexico, but at its own price. Since this "price" is backed by the "forces" of the United States army, navy and air fleet, it may be taken for granted that the price demanded will be far beyond anything the Mexicans feel they can or ought to pay.

There is a growing feeling in Mexico that there is no reason why anything should be paid to the alien exploiters in the United States. If the wealth in natural resources wasstolen by the agents of foreign capital, especially under the reign of native tyrants who joined with foreign greed in the plunder of the workers and farmers, then it is argued by the Mexican masses, daily growing more conscious of their own power, that they ought to recover their loot and that now is a good time to do it. They see no necessity for any compensation. They get nothing for the nation's natural resources, the land, the oil, the mines, when they were taken from them. They give nothing when they take it back again. That attitude constitutes the nightmare that disturbs Washington and Wall Street.

If Mexico sought to compensate alien greed, at its own price, for "property" to be taken back by the people, then the Mexican masses did not be shouldered with a burdensome debt on which they would be paying interest to foreign capital down thru interminable years. Mexico today is poor. The standard of living is not high. Mexico cannot pay. The debt would be inevitable. The only way out is to take. That was the way of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia; that was that succeeds. Mexico must go the same way, finally, not because of Russia inspiration, or imitation, but because there is no other way in the struggle for liberation from capitalist rule.

The Mexican masses, in their effort to get back what belongs to them, must have the support of all American workers and farmers. If Mexico were forced to pay, that would merely strengthen Wall Street, making it more powerful in its depredations against the workers and farmers at home.

The senate has voted for arbitration. Capitalism's attitude toward arbitration is to use it to keep labor in continued submission. Labor's reply can only be to arbitrate capitalism out of existance.

Capitalist Arbitration No Solution of Problem Facing Mexican Masses

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE Senate has voted unanimously for settling the controversy between the United States and Mexico by arbitration. But the dealings of the Washington Government with Mexico, as well as with Nicaragua and China, are decided behind the closed doors of the White House and the State Department, the secret method of "dollar diplomacy" that looks upon Congress as an incumbrance that must be tolerated.

Yet the gesture is not to be overlooked as being entirely futile. It indicates that at least one branch of the government harbors the notion that Mexico has some rights. The arbitration game, however, as it is played by American employers and by "dollar diplomats" is just another shell game, with Uncle Shylock manipulating the shells and the mysterious peas and, of consequently, raking in the coin.

Indications are that the Calles government is willing to seize upon arbitration as a method of settling its dispute with the American plutocracy. The New York Evening Post admits that, "Upon our differences with Mexico arbitration is asked by various important organizations of our people."

But President Coolidge has let it be known that he is opposed to arbitration. And in this he speaks the mind of the profit takers, better than they can state the case themselves.

Arbitration is welcome to the great employers when he is sure that the arbitrators can be fixed beforehand. Evidently the Mexicans are in favor of the kind of arbitration that makes sure that the results will be in their favor. That is as it should be. In Mexican courts, established by the republic, should be fitting tribunals for settling the differences with foreign capital.

Such tribunals, however, will never become the real instruments of the masses, until they constitute the proletarian courts of a Workers' Republic. This, of course, raises the fact that there can be no arbitration of the issues between the Mexican people and its foreign and native oppressors. One or the other must triumph.

On behalf of the master class for whom it rules, the Washington government declares the Mexican oil and land laws are confiscatory. That sounds like an echo of the complaint immediately workers demand increased wages, the shorter workday, better conditions, the abolition of child labor, equal pay for men and women, and other concessions, that would make for a little better life for the working class.

The Coolidge government in Washington, in its attitude toward Mexico, however, is as arrogant and iron fisted as the Gary tyranny in the steel industry, or the Rockefeller kaiserdom in the oil industry that declares, "There is nothing to arbitrate!" Coolidge claims that "the abrogation of American property rights in Mexico without compensation is not a matter to be arbitrated." The words are almost identical.

MEN, NOT MUD, "CLEANED-UP"

Main street, Borger, Texas (lower photo), defied efforts of Texas Rangers to "clean up" the town entirely, the mud being six to twelve inches deep. But more thorough results were obtained in sweeping men into jail, as the upper photo shows.

BORGER, Texas.—Texas rangers can't stagger mud. But a worker will an idea is too much for them. Recen trains have left this town with a coating of mud in the streets from six to twelve inches deep. Instead of devot their attentions to that, the rangers the police of the barons, have concentrated their efforts on leaving th town minus anyone who wanted to or ganize the workers in the Texas Pan handle oil district.

At first the jail building was used to store the rangers' prisoners in, but as that was only a flimsy wooden shack, a heavy trace chain was fixed to the cells of the houses, and the prisoners locked to this. But later, efficacy admitted, it was cheaper to give the prisoners a free ride to Amarillo, the next town, where they are put on trains for other destinations than to keep them in jail and feed them.

BRITISH URGE NEW TERMS ON THE CANTONESE

May Be the Result of Isolation

TOKIO, Jan. 26.—The British ambassador continues to press the foreign office for support of British policy in China. Ambassador Tilley brings forward the decision of Washington to follow an independent course as a reason why Tokio should reconsider its attitude. Japan, on the contrary, thinks this an added reason why it should not come in for a share of Chinese odium that is now almost entirely shouldered by the British. Japan has had a taste of Chinese hate and it was bitter on the tongue.

Australian Workers Protest.

SYDNEY, N. S. W. Jan. 26.—The Australian Workers Union, in annual convention, passed a resolution declaring that:

"This union representing 100,000 organised workers views with alarm the happenings in China and demands that the Federal Government should not embroil Australians in imperialistic warfare in defense of capitalistic concessions.

"Secondly, in the event of any attempt to organize Australian contingents or to dispatch Australian warships, this convention instructs the federal council immediately to organize a non-intervention campaign".

Exaggerated Reports.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 26. The alarming reports of hostility being published in foreign newspapers and republished here do not give a correct picture of the situation. Slight disturbances are exaggerated. Strikes against greedy employers are numerous but they are directed against Chinese-owned factories as well as against those owned by British and Japanese.

The first contingent of British troops from Hong-kong which is expected to arrive momentarily is calculated to influence the negotiations now taking place in Hankow between British and Cantonese officials. The display of force was apparently interpreted in this light by Eugo Chen, Cantonese Foreign Minister who issued a strongly worded statement declaring that the Nationalist Government would not be awed by a display of force.

Do Not Trust Sikhs.

The Indian contingents ordered to China are said to be an ill-advised one as the British have less faith in the loyalty of the Indians. The new reinforcements are also calculated to offset the strikes employed as local police who are failing under the influence of the anti-imperialist propaganda circulated by Kuomintang leaders. The Sikhs intend to play on their religious differences.

Refusal of the Indian parliament to authorize the sending of troops to India is hailed with joy by the Chinese nationalists.

Individual Americans residing here have enabled Washington urging a non-aggression policy in China.

The leading British newspapers here is thundering against a surrender to the Chinese and insisting that Tsiado should not be put before honor".

Britian is expected to make a fight for repossession of the British concession in Hankow.

A general advance of the Koumintang army in Kiangsi province towards Hangchow on the seacoast of Chehiang has been ordered.

Persons close to Chang-so-lin, have stated authoritively that he is prepared to unite with the south against the British should the latter attempt to regain the Hankow concession.

British news agencies continue to publish interviews with the Manchurian dictator, in which Chang, hurls propaganda blasts at Moscow and offers himself humbly as the man who is capable of unifying China, suggesting at the same time that he would be able to accomplish this laudable purpose provided he had a little ready money. There are those who believe that Chang is simply talking thru his hat and that Tokio is grinning over its teacups as Chang continues to pose as the savior of civilization.

Worker Correspondent Says We Improve

Editor, DAILY WORKER: The "debunking" campaign of The DAILY WORKER will certainly help the workers to see more clearly their own interests.

The first number is already a very big improvement and the pleasure of buying it at news stands every morning gives us opportunity to read the news the same day—which means a workingclass paper in the heart of Wall Street and imperialist capitalism.

The New Leader and similar yellow papers may keep on throwing mud and lies at Communist party organs—it will not affect us now. Party readers keep on your good work and we the workers will appreciate your youthful labor some day.

FORCES CONTINUE SUPPORT OF DIAZ

Cities Taken by Liberals Declared "Neutral"

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, Jan. 26.—The danger of a clash between United States marines and Liberal troops was pointed out today by Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, head of the liberal government, in a statement to the press.

Dr. Sacasa deplored the situation, but charged that the action of the marines in constantly extending neutral zones had aroused hostility. He declared that the Diaz government at Managua could not stand without American support and disclaimed any anti-American feeling on his own part.

Declaring "Neutral Zones".

"Hostility has been aroused by the action of the United States marines in following the constitutionalists and declaring neutral all the cities wrested from the Diazista army," Dr. Sacasa said.

"Such acts are making Nicaraguans desperate. The situation is bad and is increasing in gravity. Creation of these neutral zones is robbing us of the places captured by us through force of arms."

Will Carry On.

Dr. Sacasa expressed the determination to carry on in spite of all difficulties. He added:

"I am convinced that the Dais government would quickly fall should the American government withdraw its support and resume an attitude of neutrality."

Dr. Sacasa, after denying any anti-Americanism reported to the United States as his "second mother country," continued the liberal chief. "That is where I became imbued with liberalism."

Judge Lindsay Ousted By State Supreme Court

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 26.—Judge Ben B. Lindsey, founder and judge of the juvenile court of Denver, was ousted today through a decision of the state supreme court.

This is a reversal of a previous decision rendered by the Denver district court which had affirmed the electio nof Lindsey over his opponent Royal W. Graham. The whole issue arose out of the election of judges in 1924 which was at that time won by Lindsey.

Opponent Dead.

Graham, backed by the Ku Klux Klan, contested the election returns and demanded a recount. Graham has since died. Klan pressure is declared to be back of the attack on Lindsey. The Klan controls many political posts in the state of Colorado.

Judge Lindsey has been recognised as a liberal jurist. He has been associated with the Denver juvenile court for over twenty-five years. His method of dealing with juvenile delinquents, and his unique tactics in bringing about good results has won for him an international reputation.

Dillon-Reed Draw Up Bill to Simplify Grab Of Foreign Securities

By means of a bill which would open the doors of the New York stock exchange to the common stocks of industrial corporations of every foreign country, Wall Street hopes to further extend its control over the economic life of the rest of the world. The bill, a draft of which has been completed under the expert (and disinterested?) advice of Dillon Reed & Co., will be introduced in the state legislature within the next few days.

The present state laws require that certificates of corporations be made out under definite names. Foreign stocks are not registered in any name, and can only be listed on the stock exchange after a great deal of red tape. The new bill if passed, will permit foreign industrial, railway and public utility corporations to list stocks on the exchange.

American investment in oil, rubber, steel, copper, railroads, and other basic industries, will be made much easier, if the bill is passed.

Spanish Ship Loses Rudder; Kills Crew

GIJON, Spain, Jan. 26.—Fourteen sailors were drowned and five rescued when the steamship Retuerto was thrown on a reef near the village of San Esteban Depravia, during a violent storm.

The steamship lost her rudder and broke in half when she struck the reef. Observers on shore were unable to send relief to those clinging aboard the wreckage for several hours due to the fury of the seas. When it was finally possible to send a life boat out, there were but five of the crew of the ship still alive.

Wounded for Bankers; Can't Borrow of Banks

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Half the banks of the country do not want to make loans on war veterans' adjusted compensation certificates, Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the veterans' bureau, informed congress today.

Hines advocated speedy passage of a loan bill which will enable the veterans' bureau itself to make the loans.

CAUSE 'MEXICAN PERIL' TO LOWER WESTERN WAGES

Bosses Break Pact To Aid Exploitation

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—The yellow peril has taken a back seat on the Pacific coast. The Mexican peril is now placed in the front row.

The lowest estimate of Mexicans living this side of the Rio Grande is 1,100,000, the highest 1,500,000. The number of Mexicans coming to the United States each year was recently estimated by the "Survey of Race Relations" at 100,000 or more.

Texas is said to have a Mexican population of more than 850,000. California next with 250,000, chiefly in the southern part of the state. New Mexico is third with 180,000. Colorado and Arizona each have 60,000.

In spite of vice fees, head tax and the gentlemen's agreement between the labor federations of the two republics to discourage immigration, a veritable flood of Mexicans has been pouring over the border since 1920, the report says.

These people are not here altogether on account of their own choice. They are here as a result of a studied exploitation program of big employers, who are using them as section hands on railroads, in lumber camps, on sugar beet and cotton plantations and on the big construction jobs.

Efforts are now being made to repeal the restrictions and open the flood-gates for more Mexicans on the ground that they alone can solve the unskilled labor "shortage" in the west.

In a recent appeal for more Mexicans, W. H. Kirkbride, Southern Pacific maintainence-of-way engineer, declared the Mexican to be the southwest's answer, "The man of muscle with mind unimpaired with ... and ready to absorb the good things of America," and "possessed of those simple virtues that we so dearly cherish."

VOTES TONIGHT ON RED-BAITING

Secretary Sent Agent To "Picklers"

A meeting of Local 1, International Jewelry Workers Union will be held at Webster Hall, 6 p. m. tonight to act on the report of the delegates sent by its executive board to the so-called "conference for the preservation of trade unions" which was held at Bethoven Hall, on December 21.

Samuel E. Beardsley, secretary-organizer of the local and ally of Morris Sigman, instigator of the December 21 conference had the delegates selected by the executive board with the idea in mind of having them report to that body, and in that manner have the local put on record in favor of red-baiting without the members of the local having a voice in the matter.

Rank and File Object.

Due to pressure from the rank and file members of the union who would not stand for this railroading thru of such an important resolution the question will be put to a vote at tonight's meeting.

Beardsley and his socialist clique are making extensive arrangements to pass the recommendation of the executive board: "That the report be accepted and the action taken by the emergency conference for the preservation of the trade unions be approved."

In a letter that Beardsley has sent out about tonight's meeting he urges anti-Communists to attend.

Wheeler Flays Cal's Policy in Nicaragua

tested against the recognition of Adolpho Diaz.

The president either was "misinformed," "mislead" or else "withheld vital information" about Latin America, which was in his possession, said Wheeler. He enumerated the failure of the president to tell congress that Sacasa had been driven out of Nicaragua by force, that Adolpho Diaz was a revolutionary chieftain and therefore ineligible to the presidency, and that Diaz was a violator of the five-power pact" of the Latin American nations.

"The followers of Doctor Sacasa are today fighting for just those same principles of liberty and free government for which our forefathers fought in 1776," said Wheeler. "Indeed it is not too much to say that one would seek in vain in the history of our struggle for independence for a parallel to the brazen tyranny of our state department in its dealings with the overwhelming majority of the people of Nicaragua. George, III, never dared to perpetrate upon the American colony such fiscal and political atrocities as our state department has perpetrated upon the defenseless people of Nicaragua."

Wheeler discussed the finances of Nicaragua and charged the "state department-banker control" was guilty of "wholesale graft."

Robinson Resolution Before 'Cal'.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—President Coolidge had before him today the fact that the senate unanimously favors arbitrating the land law controversy with Mexico.

The vote on the Robinson resolution, advising the president to peacefully settle the dispute, afforded one of the rare occasions when the senate has solidly been in favor of something.

While there is nothing mandatory in the senate's action, as applied to the Coolidge-Kellogg policy, the unanimity with which the senate acted is expected to be not without effect in determining the future steps in administration policy.

President Coolidge is expected to take cognizance of the senate's action, even though he considers the resolution merely an advisory notice of senate opinion.

Consider Resolution Rebuke.

Some of Mr. Coolidge's advisors believe he should ignore the senate's action, letting his silence constitute a "rebuke" to the senate for encroachment upon the executive's direction of foreign affairs.

Carolina Legislature Considers Prohibition Of Teaching Evolution

The anti-evolution fight broke in the North Carolina legislature today when Rep. D. Scott Poole of Hoke county, introduced his bill to forbid teaching of the evolution theory. The bill was patterned after the Tennessee law which the state supreme court upheld.

JOHN D. PUTS BIG PRICE ON ROADS

Three railroad systems are battling to obtain two railroads controlled by John D. Rockefeller, Sr. The roads are the Wheeling & Lake Erie, top map, and the Western Maryland, lower map. Rockefeller, pictured in inset, is said to have asked more than any of the contending systems is willing to pay. Those reported bidding for control are the Van Sweringens of the huge Nickle Plate merger, the New York Central, and Loener F. Loose, who is creating a fifth Eastern trunk line. According to market quotations, Rockefeller has a paper profit of nearly $8,000,000 above the par value of his stock in Wheeling & Lake Erie alone.

Chicago Mayor Host To Agent of Fascism At Coliseum Speech

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 26.—It is certain that some future ambassador of the Soviet Union would not be permitted to address an audience of workers at Chicago's big coliseum in defense of Communism. But Benito Mussolini's fascist ambassador to the United States, Baron Giacomo Martino, enters the city as the virtual guest of Mayor Dever, is feted at a banquet by prominent city officials and speaks to some 2,000 Chicago fascists at the Coliseum with a guard of black-shirts, singing the praises of the fascist dictatorship.

God Sent Him.

"Bolshevism was threatening Italy. Chaos was imminent. Then God sent to us the great statesman, Benito Mussolini," said the baron as the pettibourgeois Italian audience rose in their seats and attempted to imitate the "Roman salute" of Fascist fame.

Mayor Dever, in view of a coming election in which he will run again, took occasion to fill out his political sails among Italian voters by rosy references to the wonders they have accomplished for Chicago.

Paw Workers.

Italian workers were notably few in the Coliseum audience. In the first place the ambassador is a "baron," in the second place, Chicago Italian workers have on previous occasions demonstrated their extreme dislike of Mussolini's anti-working-class regime. There is no donbt tha baron felt this.

Hoover Deserts to Reaction In Case of Boulder Canyon Bill

WASHINGTON, (FP). — Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce and hitherto a champion of the Swing-Johnson bill for government construction of the dam and power plant at Boulder Canyon on the Colorado River, has gone over to the opposition. He says he has been misunderstood. He does not now favor government construction and ownership of the power plant, and government selling of electricity to cities and private companies. He agrees with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that this job should be handled by private capital.

The city of Los Angeles has been the backbone of the fight for public development of power at Boulder Canyon. It needs more electric current, at the low price which the government would charge. The private electric companies, organized in the General Electric combine, are fighting the bill by every means that propaganda experts can device. Thousands of telegrams are now reaching members of the house, from power inspired sources. The one point they stress is that the power station at Boulder Canyon must be in private hands.

Sinclair Impatient For His Teapot Dome

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. — Advancement of the Teapot Dome oil lease case was requested of the supreme court today by Harry F. Sinclair's Mammoth Oil Company. Undue delay will greatly impair the value of the petroleum reserve, it was said. The property now is under receivership, pending final disposition of the government's suit to cancel the lease.

Pope Seeks Boys' Souls; Mussolini Demands All Papal Scouts Disband

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ROME, Jan. 26.—The pope has created a first class sensation here by his order dissolving the Catholic boy scouts in towns of less than 20,000 in order to forestall a fascist decree which would incorporate the boy scouts in the fascisti national balilla.

The Observatore Romano announcing the Pope's decree was quickly sold out and in some circles the action of the Pope was interpreted as the forerunner of open conflict between the vatican and the fascisti.

The split between the Pope and Mussolini is becoming more and more pronounced. The Pope has decided to serve one god at a time. In a letter addressed to Cardinal Gaspari in the Osservatore Romano, he protests against Mussolini's order.

Growing more conciliatory at the end of his letter, the Pope claims merely the souls of Italian boys, intimating that if Catholic bishops are entrusted with supervision of the moral and religious training of the National Balilla, he will give full liberty to the Catholic scouts to join juvenile fascisti organizations.

Government that Freed Vorovsky's Murderer In Haste to Avenge Slap

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

GENEVA, Jan. 26.—Ivan de Justh, secretary of the Hungarian republican party, was found guilty of an assault on the Hungarian premier, Count Bethlen. He was sentenced to twenty-four days' imprisonment, 500 francs fine and banishment from Switzerland for ten years.

The charge grew out of a scene in the lobby of the league of nations palace last June when De Justh slapped Count Bethlen's face.

The lawyers for the defense stated that De Justh had slapped the count's face merely to show the world that the premier was not worthy of representing Hungary.

FRENCH PUT OFF "INDEFINITELY" U. S. DEBT PACT

Foreign Office Hurries To Deny Breach

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. — The French government has notified the American debt commission that ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement has been indefinitely postponed, it was learned today.

As a result, the American senate will take no action on the pact until the next session a year hence.

Opposition in the French parliament was strong that a delay was decided upon rather than jeopardize the agreement by calling for a vote now, it was said.

President Poincare, in his appearance before the Chamber of Deputies Financial Commission, as the qualifying of Minister of Finance, stated that there was no hurry about ratifying the treaty.

The French Foreign Office has denied that there is anything involved in the debt situation to jeopardize the relations between the United States and France. According to the Foreign Office, the situation is unchanged.

Sacasa Government Puts Issues And Sells Bonds To Fight Tyrant Diaz

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

PUERTO CABZES, Nicaragua, Jan. 26.—Half a million dollars has been spent to date by the liberal government of Nicaragua, headed by President Juan B. Sacara in their struggle to defeat the forces of Adolfo Diaz, the darling of President Coolidge.

De Sacasa stated that $100,000 was personal funds of the members of the cabinet, $150,000 was taken from the National Bank at Bluefields before American marines were landed there and nearly $300,000 was derived from the issuance of bonds purchased by private citizens.

These bonds were called "Bonus de Patriotismo Centro Americano" and President Sacasa says, were for the reestablishment of a constitutional government in Nicaragua. They do not carry interest.

Rodolfo Espinsam, minister of foreign affairs in the liberal government has protested against any acceptance of Gen. Chamorro, as Nicaraguan minister. He requests that all countries delay action pending solution of the Nicaraguan controversy.

With our greatest enthusiasm we congratulate the leader of the oppressed and exploited workers of America, The DAILY WORKER to its 3rd anniversary.

We, the Communist youth of district three, pledge our full support and loyalty to the only fighter of the revolutionary working class in America, The DAILY WORKER.

A flood of large proportions, sweeping through the Ohio river valley, has invaded city streets, covered lowlands and hampered railroads. # Workers (Communist) Party

Daily Tiger Cub Must Be Saved

DETROIT, Mich.—The fate of the drive of the Jungleside elements of the great Lenin memorial meeting has proven to be a disastrous failure.

Several months ago the party leased the Detroit Armory, a hall with a seating capacity of some 9,500, for the huge demonstration in the memory of Lenin, which was to be held Sunday, January 23, in that meeting place.

Everything seemed to have been proceeding splendidly until about eight days before the Lenin Memorial Day, Comrade Baker, D. O., received a telephone message from the war lords to the effect that the armory was to be occupied by troops on January 23, the very day of the meeting, and therefore the lease for that hall must be cancelled immediately.

This is only one of those cowardly tricks that the bourgeoisie are used to inflicting upon the workers, but the time is not far off when the workers, under the leadership of the Communists, the most progressive section of the proletariat, will serve those fleshy capitalists with an altogether new species of tricks which will begin with a nice nifty proletarian revolution.

Changes Scene at Armory.

Can you imagine that? Instead of the gigantic mass meeting in the memory of our Lenin, the great leader of the workers and oppressed people against capitalistic imperialism, on Sunday, January 23, the armory was to be the scene of military preparation of troops for Wall Street's bloody murder of the working-classes of Chile, Mexico and Nicaragua, this same armory in which the workers of Detroit were to meet, first, to pay their tribute to Lenin, and second, to raise their angry voice of protest against the imperialism of Wall Street, of which our Lenin was the most bitter enemy, was to resound to the heavy tramp of soldiers drilling to kill off a few more thousand of our brothers and sisters in those foreign lands.

But, nevertheless, even tho the situation was very gloomy, the comrades in charge of the Lenin memorial with only eight days to make arrangements anew, have retained that dependable Leninistic spirit which predominated over them in the course of their work, have settled down to serious business, have realized that it was nothing to cry about, and have quickly secured two large labor halls, the New Workers' Home on the east side of the city, and the Finnish Labor Temple on the west side. They comprehended the fact that they, as Communists, will be compelled to undergo thousands of situations much worse than this one, and in that mood went to make new preparations to show the world that Communists can get themselves out of such petty affairs almost as easy as to show the militarizing and drilling of Michigan that they can climb in the face of defeat, and to show them how to hold even more successful Lenin memorial meetings than the meeting at the armory would have been.

Here Paul Work.

But even yet the war lords have not capitulated. They were continuously looking for new alibis with which to prevent the meetings. So this is what they did. As the New Workers' Home is not yet completed in the interior, the bosses have sent over their building inspector the day before the Lenin memorial, who was instructed by them to stop that meeting with the excuse that the hall did not have sufficient exits. This gave the Lenin mamorial committee some quick thinking to do. Early Sunday morning, six or seven carpenters, active members of the party, got together and in one or two hours slammed some boards together and in this way completely equipped the hall as far as the exists were concerned.

That Sunday afternoon the Lenin memorial meetings were held. And in ma tell you this: January 23 will be a read-letter day on the Communist calendar here in Detroit. Every available inch of space in both halls was taken; in fact, the next day the capitalist press reported that 3,500 had been present at both meetings. And over $600, is it estimated, has been collected at both meetings, besides the admission, literature and other receipts.

Uavell Lenin Portrait.

One of the features of the program was the unveiling of a huge portrait of Lenin, said to be the largest ever painted in America. The wonderful work is that of Com. Baker, D. O. Comrade Rebecca Grecht spoke on "Lenin's Contribution to World Revolution;" Comrade Wm. Z. Foster spoke on "Lenin, His Life and Work;" in the "Detroit Free Press," the most ardent advocate of the open shop, special attention was given to Foster's speech. The South-Slavic Tamburitza Orchestra played the "Revolutionary Funeral March," while the Ukrainian Workers' chorus, under the direction of Comrade Atamanec, sang some revolutionary songs. The singing and recitation of the Young Pioneers was one of the outstanding features on the program. The new D. O. of the Y. W. (C). L., Comrade Trumbull, also gave a short speech outlining the aims of the league. The music of the Finnish Workers' band was expressly remarkable.

I believe that the workers of this city have shown their solidarity and class-consciousness in coming out in such numbers to protest as they did against the invasion of American imperialism in foreign lands by demanding "Hands Off China, Mexico and Nicaragua."—LEO ORSAG.

New York State Living Beyond Its Income

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Governor Smith does not expect any tax reduction this year, it became known here yesterday, when the tentative estimates of state expenditures were given out. The governor says that the normal activities of the state government call for $190,000,000 and that $18,500,000 more is required by the school system.

The expected income is about $205,000,000 which means an increase in the tax rate instead of the opposite.

CHICAGO BOOSTERS' DANCE FRIDAY

CHICAGO.—Fun and jollity will mark the dance which is being given especially for boosters and workers who are doing their bit to put over the biggest labor affair Chicago has held for a long time. It is the Workers' carnival bazaar, which is to be held on February 25, 26 and 27 at the Ashland Auditorium. The dance for the boosters and their friends will take place at the Russian Workers' Hall, 1902 W. Division Street, on Friday, January 28th, at 8 P. M.

Admission to the boosters' dance will be by invitation only and no charge will be made. Tickets for themselves and their friends can be obtained by the bazaar workers from the committee in charge at 19 S. Lincoln Street, and all who possibly can are urged to bring along cakes, cookies, doughnuts, plenty of good spirit, so that they can all be mixed together with the dance music and thus bring out a happy and enjoyable evening for all.

The dance, which is being given by the committee, is deserved by the bazaar workers, many of whom have done excellent work in the preparations for the $10,000 bazaar. Merchants throughout the city have been visited to donate articles for the booths, which will be set up in all corners of the hall, and for toys, which will be the delight of the children who will have their own fun in the Workers' children model nursery, for which a corner has been set aside under the direction of a capable nurse and her assistants.

Many friends and sympathizers are at work sewing articles and these bits of handiwork will be placed on sale during the three days of the bazaar, among the friends from out of town whose interest has been aroused is Mrs. Wm. Montgomery Brown, wife of the famous "heretic bishop," who has promised to contribute some specimens of her handiwork for the bazaar's booths. The bishop himself is donating a number of copies of his internationally known booklet, "Communism and Christianism."

The bazaar is being held for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER and the Daily Proiheit. The committee has decided, in addition, to donate 75% of the profits from the bazaar to the work of the International Labor Defense. Numerous labor organizations and fraternal bodies have pledged their support to the bazaar and are helping appreciably in the work.

All who are interested in the bazaar and wish to aid in the work should apply to 19 S. Lincoln Street. Tickets for the bazaar may also be obtained at this address, as well as at the Chicago office of the Proiheit, 2309 Roosevelt Road, and other labor

Shoe Operatives Strike Company; Cut Wages in Violation of Contract

A walkout of 40 union shoe operatives has taken place at the Riverside Felt Slipper Co., 48 Walker St., as a result of a cut in wages of from 5 to 10 per cent.

The men, who are members of local 86 of the Shoe Workers Protective Union, decided upon a walkout, after they had been informed that the wage cut would take effect immediately. The action of the company directly violates an agreement, which had been signed last year with the union, and which does not expire till Sept. 1, 1927.

The company demands now that the men accept the wage cut, and extend the period of the agreement to Jan. 1, 1928, a time which is usually slack in that industry, and when a strike would not affect the company seriously. Extra demands are: before going on strike the men agree to finish up work which the company may have on hand at that time. The men are to post $50 security, to live up to these demands. The company also insist on the right to discharge 7 men, who have been on the regular working force, before work is resumed again.

Chester W. Blebby, business agent of local 86, states that the strike is in full progress, that full picket lines have been established, and that they are out to win, and to force the company to live up to the agreement as originally signed. The walkout is sanctioned and has the full support of the district council of the Shoe Workers Protective union.

English Laborites And Co-operators to Unite

LONDON.—An official alliance between the Labor party and the co-operative movement is likely, according to London dispatches. The co-operative movement has a membership of 5,000,000, part of which is already in the Labor party.

A report in favor of the alliance will be submitted to a conference of the cooperative party at the end of January and is expected to be adopted.

TASKS OF THE MINERS' CONVENTION

By BERT WOLFE

THE United Mine Workers of America is now holding its 30th convention—the first general convention of the union to be held in three years. It is, at least to the labor movement, an important convention in the history of the organization. It comes on the eve of an expected strike. It comes at a time when the union has lost nearly 200,000 members and the control of the southern bituminous fields under the misleadership of Mr. Lewis.

The report of the United States Bureau of Mines, made public yesterday, indicates that over 66% of the soft coal being produced in the country on December 31, 1926 (the date of the survey) was from non-union mines and that over 61% of the miners employed in the production of soft coal were not members of the union and were working in mines not under the union's control.

Figures Prove Lewis Failed.

This evidence of the failure of Mr. Lewis' administration is made public by the government on the eve of the convention with the intention of discouraging the demand for a strike. It will be argued by those opposing a strike that even if the strike is 100% effective, it can close less than 35% of the producing units and can call out less than 40% of all the miners in the industry. If the policies of Mr. Lewis are again followed, this is no doubt correct, for Lewis has never made an earnest attempt to organize the non-union fields.

Genuine Strike Will Win.

The hope for a real struggle and a real defense of the miners' interests can come only if the progressive elements, which are sure to have a considerable number of delegates at the convention, are able to force a policy of a genuine strike of the entire industry in which a determined effort is made to organize the unorganized fields and make that U. M. W. of A. once more a union controlling the entire industry.

The only obstacle to this is the cowardly and-even treacherous leadership of Mr. Lewis because no one, who knows the spirit of the men employed in the mining industry, can doubt but that an honest call to them, and a determined effort to organize them would meet with an immediate and enthusiastic response. They are not non-union miners by choice but thru the deliberate neglect of Mr. Lewis and his machine to organize them.

Lewis Fights Union.

Lewis has displayed great weakness in his struggle with the coal owners but great strength and fighting spirit when it comes to struggling with the rank and file of his own union and their demands and interests.

The administration leaders have been replaced by Operators like Alexander Howat of Kansas, whose only crime was that they wished the union to put up a real fight on behalf of the miners' interests, have been barred as candidates for office and even expelled from the union for long periods. Others have been bought off. Even conservative opposition of elements no less corrupt than Lewis, such as Farrington, have been eliminated.

New Opposition Rises.

But just when Lewis thought that he had completely destroyed all opposition, was the unchallenged czar of the U. M. W. to rule and ruin it as he saw fit, Lewis finds himself faced with the most serious challenge in the last six years. All the worthwhile elements of the U. M. W. union, all those who see the impending disaster that Lewis has been preparing so long, all those who still believe that the union can be saved and made strong and again regain control of the entire industry, have at last united and found that leadership, headed by John Brophy, the progressive President of district two, supported by William Stevenson, member of the National Executive Board, William Bowman, former president of the largest anthracite district of Pennsylvania, and other such substantial elements whose devotion to the interest of the miner cannot be questioned. All elements that have the fate of their union at heart have been rallying together in the "Save the Union" committee, demanding the organization of the lost union fields; demanding a fighting policy which would not be stopped by company gunmen and court injunctions; demanding effective resistance to wage cuts; demanding democratization of the union which has become czar-ridden and boss-ridden; demanding the reinstatement of those elements which were unjustly expelled for their devotion to the interests of the rank and file of the U. M. W. and whose expulsion drains the union of its life blood and its fighting spirit and declaring the union emergency for such larger aims as the nationalization of the coal mines and the development of a Labor Party movement which will make nationalization and the abolition of labor injunctions two of their cardinal demands.

Check Up Vote Count

The miners must also demand a reckoning of the brazen election steal just pulled by Mr. Lewis. Over a month has passed since the election and no tabulated returns have been given out by the national office. The opposition is defying Lewis to give out a tabulated report of the returns, local by local, and Lewis does not dare comply with this simple and elementary privilege of every voting body to get full returns.

Miscount Easy

It is just as if the Tammany machine in New York were to announce that its candidate had been elected but were to refuse to give the vote by election district and refuse to have had tabulated and would be able to check up the honesty of the returns. The mere fact that Lewis refuses to give such a return is sufficient evidence that Brophy really carried the election.

Members Pay

So that one of the fundamental issues before this convention is the issue of honesty in union administration; of the right of the rank and file who pay the dues, who fight the fights of the union and have built it and who somehow manage to maintain it despite neglect, treachery and open hostility, to elect their own officers and to remove from office a self-perpetuating clique that have neglected and even betrayed their interests.

Finally, it is to be hoped that out of the present convention comes, along with a constructive program and along with progress toward the democratization of the union, the unifying on a permanent basis of all progressive forces, of all honest unionists who love the union which to them has been and must again become a shield for defense and a weapon for the improvement of the condition of the men who toil in the mines.

"Worker Employer" Plan Of Hillman Results in Employer Keeping Wage

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 26.—Sidney Hillman's policy of "worker—employer cooperation," has shown its head in this town where the officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, it is alleged, have given their approval to a plan suggested by Henry Sonnenborn & Co., largest shop in the city, employing several thousand workers, for this latter to become stockholders "to prevent the factory from closing down."

During the last few years wages have been reduced many times according to agreements reached with Amalgamated officials. The last of this series of wage cuts taking place a few weeks ago.

The Siren Sings.

Last Monday morning, Sigmund Sonnenborn, president of the concern, came to the machines and made a speech, declaring to the workers that "business is very bad and I am losing money. Not only my own money but that of my wife and other members of my family. But in order to save the concern and make it possible for you to continue to work here, I am willing that each and every one of you become stockholders and thus my partners. In that way we will be able to continue the business shoulder to shoulder."

The workers do not know how to answer this amazing proposal, and with the local Amalgamated officials conspicuous by their absence, many interesting developments can be expected in the immediate future.

Evidently Untrue That Green and Walker Meet To Curse Communists

In spite of the announcement of John Sullivan, president of the New York Federation of Labor, that Mr. William Green was to hold a conference with Mayor Walker late this week or early next week—on the "allegations of graft and Communist activities in the recent fur strike," the mayor's secretary stated today that no appointment had been made for Mr. Green to see the mayor. According to newspaper reports, Mayor Walker leaves next Saturday for a month's stay in Florida so it looks as though there might be some difficulty about this repeatedly announced "conference."

No definite date of President Green's arrival in this city can be obtained, and the Joint Board of the Furriers' union has heard nothing from him or from any American Federation of Labor official about the charges of police bribery which were given such wide publicity.

Seven Hundred Havana Leather Workers Quit As Bosses Deny Union

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

HAVANA, Cuba.—Seven hundred leather workers have declared a strike against the leather manufacturers. The main demand is the recognition of the union.

Due to the lack of an organization the leather workers slaved 12 hours a day with low wages and bad sanitary conditions. The bosses and the foremen did with the workers as they pleased.

Through the initiative of a group of workers the leather workers' union was organized. The first act of the union was to ask recognition. Although this demand was sent to light manufacturers only, all the employers got together, condemned it as a Bolshevik demand, and decided on a lockout.

The workers found out about the bosses' decision, and declared a general strike.

All unions of Havana congratulated the leather workers on their action and financial support is already being organized.

The solidarity of the workers is excellent.

Grand Rapids Crowd Hears About Yankee Imperialist Program

By Worker Correspondent.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — The Lenin memorial meeting here was a very good one. About fifteen members of the Workers party contrived to bring an average of ten other workers apiece, so that we had a hundred and fifty present.

The principal speaker was Rebecca Grecht, and she explained American imperialism and the light of Leninism, and told about the difference between The DAILY WORKER and the other newspapers.

CHICAGO COUNCIL FOR ALIEN AID MAKES PROGRESS

Local Federation of Labor Endorses Organization

CHICAGO, Jan. 26 (FP.)—Credentialed by the Chicago federation of labor, the Chicago council for protection of foreign born workers is successfully presenting the case against the anti-alien bills in congress to local unions. The proposed photographing, fingerprinting and registration of aliens, now under consideration at Washington, meets no favor in Chicago labor circles.

The joint board of the Amalgamated clothing workers has donated $50 to the council, which is headed by Max Orlowsky of the machinists. Other unions that have given or promised money in the campaign which has just begun are the capmakers, machinists, cleaners and dyers, and the bakers. Fraternal organizations like the Austrian aid society and the Russian women's progressive league are co-operating.

Class To Train Speakers.

The council urges unions to put the congressmen on record regarding their stand on the anti-alien bills. It is conducting a class to train speakers on the significance of the bills and their bad effect on labor organization work, particularly in the basic industries where foreign born workers are numerous and where union activity could be seriously impeded by bringing government pressure on aliens who joined the union. A naturalization school is also conducted by the council.

The Chicago council is a branch of the National council for protection of foreign born workers of 11 Union Square, New York.

Farmer Labor Forces Of Minnesota Met to Plan Further Activity

ST. PAUL, Jan. 26. (FP.)—With eyes fixed on 1928, a president a year, the farmer-labor forces of Minnesota, after meeting in St. Paul last week, are making preparations for a conference of all farmer-labor and third parties in the northwest. The proposed conference is to whip things into shape for a national farmer-labor party that may play a considerable role in 1928.

Affiliation of all farmer and labor organizations will be sought by the state party which controls 1 U. S. senator, 2 congressmen and about one-quarter of the membership of each house in the legislature, being second only to the republican party in Minnesota, with the democrats nowhere. It polled over a quarter million votes last November.

Most of the business pertained to state affairs but the meeting took time out to denounce American imperialist meddling in Mexico, Nicaragua and China to demand the impeachment of secretary of state Frank Kellogg, who is a citizen of Minnesota; to demand government ownership of railroads, old age pensions, and equable taxation; to denounce injunctions in labor disputes and the federal reserve banking system.

A farmer-labor press service and a monthly magazine were authorized.

The Queensboro chamber of commerce declared a survey just completed by the various departments of the chamber indicated that the population of the borough of Queens on January 1, 1927, was 896,000, an increase of 58,000 over the population on January 1, 1926.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Ten persons were killed and ten injured in a collision between an express and a freight train near Akalonka, according to a Central news dispatch from Budapest.

LOSS OF UNION IN STOCKYARDS CUTS SKILLED WAGE AND LIVES OF WORKERS; DISSATISFACTION

By THURBER LEWIS.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 26.—It is difficult to picture a more disagreeable, toilsome or gruelling task than that performed daily by the 60,000 odd workers in Chicago's stockyards and packing-houses. The thousands of slaves in the vile-smelling abattoirs who stand for hours ankle deep in gore wielding knives and cleavers at an inhuman pace can't last much more than ten or twelve years.

A worker in the Chicago yards who is familiar with the killing floors of all the big packers in Chicago, Kansas City, Sioux City, Omaha and South St. Paul told me that a cattle butcher who lasts longer than that is an exception.

Can't Stand Pace.

If they don't fall an easy victim to rheumatism or some other ailment induced by constant dampness, their hands give way under the terrific strain of their tools. Cattle butchers in the Chicago houses lean over still warm carcasses and skin them at the rate of 23 and 24 head an hour.

Between the years 1916-1922 the butcher workmen were organized in a strong union. In those days they averaged 15 head an hour. With their union smashed in the big strike of 1922 the speed-up has been pressed upon them in a progressive fashion so that in a few more months the butchers will be doing twice as much as they did when they had their union. And for considerably less pay.

Discontent Grows.

Mutterings of discontent are mounting in volume in the corrals and on the killing floors. Men are being let out at a rapid rate as new efficiency methods create a speeded production requiring less hands for the same amount of work. As it is, there are thousands of butchers and laborers out of work. The old time looseness of discipline during the union days when a hard worked and sweating butcher might run down for a cup of coffee is no more.

Instead, the oppressiveness of nerve-wrecking efficiency has come on the scene. Come in only one minute late and you are docked a solid hour. A uniformed guard stands at all time clocks and keeps watch at all entrances and exits. Wages are being cut in cynical proportion as production increases with less help.

All these things are bearing down on the stockyards and packinghouse workers. Nor do the fraudulent company unions and insurance schemes dull the cutting edge of the more intense exploitation. The workers are seeing in these boss-controlled instruments mere additional means of pressure.

When the best big butcher in Swift's, for example, can't make any more than 47 cents an hour, the helplessness, or rather, the harmlessness of the company union stands out like a sore thumb. The workers never did take the company union seriously.

The last issue of Armour's "Oval", the house organ, boasted that 95% of the men and women in the plant voted at the last company union elections. Armour workers laugh at this and relate that when they came to work one Monday morning they found their cards missing out of the clocks. They were given out only after "voting" for "union officers". That's how Armour got a 95% vote.

Begin Again.

Old time union men who still carry the scars of the big stockyards battles of 1916 and 1922 are beginning to see the yards ripen for another effort. Within a short time a group of these old warriors will seek a union charter as the first step towards the reorganization of the butcher workmen. The initial steps are going to be hard, but the spirit is there and with help from the outside labor movement a new beginning can be made.

British Isolation in China.

It now appears certain that the British government has failed to secure concerted action on the part of the other imperialist powers in support of a war against the revolutionary Canton government which controls over two thirds of China and exercises moral hegemony over the remainder.

Japan has definitely decided to adopt a "Hands Off China" policy as far as resorting to armed hostilities against the Nationalist government is concerned. Japan has adopted this attitude for business reasons rather than because of any altruistic motives. The important consideration in this instance, is that objective conditions are such that Japan felt it the better part of wisdom to court the Cantonese government rather than make war on it.

The policy of the United States government as announced by Coolidge indicates that Washington will not join Britain but insists that it will pprtect "American lives and property."

There is reason to believe that the Coolidge policy in China which has been a sabre-rattling one, bearing all the earmarks of the Wall street policy in Latin-America has been considerably modified by pressure of mass opinion. There is also reason to believe, that Washington promised co-operation with Great Britain in China in return for benevolent neutrality towards American policy in Nicaragua and Mexico. That some such agreement had been reached can be gathered from the howls of rage and the groans of disappointment emitted by the tory government organs when news of the latest Coolidge announcement reached London. Coolidge will defend Wall street's interests in China by the sword if necessary but since the main stream of Chinese anti-imperialist hate is now directed against British imperialism, American imperialism will continue to slap John Bull on the back, tickle the Chinese under the chin and try to get away with more of the bacon.

The reports that France had reached an agreement with Britain were properly giggled out of credibility by The DAILY WORKER. Britain's efforts to secure aid in saving her commercial and political chestnuts this time—for the first time in history, perhaps—have proven to be a ghastly failure.

As for imperial Britain! She continues to dispatch troops and marines and warships to China. But what can her twenty thousand mercenaries do in face of a China of 400,000,000 people, a people more united than ever before and fired with the burning zeal of a nation that has tasted the bitter fruit of oppression for centuries, from their own corrupt rulers and again from the brutal exploitation of foreign imperialism and its tools, the native tuchuns?

In addition to the resistance that the New China can put up, we see powerful opposition developing in India and in the British Dominions., Hindoo nationalists resent seeing Hindoo troops being sent to murder the Chinese, and the Australian workers have served notice on the empire that they will take active steps to prevent the transport of Australian troops and munitions of war for the British campaign in China.

British isolation in China is as complete as anything can be. The cabinet meets in London under auspices more gloomy than hung over the imperial fortunes since Napoleon squatted on the other side of the channel with a dagger in his hand intended for the British nation's heart. The two situations can only be considered comparable in a military sense. In those days capitalism was rising to power and England, the nursery of capitalism, had a historical mission to fulfill. History is now about to write "finis" to that task.

Today we are living in a period of capitalist decline on a world scale. World capitalism is standing on the brink of the historical abyss and the old guard of capitalism, its British section, is doomed to be the first to go. Britain is fighting for her imperialist life in China. The failure of the other imperialist powers to help a brother in distress, proves once more that aside from the rising power of the revolutionary workers and subject peoples, intent on doing away with exploitation, the contradictions inside the imperialist system, their mutual antagonisms and conflicting interests, prevent them to unite against their common enemies, the workers and subject peoples, thus helping to write the music for their funeral dirge while the grave is being dug by the exploited masses of the world.

Hail the gallant Chinese millions and their allies in all lands!

Speed the day when the pirate emblem of Great Britain sinks beneath the waters of the Yellow Sea to be followed by the imperialist symbols of all powers that are holding the human race in bondage.

And speed the day when the symbol of the World Soviet Republic of industrial workers and tillers of the soil rises on the ruins of world imperialism.

Chicago Daily News Questions Answered by Russian Communist

By G. MELNITCHANSKY.

Some time ago Junius Wood, the Moscow correspondent of the Chicago Daily News asked G. Melnitchansky, president of the Moscow Central Labor Council seven questions about the effect of the revolution on the social and cultural positions of the Russian workers and on their material conditions.

Whether the Daily News published the answers given by Melnitchansky or not, they are of much interest to the American workers and we herewith publish the answers to the first three questions. The balance will appear in our next issue.—Editor.

Question 1.—In what way has the revolution improved the social and cultural position of the worker?

Answer: Prior to the Revolution the working class in Russia had no rights, it was an oppressed and exploited class, enslaved politically and economically. The October Revolution transferred the political and economic power to the working class, establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat, which is being exercised by the working class in alliance with the poorest peasantry through the Soviets of Workers', Peasants' and Red Army deputies and forms an enslaved class it has turned them into a privileged one.

The October Revolution has secured for the working class the freedom of expression of their opinions, the freedom of assembly, of organization, access to knowledge, the right to possess arms and to defend their workers' State, the equality of workers of all nationalities and races, the freedom of conscience and of anti-religious and anti-clerical propaganda. The October Revolution has transferred the ownership of the means of production (factories, mines) to the workers. The Soviet government has promulgated a Labor Code which contains the minimum conditions of work, which cannot be reduced in any undertaking or establishment, be it private, public or State (8-hour workday, obligatory social insurance, etc.).

Prior to the Revolution only the possessing class had free access to education. The Soviet government aims to give all workers a general and complete education, and for this purpose it first of all takes measures to eradicate illiteracy among the laboring masses and has established workers' faculties to prepare the workers for their institutes of learning. The People's Commissariat of Education has covered the U. S. S. R. with a network of schools of various grades, kindergartens, technical, industrial, pedagogical and art colleges and many other educational institutions, to which workers and members of their families are admitted first of all.

The trade unions are enabled to carry on great educational work through the clubs, libraries, reading rooms, the press, etc., while at the same time taking an active part in the introduction of all educational measures by the various State bodies.

In this sense the Revolution has made a radical improvement in the social and cultural condition of the workers.

Question 2.—How has it improved his material position?

Answer: The Revolution made it possible to carry out all the basic demands of the workers in the realm of social insurance.

Social insurance in the U. S. S. R. covers all persons who work by hire and includes all forms of relief, as medical aid, unemployment benefit, relief in cases of temporary disability (sickness, accident, quarantine, pregnancy, confinement, care of sick member of the family), invalids' pensions, special allowances for infant feeding, sick-room supplies for burial and lastly, relief to the family of the insured in case of death or disappearance of the bread-winner and during unemployment.

The insurance premiums are paid by the undertakings and individuals employing hired labor, the insured being exempt from any assessments or charges for social insurance. Social insurance is under the direction of the trade unions, while elect the insurance bodies.

In addition, workers and employees are accommodated free of charge at rest homes, sanatoria and health resorts. In municipal services, education, etc., the working class enjoys certain preferences, and the charges are fixed in accordance with the wages and the family status.

Industrial undertakings must also contribute 10 per cent of their profits in addition to the insurance payment and paid wages for improving the general living conditions of the workers. This money is spent on the construction of housing for workers and other material or cultural needs (clubs, public dining-rooms, nurseries, etc.).

Wages, which were very low during the acute periods of the civil war and economic collapse, are now, with the restoration of the public economy, constantly rising and have reached throughout the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, on the average, 97 per cent of the pre-war level and in some industries they are higher than pre-war. For instance, in the textile, food and other industries, in which pre-war wages were generally low, they are now considerably above the level. If one takes into consideration that prior to the Revolution the workers did not have social insurance, free medical aid and medicines, low rents, health resorts, rest homes, sanatoria, the 8 and 6-hour day, annual vacations for 2 to 4 weeks with pay, and adds all that to the wages, it appears that the material condition of the working class after the Revolution has improved considerably. The basic improvement in the condition of the working class consists in that the public economy, the industries, are in the hands of the State—the workers' state—and that they are being developed in the interest of the working class. The growth and development of industry lead to the immediate improvement in the economic condition of the working class and not to the amassing of large fortunes by a small group of capitalists—private property owners.

Question 3.—What principles of Soviet unionism would be of benefit to the American workman?

Answer: (a) The trade unions in the United States, mostly under the influence of their leaders, deny the revolutionary class struggle, reject strikes as a means for improving the condition of the workers, although every-day life reveals facts indicating the growing acuteness of the class struggle which goes on without the trade unions' consent or power over them. The basic principle of the work of the Soviet trade unions is the organization of the revolutionary class struggle, participation in the building of the proletarian state. If American trade unions should adopt this principle it would greatly benefit the American workers.

(b) A majority of trade unions in the United States, also under the influence of their leaders, deny the necessity for the working class to take an active part in the political struggle, by creating their own proletarian political party. Therefore an overwhelming majority of the workers are indifferent to politics and do not fight against the existing political order, and many of them, with the aid of these same leaders, are drawn into the nets of the bourgeois political parties, which thus strengthen their power and use it to enslave the working class still more.

The trade unions of the U. S. S. R. hold the view that it is necessary for the working class to have an independent proletarian political party, which should direct the political struggle of the working class and aim to wrest the political power from the bourgeoisie, securing it for the working class. If the trade unions and the workers of the United States should adopt this point of view and participate in practice, it would greatly benefit the American workers. Then the power of capital would be destroyed, one would not have an end of the spy and strike-breaking agencies, the injunction process would be abolished, the special policemen and soldiers would not break strikes and the heads of the strikers, and the judges would not send the workers to workhouses and jails.

(c) In the United States, where the most highly developed and concentrated capital rules, where the number of gainfully employed persons reaches 42,000,000, the trade union movement is weak and disintegrated. It is organized along most backward craft national lines. Craft unionism disunites the workers with one another and undermines the power of the working class. The unions, affiliated to the American Federation of Labor, the I. W. W., the independent unions which attempt to form at the same plants, compete among themselves by most unfair methods, create confusion and disorganization in the midst of the working class. The number of organized workers does not exceed 6 million. The American Federation of Labor, after 45 years of existence, has in it 2,800,000, which constitutes an insignificant percentage of the total number of workers. In many trade unions Negroes and workers of the yellow race are not admitted, common laborers and semi-skilled workers are not organized and not taken into the unions.

But the trade unions in the USSR are organized along industrial lines—one industry (one factory), one union. All, beginning with the common laborer, the watchman, the sweeper and up to the highly qualified specialist, belong to the same union. The trade unions are open to all workers irrespective of race, nationality, religious and political views. 87 per cent of all people working by hire are members of trade unions. All the trade unions are amalgamated in one central body, the USSR Central Council of Trade Unions, and help each other in their work. On July 1, 1926, we had 9,270,000 trade union members—88 per cent of the total number of people working by hire.

If the American trade unions were organized along the same lines as the trade unions of the USSR and should embrace even 50 per cent of all persons who work by hire and be organized in one central body, it would be of great benefit to the American workers.

The trade unions of the USSR are organized on the basis of democratic centralism. The rank and file are drawn into trade union activities; they elect and control their leaders. As soon as any trade union leader becomes estranged from the mass of workers and begins to manifest symptoms of a bureaucrat, of an official who attempts to rule over the membership, such a leader is recalled from his post and another, more worthy leader is elected in his place. Our trade unions are of the opinion that it is not good for people to occupy leading positions too long; we do not recognize life jobs in the trade unions. That helps much against conservatism. Our trade union leaders and active workers are all revolutionists who work for an ideal and they do not look upon their trade union post as their vocation, as their privilege and monopoly, and they do not fight for their jobs.

If all that should be adopted by the American trade unions, we would not be witnessing how their leaders become life-long rulers and czars of their unions, we would not be witnessing the reign of the list and the strong arm in the American unions which is fostered by many trade union officials, we would not be witnessing the bureaucratism, conservatism and venality which obtain there, and that would be very, very advantageous for the American workers.

ODE TO LENIN

By ADOLF WOLFF

You rise
To ever greater Stature
As Time recedes
In inverse ratio
To the size of those Who strutted History's stage
But yesterday
And are today, faint memories.

Where are the Clemenceaus,
Whose rage shook Nations;
The Woodrow Wilsons?
Whose suave hypocrisy embraced the World.
The crafty fox Lloyd George?
Von Hindenburg,
Castrated ruler of a vasal State?

Where are those cocky statesmen
In whose fat palms
The fate of Nations lay?

They were the servants
Of a passing phase,
A momentary spasm,
A system that Must die.

But you
You lived and died
For that greatest of all causes:
The emancipation of man
From the tyranny of man.

And while like creeping shadows,
They slinking merge
Into the blackness of the Past;

You rise and rise and rise
To ever greater heights
In the love and estimation
Of ever greater masses,
Like a sun
Casting the light of Liberation
Over ever widening areas.

A NEW NOVEL
Upton Sinclair

There was another charge—the prophet was said to be fond of the company of handsome young women. That was a cruel thing to hint, because Eli was strenuous in denouncing fornications and adulteries, as much so as any Hebrew prophet of the First Revelation. Dad chuckled and speculated until it happened one day that he and Bunny took a long drive, and stopped at an unfrequented beach, looking for a place for Bunny to get a swim. There was a cheap hotel on the waterfront, and coming out of the door, whom should they run into but Eli Watkins, with an indubitably handsome young woman! The young woman walked quickly on, and Eli exchanged greetings with Dad and Bunny, and then excused himself. Dad stood for a minute, looking after the couple and saying, "By golly!"

Then he turned and went into the hotel, and to the man at the desk remarked, in a casual tone, "I met that gentleman, but his name has slipped my memory—the one that just went out."

"That's Mr. T. C. Brown, of Santa Ynez."

"Is he staying here"?

"He just checked out."

Dad began to glance over the hotel register, and there he read, as big as life, "T. C. Brown and wife, Santa Ynez." And in the crude scrawly handwriting of Eli Watkins, which Dad had at home upon several business letters! It was all Dad could do to keep from bursting out laughing. By golly, if he were to tip off Tom Poober to the contents of that hotel register, he would knock the Third Revelation as high as a kite!

III

President Harding died; and Dan Irving wrote Bunny the gossip from Washington. The old gentleman had been reluctant to take the oil men's money, so Barney Brockway and his "fixer" had fixed things for him—they had "carried an account" in a Wall Street brokerage, a method whereby business men make life comfortable for statesmen. Every now and then they would bring the old gentleman a bundle of liberty bonds which they had "won" for him. And now his widow had found several hundred thousand dollars of these bonds in a safe deposit box, and become convinced that he had meant them for another woman. And was in such a fury about it that she was telling all her friends, and giving great glee to Washington gossip.

And then the new president; a little man whose fame was based upon the legend that he had put down a strike of the Boston policemen, when the truth was that he had been hiding in his hotel room, with a black cave presented to him by the mayor of the city. His dream in life, as reported by himself, was to keep a store, and that was the measure of his mentality. He didn't know what to say, and so the newspapers called him a "strong silent man."

Bunny didn't publish much of this, because Rachel didn't approve of gossip. But they did publish some of the inside facts about professionalism in college athletics, and when this was offered for sale on the campuses, the athletic students mobbed the "Upsels." But even the mailers read the paper, and Bunny was having the time of his life.

In December the new Congress assembled, and an alarming state of affairs was revealed; the "insurgents" had the balance of power in the Senate, and their first move was to combine with the Democrats and order an investigation of the oil leases. This news fell upon Dad and Varne like a thunderbolt—their scouts in Washington had failed to foresee such a calamity, and Verne had to jump into his private car and hurry to Washington, to see what a last-minute expenditure of cash might do. Apparently it didn't do much, for the committee proceeded to put witnesses on the "grill" them—a terrifying newspaper phrase, but really it was not so much a culinary operation as an explosion, with the debris scattered all over the front pages of the press.

The thing was too sensational to be held down any longer. It didn't read like politics, but like some blood and thunder movie. Secretary Crisby hadn't had the sense to put his oil money into liberty bonds and hide them in a safe deposit box —he had gone like a fool and paid off a big mortgage on his Texas ranch, and bought a lot of stuff that everybody could see; he had even told the foreman of his ranch that he had got sixty-eight thousand dollars from Vernon Roscoe, and the foreman had told one of the ranch-hands. Now the owners put the badly rattled foreman on the witness stand, and he had to explain that it was all a misunderstanding—what he had said was not "sixty-eight thousand dollars," but "six or eight cows." You can see how easy it was for such a mistake to happen!

But then it was shown that Secretary Crisby had deposited a hundred thousand dollars in his bank one day; and where had he got that? A great Washington newspaper publisher came forward to declare that he had loaned his dear friend the secretary that little sum for no particular reason. The great publisher then went off to Florida to spend the winter, and he was sick and couldn't possibly be disturbed. But the perverse committee sent one of its members to Florida and put the publisher on the witness stand, and in the presence of half a hundred newspaper reporters pinned him down and made him admit that his story had been a friendly fairy-tale.

Where had the hundred thousand come from? The scandal-mongers were busy, of course—fellows like Dan Irving running to the committee with tales of what Washington gossip was saying. So the committee grabbed "Young Pete" O'Reilly, and "grilled" him, and made him admit that he had earned the trifling sum of a hundred thousand dollars to Secretary Crisby in a little black bag—more stuff right out of a movie! And then they grabbed "Old Pete," and he claimed it was just a loan—he had got a note, but he couldn't recollect where the note was. He finally produced a signature which he said had been cut off the note, but he couldn't tell what had become of the rest of it; he was very careless about notes, and thought he had given this one to his wife, who had misplaced all but the signature. And these scandalous details about the leaders of the most fashionable society in Washington and Angel City! The newspapers published it, even while they shivered at their own irreverence.

"Breaking Chains" An Epic Labor Film

By Leon Blumenfeld.

Judging by the interest taken in the sensational film, "Breaking Chains," which is scheduled for a big preview presentation, Sunday, February 6, at the new Waldorf theatre on West 59 Street, capacity audiences will be present to fully appreciate and endorse the principle of the international worker. It will be the initial performance in New York, and will be given under the auspices of the Friends of the International Workers Aid.

"Breaking Chains" is a significant title for the classic photoplay. It is a brilliant succession of events enwined into a beautiful love tale, the central theme of which pleads for the proletarian laborer the world over. It possesses all the essential ingredients that go to make up a great picture. Love, hate, irony, suffering, brutality, and heroicousness are some of the outstanding elements depicted. It is not mere propaganda, but rather to teach, to summon up courage and perchance.

Filmed entirely in Russia and dealing with the late Russian revolution and the overthrow of the Czarist reign, "Breaking Chains" was imported to this country at a great expense by the I. W. A. It will thrill, enrapture and fluster American audiences as effectively as it has on the other side of the water, because its appeal is of a universal nature. This European motion picture is not to be mistaken for a news reel. It is a true and interesting document containing actual news, photographed dexterously, by a [illegible] camera.

The maiden, a hero who wins her at the final fade-out, and the symbolical villain with his cursed and morose tactics, and so on. It reveals the upbuilding of a new nation in the Russia old.

Tickets can be purchased in the box office of the Waldorf theatre, in Jimmie Higgin's bookshop and at the office of the Daily Worker. There will be 4 showings, at 12 p. m., 1 p. m., 7 p. m., and 9 p. m.

Assembly Bill to End New York Movie Censor

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Repeal of the New York state motion picture censorship law is provided in a bill introduced in the legislature today by Assemblyman Hackenburg. The measure carries out a recommendation by Gov. Smith.

"The censorship law is a 'blue law' enacted to pacify the long-eared reformers," said a statement by Hackenburg. "Since its enactment it has served no other purpose than to create jobs."

Force Against China Perilous, Says Borah

Kellogg Says U. S. Willing to Recognize Any Government "That Can Speak for China"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Thinking that United States and Great Britain have "definite rights" in China, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee, today opposed evacuation of all Americans in China.

Borah declared he favored the protection of American lives in China but "I am in favor of protecting them at the present time if necessary by bringing them out of danger until all danger is passed."

He said he "thoroly sympathized" with China's efforts to get rid of foreign domination.

Willing To Make New Deal.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Cantonese nationalist government can definitely hope for recognition by the United States as soon as it has brought the greater part of China under its control, according to the interpretation placed here today on Secretary of State Kellogg's statement of American policy toward China. (The Cantonese government now controls two-thirds of China. What is Kellogg waiting for?—Ed.).

Secretary Kellogg's announced willingness to "enter into negotiations with any government of China who can represent or speak for China" is considered especially significant. Added hope of recognition for the Cantonese is seen in the section which declared that "the United States has watched with sympathetic interest the nationalistic awakening of China and welcomes every advance made by the Chinese people toward overpassing their system of exterritoriality."

Resistance Is Aided.

Aside from these allusions to the recently changed political situation, the memorandum concerns itself with a restatement of this government's desire for a unified, independent and prosperous Chinese nation and its willingness to release as early as possible the tariff control and extra-territoriality provided by treaties.

The United States can not, however, abrogate these treaties, the statement makes plain. But they "must be superseded by new treaties negotiated with somebody representing China and subsequently ratified by the senate of the United States."

Business Altruism.

Kellogg's emphasis on the fact

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

ALL the venom in the poison vials of the British right wing labor leaders who betrayed the striking miners when the general strike was called off, is now poured on the head of A. J. Cook, fighting secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, beloved by the militant rank and file but hated by the traitors who deserted the miners in the midst of battle and deeply hated by the capitalist class of Great Britain.

RESPECTABLE labor leaders like J. H. Thomas, Ramsay MacDonald and Philip Snowden, whose tongues are calloused from kissing the King's hand and who anoint their lips with ointment so that his majesty's sensitive ears may not be offended by harsh tones when they attend his fetes and levees, now mark the bedgered Zulu at the leader of the miners' union, simply because Cook refused to surrender on the government's terms but fought on until forced to the wall by the united forces of the government, the press, the labor and the "public" scabbery.

WE have already called the attention of our readers to the attack made upon Cook by Miss Margaret Bondfield of the British Labor Party in the course of a speech delivered by the lady in Chicago a few weeks ago. The object of this international campaign of calumny is to discredit Cook in the eyes of the masses. Those leaders who are in perfect accord with the tory government's policy which is an extreme anti-labor policy, fool themselves if they think the British workers are going to join them in excommunicating Cook. They are evidently following this policy because they are as much interested in preserving the empire as the tory leaders.

COOK was recently in the Soviet Union where he attended a convention of the Russian Trade Unions. He pledged himself at that convention to carry on the struggle against British capitalism more determinedly than ever on his return. He is fol-

"PITTSBURGH OF CHINA" ALSO SMOKES

Wuchang, "The Pittsburgh of China," is the center of the iron and steel industry that has been developed at the junction of the navigable rivers, Yangtse and Han. Within a few miles of Wuchang are the great commercial city of Hankow, and the city of Hanyang, where large arms factories and arsenals are located. Hankow was the seat of the reactionary general, Wu Pei-fu before his army was scattered by the victorious Cantonese. All three cities are now in the possession of Canton. Wuchang was the last to fall. The photo above shows the clouds of smoke hovering over the steel mill district now in the hands of the revolution. It was taken from Hankow, across the river.

SIX 'LOONEY GAS' VICTIMS TO GET $350,000 BALM

Standard Oil Settles After Long Fight

NEWARK, Jan. 27.—After nine months of litigation the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has agreed to settle out of court for $350,000 six of the damage suits brought by former employees who were poisoned in October, 1925, by tetraethyl gas, Charles W. Reed, attorney for the men, announced today.

Five men died and thirty-five others were poisoned by the so-called "Looney gas" at the Baywater, N. J. refinery of Standard Oil more than two years ago. When a new refining process was installed, the Standard Oil officials, oblivious of any regard for the health or welfare of their employees, made no attempt to find a ventilating system that would dispose of the poisonous gas it generated.

This negligence on the part of the notorious corporation claimed a toll of over forty victims until public indignation was aroused and the company was forced to employ chemical engineers to remedy the condition.

Six of the men filed suits last summer, and the case was fought until now, when the settlement came. The men have been unable to work since the poisoning, and in most cases it completely ruined their health, making chances for recovery remote. The gas derived its name from the fact that the victims were temporarily driven ravingly insane from its effects.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 27.—Why the American Federationist, official organ of the American Federation of Labor, runs ads of anti-labor corporations month after month is partly disclosed by William Green, nominal editor of the magazine. Green was asked by a correspondent whether the A. F. of L. endorsed the anti-union policies of advertisers in its magazine.

"Selling advertising space in the American Federationist to prodnction companies does not constitute an endorsement of the industrial relations policies of the company," writes Green. "Of course I was quite aware

WASHINGTON IS GOING SLOW ON MEXICO CRISIS

Waiting for Favorable Mass Opinion

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Mexican situation marked time today in so far as this government was concerned.

A copy of the Robinson resolution, placing the Senate on record in favor of upholding the land-law controversy, was before President Coolidge, but there was no indication of any executive action upon it.

Mr. Coolidge is studying the resolution with a view, it is understood, to making a comprehensive statement of the administration's policy toward Mexico, either through a message to Congress or by a public statement, as was done in the Chinese situation.

Secretary of State Kellogg declined today to comment on the resolution in any way.

Mass Opinion Against Him.

While Coolidge insists that Congress has no right to interfere in his foreign policy movements, he is convinced that the Robinson resolution organized mass opinion against intervention.

The administration is determined to carry out the wishes of the oil interests in Mexico and its oily words at the moment show no change of heart.

It is now definitely known that the principal factors in the trouble between Mexico and the United States are the Doheny, Sinclair and Standard Oil of Indiana interests that

Packed Delegations Defeat Free Speech

Progressives Denied Voice Thru Official Journal; Struggle Begins Over Lewis Expulsion Policy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 27.—Powers Hapgood was assaulted for the second time this week by Lewis' payrollers when he demanded recognition at the miners' convention this morning. He was saved from a severe beating only by the massing of progressive delegates about him. The convention was in pandemonium with machine supporters and left wingers on the verge of open conflict, averted only by the presence of a squad of police.

Hapgood arose to defend a resolution sponsored by his local union demanding free speech in the gagged Miner's Journal. Advancing rapidly to the platform, the brilliant young progressive leader called for recognition.

"You are not a delegate to this convention", bellowed Emperor Lewis, pounding with his gavel.

Hapgood flashed his credentials, while Lewis roared "be seated, be seated".

Administration pluguglies rushed up to Hapgood, one of them throwing him 10 feet down the aisle while another launched out with stinging blows to the face. Powers, slight in build and still suffering from the terrific beating inflicted by international union officers last Sunday, put up a brave resistance as progressives ran to his help.

A free for all was stopped only by police interference. Progressives closed ranks and fought for Hapgood's resolution. John Brophy, John Hindmarsh, Leroy Scanlon and Frank Derch denouncing the gag on the journal which excluded the progressives from its pages in the recent election while running long eulogies of Emperor Lewis and his associates.

President Harry Fishwick, Illinois, defended the gag policy. Vice President Murray entered a lengthy discussion of the coal miners, progressive signs, asserting that Albert Coyle of the Engineer's Journal and Verne Smith, former Industrialist editor, were the real editors.

Brophy pleaded for minority rights of expression in the Miners' Journal, which Hindmarsh proclaimed the "flabbiest piece of literature published anywhere on the American continent".

LEWIS SEEKS TO RULE BY TERROR

By JACK KENNEDY.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 27.—Terrorism seeks to rule the convention of the United Mine Workers. It is the terrorism of a ruthless, brutal, relentless machine, guided by the hand of the blackest figure in American trade unionism, Emperor John L. Lewis, that held the convention in its clutches Wednesday and continued to prepare to wipe out every vestige of progressivism in the miners' union.

Progressives, fighting against being swept off their feet, saw the Lewis juggernaut, under perfect discipline and control beat William Stevenson from the platform, threaten to expel left wing forces root and branch, attack the Soviet Union in vicious language unequalled by the national civic federation.

The machine centered on John

First Day and Half of Miners' Convention Shows Ruin Wrought by Lewis

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 27.—After a day and a half of the U. M. W. A. convention it is possible to draw a number of conclusions. They are: (1) The Lewis machine is organizationally stronger from the convention standpoint than three years ago, but is politically much weaker. (2) The weakening of the union which has enabled the machine to tighten its grip on the apparatus of the union has at the same time loosened its hold on the membership. (3) The machine strategy in this convention is of double character and consists of: (a) Bitter personal attacks on John Brophy designed to show him incompetent as a union official and (b) to try to connect him with the Communists and picture him as a mere taken place in the last three years instrument of the "American Moscovites."

Hate To Talk About It.

It is already evident that the weakened point of the Lewis machine is the weakness of the union. An analysis of the president's report, the shortest report made to a U. M. W. A. convention for many years, shows that Lewis has been forced to admit serious losses since the signing of the Jacksonville agreement.

But it is in Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy's report that the Achilles heel of the administration shows palpably. The figures for dues payments show conclusively, when spread over the usual three month intervals, that the total dues paying membership of the U. M. W. A. on January first of this year was only 273,407.

The report shows further, and this is decisive in respect to proving the complete inability of the Lewis machine to win the confidence even of former union men that FROM SEPTEMBER TO JANUARY, DURING THE TIME WHEN ALL PRODUCTION RECORDS WERE BROKEN IN AMERICA DUE TO THE SHORTAGE CREATED BY THE BRITISH STRIKE THE U. M. W. A. ACTUALLY LOST 19,000 MEMBERS.

These figures demonstrate two things conclusively: That the vote in the recent election, as given out by the machine, in round numbers 60,000 for Brophy and 173,000 for Lewis, is a brazen and obvious fraud.

A Miracle!

Consider the figures: The total vote is 233,000. The total dues paying membership is 273,000. This means that with the exception of some 40,000, every member cast a vote!

Such an occurrence is a physical impossibility, and never in the history of the union has there been such a high percentage of ballots cast in either local, district or national election. The first figures sent out by the machine gave the total vote as around 290,000. This figure the administration had to revise after the secretary-treasurer had compiled the membership figures as the first announcement actually made the total vote cast 17,000 more than the dues-paying membership. For these reasons the Lewis machine, in spite of a packed convention, is in deathly fear of the demand for a tabulated vote gaining strength.

Ghostly Locals.

A second great weakness of the machine, and a weakness of which it is miserably conscious, is the discrepancy between the membership figures in Kennedy's report and the size of the delegations from West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, to say nothing of scattered frauds in western Pennsylvania and other sections.

The report shows that a total of 13 local unions in District 31, West Virginia, paid in the last six months' period a total of $1,131.00 in per capita. But in the convention there are seated 166 delegates from this same district with a total of 225 votes which ostensibly represent a membership of approximately 25,000. But the cold figures of the report prove that in the last six months, when the hurrah campaign of organizer Van Bittner was at its height, the actual membership was and still is 377. The brutal truth is that there are 66 delegates from District 31 represent 377 members.

The brass band and the "God bless Van Bittner" gospel shouters which accompany this valiant group everywhere about the convention city does not quite make up its obvious commodity character.

Extraordinary Representation.

District 17 is not quite so bad, but while the secretary's report shows eleven locals paid only $7.80 per capita in six months, there are eighteen delegates here representing eighteen locals.

The figures of the report show that all locals in this district have a total membership of 58. Eighteen delegates representing 58 members is certainly Democracy in excelsis.

District 19, Kentucky, is another shining gem in the Lewis diadem. The secretary's report shows that up to January first there were only eight local unions in this district. These eight locals paid in but $1,488.75 to the national office in six months. But from January first to the first day of the convention there was apparently a marvelous growth of unionism in District 19. It appears in the convention with 16 delegates, representing 16 locals having a total of 64 votes.

District 26, Kentucky, is another example of the manner in which the machine organizes for conventions. The secretary's report shows that

[illegible] ATTACKS [illegible] AGAIN

"Free Speech" Is Dead in Convention

Brophy, leader of the "Save the Union" forces in an effort to destroy utterly his power and prestige, according to Emperor Lewis.

Other International officials also had charged Powers Hapgood unofficially and threatened physical violence against every left winger in the convention.

Preparations to Counter-Attack

In spite of the blows of the Lewis machine, the progressives came back today for a powerful counter-attack en masse. Led brilliantly by Brophy, Hindmarsh, Alexander, Haggerty, Pat Toohey and William Brennan, progressive forces lined up for solid resistance to Emperor Lewis.

Stevenson, running mate of Brophy in the recent miners' election, hit straight at the center of Lewis' control in a ringing speech which set the hall in a pandemonium. Called a "pack of friends" of Brophy, he shouted in Lewis' face that he could and would reveal the true sluminess of the emperor rule in packing the convention with several hundred delegates from dead districts.

Panic-stricken when he saw the veil about to drop from his corruption, Lewis halted Stevenson's biting attack by pounding wildly with his gavel. The platform gang gathered about Stevenson, who had appealed from the decision that he was out of order. Calmly undeterred by the gavel, he was forced from the stage.

Lewis Offers Lebured Defense.

No sooner had Lewis concluded a labored defense of his refusal to publish the election returns of 1924, than Stevenson was on his feet, rushing up the aisle to hurl the lie at Lewis for the "slimy friends" reference.

"I'm as clean a man as John L. Lewis," he shouted.

"A damn sight cleaner," came a shout from the hall as he sailed into the emperor, standing not more than three feet from him.

"Yes, I'm for John Brophy and I'll let my record in the Miners' union stand alongside that of any member," he cried out. "And for mine, I could reveal things about this convention that stink to high heaven."

Lewis Packs the Convention.

"Tell it, tell it," came from the floor. Stevenson lambasted the set-up in West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky, with not more than 1,000 dues paying members, had a bigger representation here than District 5, Western Pennsylvania, whose president earlier in the day had boasted of having 45,000 members.

Reaction snarled out again in the resolution committee's attempt to force a dozen resolutions favoring Soviet union recognition. The machine does not allow hostile resolutions to come to the floor, but presents substitutes which confuse the issue and bewilder the delegates.

The anti-Soviet substitute in unmeasured terms denounced the workers and peasants for setting up a workers' government instead of a democracy. Stale charges that left wingers disrupt American unions because they fight employer's representatives in the unions were rung in. The New York furriers and ladies' garment workers were cited as examples and socialist opposition to the left wing both in New York and Europe emphasized.

Kennedy Speaks for Lewis.

"The American labor movement," concluded the gang committee, "must purge itself of this discordant and destructive element which overnight would destroy our organization."

Secretary Thomas Kennedy, understudy to Lewis, followed with an unbridled attack, in which he coupled the left wing with private detectives and the coal operators. He endorsed the New York so-called committee for the preservation of trade unions, formed by Abraham Beckerman and his aides in the needle trades, and called for constitutional action to drive the left wing from the miners.

President Lee Hall, of Ohio, demanded the immediate expulsion of all Communists from the convention. Emperor Lewis promised him that the constitutional committee would be receptive to an amendment barring all members of the Workers Party from the union.

Resolution is Jammed Thru.

In a wild hysteria engendered by these heated attacks in which left wing delegates were not allowed to take the floor to back the original resolution on the Soviet Union, the lengthy substitute resolution was railroaded thru before progressive forces could catch their breath.

Stevenson shouted a hasty "no." International representative Hoff, Perry and Ely of West Virginia, near him, called out, "wait till we get you in West Virginia."

Delegates for Labor Party.

John W. Hindmarsh, sub-district president in Illinois, spoke forcefully for the Labor Party, deriding the committee's contention that non-partisan political action could [illegible]

SPECIAL MEETING OF [illegible] CALLED

One of the most important meetings of the Workers' School, 108 East 14 St., is a course in the "Needle Trades" with Benjamin Gitlow as instructor. The needle trades interest hundreds of workers in New York and the whole labor movement. The needle trades are the stronghold of the Left Wing. Here the Left Wing has made its greatest gains and has built up a powerful machine which has ability in the industry, experience, and a general fighting spirit and more determination to defend the interests of the American workers.

The new leadership does not desire to rid the old, as Sigman tries to dominate the union and maintain their dictatorship, but depend upon rank and file co-operation and participation in the activities of the union and must rule by and rank and file responsibility to the control of the membership. This means that a great number of the shop chairmen have to be drawn into active direction of the affairs of the union and the shops and be of great value to them in giving them a training in the many specific problems that they are facing.

Benjamin Gitlow has for years been a leading figure in the needle trades movement and he will be assisted in the giving of the course by such elements as Benjamin Gold, Charles Zimmerman and other members of the Left Wing who will be invited to take up special subjects at some of the lectures mentions. This course is open only to active needle trades workers who must get a recommendation from their union or from some progressive group in the union.

The fee for the course is $2.50 for three months. It will run on Monday nights at 8 p. m. beginning the last week in February. Registrations are now being taken for this and 56 other courses offered by the Workers' School for the spring term.

LENIN MEMORIAL IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA. — The Lenin Memorial meeting in Philadelphia this year promises to be the biggest and best since our great leader died. It will take place Friday evening, at 8 o'clock sharp at Labor Institute, 8th and Locust Streets.

The rich program provided contains numbers by the Freiheit Singing Society, the International Orchestra, a play, "Strike," by Mike Gold, which is a mass recitation put on by our local theatrical group, and promises a sensational surprise, dramatic and artistic. Then there is a movie made up of local scenes of an exciting nature. The Pioneers will be on deck with their songs and their young speaker. The Young Workers League has a speaker from New York who will represent the youth at the memorial. C. E. Ruthenberg always instructs, inspires and entertains the workers who have the privilege to hear him. J. O. Bentall, District Organizer, will act as chairman.

We have arranged with the management of the Labor Institute to let us have the lower hall for the overflow. The large hall will be filled first. Those who come early will get the best seats. The same speakers will address both meetings.

Bring your friends and come to this great meeting. Admission is only 25 cents.

At this memorial meeting protest will be made against the imperialist attacks on Mexico and Nicaragua as well as against the war-mongers who are preparing to declare war on China. It will be an international meeting of workers who are getting ready to meet the challenge of the ever increasing brutal capitalism.

Split Bus Patronage Between Walker and Lynch Forces in Board

Three of Mayor Walker's "pet" bus corporations won contracts in the division of the spoils that took place as a compromise measure at the board of estimate hearing yesterday.

The board unanimously voted to authorize the board of transportation to prepare contracts for the award of bus franchises to seven companies. Three of these were Walker's pets, two were backed by the Smith-Byrne faction, and the other two by Borough President Lynch of Richmond.

The unanimity seems to have resulted from an agreement the day before in executive session giving all the members of the board the right to back their favorite bus company.

Furriers Attention! Davis Says N. Y. Cops Won't Club Strikers

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 27.—Jeff Davis, King of Hoboes, has a good story to tell New York's furriers. He told it to the miners' convention here.

New York's cops, way back in 1919, promised Jeff with tears in their eyes never to beat up another striker. That was because the Hobo King had helped them get a raise in pay and increase the widows' pension fund.

Jeff didn't bring the story down to date.

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 27.—Two people were killed and a third person is in a serious condition as the result of a crash between a north-bound passenger train and a bus in which several school children were riding to classes.

Offers Chinese Peace Terms

LONDON, [illegible] — British interest today centered on reports of an offer of settlement of the Nanking-Shanghai crisis, the terms of the proposal to be brought to China and the immediate reaction.

Terms reported described as containing "moderate compromise proposals applicable to all parties" were handed to British Minister Lampson. Officially at Nanking, Chen Yi was directed to present the communication to Eugene Chen, the Cantonese foreign minister, and secure a reply at the earliest possible hour.

It is reported in diplomatic circles tonight that the new memorandum instructions to O'Malley, besides dealing with financial and fiscal relations also concerns the administration and the policing of the concessions.

Details Kept Secret.

Although the details of the memorandum are being kept secret, reports indicate it will probably suggest to Chen that the Chinese be represented on and associated with foreign municipal bodies which administer the affairs of the concessions.

Also it will probably be suggested that, subject to certain guarantees, the policing of the concessions will eventually be largely done by the Chinese.

It is admitted that an earlier memorandum offering "to treat with any Chinese government demonstrating an authoritative capacity" did not satisfy Chen.

Cabinet Dodge.

Today's communication is intended to serve the purpose of reiterating a non-aggressive claim. The cabinet's position is being made difficult by the charge of nearly all other political parties that the government is dominated by the militarists and the "die hards" of the war party.

Demands Recognition of Cantonese.

The independent labor party of Great Britain issue a manifesto demanding recognition of the sovereignty and the full independence of China. Reprisals of labor was threatened if warlike activities continue.

Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, immediately issued an official reply saying the British government "desires to promote a friendly settlement of the outstanding difficulties with the Chinese and is ready to make liberal concessions."

Usually Supports Right Wing.

The independent labor party which was led by Ramsey MacDonald before he became premier, now professes to be left but usually supports the right wing in emergencies. Its manifesto said:

"We urge the British government to declare publicly that the recognition of the full independence and the sovereignty of China, right to occupy concession areas, and treaty ports are incompatible with the independence and sovereignty and the British government should state that are prepared to forego such rights and enter into fair negotiations with the nationalist government to demonstrate the sincerity of their new attitude and to withdraw all military and naval forces from Chinese territory and waters.

"This would do more to protect British lives than all the gunboats bayonets, tanks, and bombs that our government can command.

Calls For Conference.

"We urge the executives of the labor party to immediately join in summoning a national labor convention to express the hostility of the working classes to war with China."

In the meantime troop movements continue. It is announced that 20,000 men will be available in fifty days to protect British interests in the Far East. After the departure of the royal marine battalion from Portsmouth today all the troops that are going to China from this country will sail either Friday or Saturday. The remaining units will sail from Malta on Saturday.

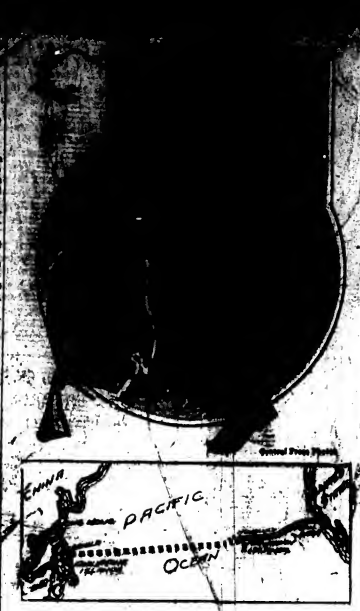
California Labor Head Against War on Mexico

By L. P. RINDAL
(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Paul Scharrenberg, secretary of the California State Federation of Labor and spokesman for that organization, has recently returned from one of his many trips to Mexico. On his return he said:

"A war on Mexico, threatened by our diplomats, means annexation of a sister republic and the beginning of a dangerous policy of military imperialism for the United States. War on Mexico over any political or financial question is abhorrent to the American masses. It is unthinkable that we can be plunged into war at the dictates of Wall Street interests —seeking profits, profits and more profits. We want no war with Mexico, and we want no imperialistic adventures into any Latin-American republics."

Protest meetings are being held and resolutions passed. But only one daily, the Los Angeles Record, comes out openly against the "dollar diplomacy" of Coolidge and Kellogg.



Messrs. Coolidge and Kellogg, President and Secretary of State in the name of Wall Street, find military propaganda more necessary than ever now that the exploited nations of the world are seeking their imperialist masters. But they're not feeding the public the old tame pictures of a beau drum and a squad of marines. A two hundred powder straddling an airplane catches the imagination of romantic kids much more effectively.

The heavyweight on the plane is Lieut. W. E. Wallace and the lad in the inset is his flight companion, Lee Schoenhair. The two of them are to span the Pacific in a giant monoplane—flying from San Diego to Hong Kong, with a few intermediate stops, early in March.

Flights like these serve the War Department with the military propaganda with which it feeds the public in the movies and the magazines. An unbroken flight from California and Honolulu, which are 2,200 miles apart, stirs the imagination and provides military propagandists with their ammunition.

CHINESE ARMIES ARE CONVERGING ON SHANGHAI

Now Outside Cantonese City of Hankow

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. — The menace to American lives and property in China became more acute today as two more Chinese armies were converged on Shanghai and Hankow, according to reports to the state department.

The United States is understood to be quite willing to encourage the nationalistic aims of China.

Reports from Admiral C. S. Williams, Commander-in-Chief of the American fleet in Chinese waters, said that the northern and southern Chinese armies are sweeping down the valley. They are now outside Hankow, which already has been captured by the Cantonese and are planning a rapid march from there to Shanghai.

BANKERS PLOT TO GET CONTROL OF NICARAGUA

State Department Made The Arrangements

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. — Attempts of American bankers, with the connivance of the state department, to secure control of the Nicaraguan government and of the government's finances, banking and customs, were revealed by the Senate Foreign Relations Sub-Committee by Torinio Tijerino, former financial agent of Nicaragua.

Tijerino declared that the state department dictated the confirmation of Diaz for president in 1911, charging that the American minister in Nicaragua at that time cabled the department that "the assembly will confirm Diaz in the presidency according to any plans which the state department may indicate. A war vessel is necessary for the moral affect."

KELLOGG CHARGED BY BORAH WITH GARBLING TESTIMONY OF RADICAL PROPAGANDA IN LATIN AMERICA

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The senate foreign relations committee today declined to make public recent testimony of Secretary of State Kellogg in which he charged that Communism is responsible for many disturbances to undermine the United States.

Committee members felt that Kellogg, if he wanted the testimony made public, should appear in open session. After his appearance in the closed meeting, Kellogg issued a statement assailing Communist propaganda on the American continent.

At the same time, the committee postponed action on the Wheeler resolution demanding withdrawal of marines from Nicaragua, and the Norris resolution, calling for an investigation of charges that the state department sought to influence press associations to carry anti-Mexican propaganda.

The committee's action is with holding publication of Kellogg's testimony was explained by Senator Borah, (R) of Idaho, chairman, as follows:

"It was the judgment of the committee that the record which we have before us is incomplete in the sense that the secretary has deleted important parts of the testimony which he gave. We had a perfect right to do, but it leaves the record in such condition that it does not record what happened at the hearing, and that therefore we think it unwise under such conditions to make it public.

Kellogg Withheld Facts.

"Second, the committee was of the opinion that we ought not to establish the practice of having executive sessions and then after the executive session has been held, of giving out portions of the record as the result of the hearing. If the hearings are to be open they ought to be open from the beginning."

In a fervid plea for the withdrawal of American forces from Nicaragua, Senator Wheeler of Montana accused President Coolidge of "misleading" Congress and the country in his message on the Latin-American situation. He charged the administration with raising the cry of Bolshevism in "an effort to justify war with Mexico."

When Wheeler was attacked by administration defenders he denied any attempt to embarrass the President but declared that the United States will lose its prestige in Latin America and with it billions of dollars in trade.

Kellogg Denies Talking Of Recognition

that United States' interest in China was entirely in a more altruistic than that of the British. Despite the United States has the commercial interests with Great Britain has, was China recommended on here and chartered ships, whereas Britain ship owners. Diplomatic sticking supported the that spark a wealthy capitalist class as that of the United States could not at least afford to espouse the cause of a high school graduate to [illegible] Kellogg's documents.

The substance of the secretary of state's opposition is: We have large interests in Latin America, therefore we pay bolshevism instead of state departments in China pay governments are a mere bagatelle as we wish the Chinese a happy New Year.

Belated Show of Friendship.

The statement has the somewhat belated generosity of the United States government, in welcoming "every advance" of the Chinese people, while watching their sufferings during recent years at the hands of foreign imperialism without lifting a finger in their behalf, is in striking contrast to the action of the Soviet government which ditched the unfair treaties between the Czarist government of China without any attempt at bargaining. While the other powers deliberately humiliated China by declining to raise their representatives in Peking to the rank of ambassador as is the custom [illegible] countries of any importance the Soviet Union immediately appointed an ambassador to China and received a Chinese representative in Moscow.

The contrast [illegible] on the treatment accorded to China by the Soviet government and that of the imperialist powers is not lost on the Chinese masses. The more farsighted of the Chinese philosophers express the opinion that for business reasons the United States made a mistake in not cultivating Chinese friendship before instead of cooperating with Great Britain in blocking the nationalist movement.

U. S. Minister Returns.

PEKING, Jan. 27.—John V. A MacMurray, American minister to Peking, returned here today simultaneously with the publication here of Secretary of State Kellogg's statement of the United States' policy toward China.

MacMurray came here from Seoul, Korea, where he was halted earlier in the week while enroute to the United States on furlough, by instructions from the American state department to return to his post because of the seriousness of the Chinese situation.

British Confusing Issue.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The British government is tended at making the best of a bad bargain. Yesterday, the official government press groaned and grumbled because Washington did not see fit to shoulder a portion of "the white man's burden" in China, but let it all for poor, overburdened John Bull to carry.

Today the same papers have discovered that there is no fundamental difference between the United States policy and that of the British government since both governments are bleeding inwardly with consideration for the happiness of the "great Chinese people."

Has More at Stake.

Theforeig n office is peddling the Kellogg statement to the country and trying to convince the masses that the British and United States policies are identical except in the sense that Britain having more at stake in China than the United States, must use different methods.

Despite opposition from labor circles British military preparations continue. It seems that the manifestoes of the right wing are not taken very seriously by the government. The left wing is suspicious that at the recent conference between Ramsey MacDonald, George Hicks and other labor leaders and Sir Austen Chamberlain that the foreign secretary was given to understand that the labor opposition would not embarrass the government. Sir Austen was told, it was said, that the labor leaders were obliged to maintain appearances with their followers in the trade unions who are decidedly anti-war.

Apprehension is expressed in government circles that the Cantonese will have captured Shanghai before the full strength of the British forces arrive there.

French Press Dissembling.

PARIS, Jan. 27.—While the right wing French press is blaming the United States for the revolutionary movement in China, though throwing part of the blame on the Soviet government, it is significant that the French government turned down the request of the British for cooperation and France is not sending any troops to China, one paper gloomily observes that the powers are less united than ever.

VOROSHILOFF IN SPEECH WARNS OF WESTERN ARMIES

Border States Building Fascist Groups

MOSCOW, Jan. 27.—Peoples Commissar for War Voroshiloff in a speech here has sounded a note of warning over the increased warlike preparations of the border states on the west, and the possible results of the Franco-Roumanian treaty in stiffening the war parties in Roumania and her neighbors. He calls on the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union to be "psychologically prepared" as well as materially prepared.

Uncover Military Clubs.

Moscow evening papers contain revelations of the development of semi-official "defense corps" of armed and drilled men in certain countries along the Russian border. There are 100,000 members of reactionary semi-military organizations in Finland, the most important units belonging to the "Shutskorps," which receives an annual subsidy of 1,500,000 rubles from the Finnish government.

Esthonia and Latvia both have private volunteer armies in addition to their regular troops, those of Esthonia numbering about 25,000.

Pilsudski's Legions.

Poland carries this policy to great lengths, the Strelitzi, Marshall Pilsudski's personally controlled military organization numbering a quarter of a million men, and being constantly added to. It has more than doubled in size since Pilsudski seized power, and receives large sums of money from the state treasury.

Another development which the Russian workers are closely watching is the growth of fascist bodies, and the establishment of fascist governments in these states. These are the direct result of the increasing misery and discontent of the people on the one hand, and the growing rapaciousness of the upper and middle classes on the other, combined with the determination of financiers still farther west that there must not be revolutions in the states established on the Russian border.

Fascism Thrives.

Poland and Lithuania are now under military control similar to Mussolini's in Italy, a fascist coup in Latvia was only put down in the nick of time, and there is continual organization of fascist groups in Roumania, with the notorious Crown Prince Carol mentioned as at least their nominal leader.

U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT CODE LOAN AIDED CHAMORRO REVOLT IN NICARAGUA IN 1925

WASHINGTON, (FP)—How the Chamorro revolt against the constitutional government in Nicaragua in 1925 was promoted by the state department's loan of its secret code to Prof. Jeremiah Jenks, was told by M. Torino Tijerino, formerly secretary to Chamorro and fiscal agent of Nicaragua, in testimony before the Shipstead sub-committee of the senate foreign relations committee on Jan. 25. Tijerino was reciting the history of American investments and financial strategy in his country.

Jenks was a $15,000-a-year director on the board of the Nicaraguan railroad, which was being managed, under contract, by the J. G. White Management Corporation. President Salorzano, in 1925, ordered the cancellation of this operating contract, as the road was being bankrupted. Jenks got permission in Washington to use the state department code to urge the American minister in Managua to ask Salorzano to maintain the contract. A representative of the White concern promised that many things might happen, if a month's delay were granted. Before the month was up, the revolt took place.

RAKOSI CASE UP TO HORTHY HIGH COURT OF APPEAL

Protest of World Labor Forces New Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUDAPEST, Jan. 27.—The Rakosi case, in which thirteen Communists were sentenced to prison for ten years last August by the lower courts of Hungary, is now on the docket of the supreme court here. Despite the attempt by the Horthy fascists to deny them the right of appeal, the world-wide protests made by incensed workers has forced the white terrorists to grant them a hearing before the higher court.

Much satisfaction is being expressed in radical circles here over this partial triumph over the Horthy faction, which, it is believed, intended to execute the fifteen living defendants just as they disposed of Peter Nemet, who died in prison recently.

Nemet, Red Leader, Tortured.

Comrade Nemet was one of the heroes who carried on the fight against the white terror. He was a leader of the Red Army during the dictatorship, and participated in the last congress of the Communist party of Hungary. For this he was arrested and tortured.

As a result of the rigors of prison life, he became ill. All physical care was denied him. His condition became worse, and after his captors did everything to hasten his end, he died. His death was kept secret even from his relatives, and did not become known until now, when the trial was mentioned on the supreme court docket.

Hungarian workers are appealing to class-conscious workers everywhere to hold protest meetings and demand the release of Comrade Rakosi and his friends.

Two Fascists Shot In Bronx Gun Duel

Two men were wounded in a feud at 187th street and Crotona aveaue, the Bronx, last night, in which knife and gun-play threw the neighborhood into an uproar.

Victor Di Bari, of 187 East 188th street, was wounded in the left arm and leg, and Salvatore Di Giacomo, 25, of 2353 Crotona avenue, received two bullet wounds in the right arm. Both were taken to Fordham hospital, where it was said the condition of neither was serious.

Questioned by Assistant District Attorney William A. Kier, of the Bronx, they admitted they were fascist sympathizers.

PAPERBOX UNION CONTINUES FIGHT AGAINST BOSSES

Manufacturers Spurn All Settlement Efforts

The Citizens' Committee on the paper makers strike, met again last night in a public hearing, at 43 West 16th street, to decide upon a possible way of settling the strike. The committee is headed by Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, of the Social Service Commission, who has the full confidence of such men as Bishop Manning, Dr. John Cardinal Robbins, Colgate Hoyt, Henry Goddard Leach and William Cutting.

Refuse To Recognize Union.

The paper manufacturers have refused to recognize the union in the settlement of the strike. A representative of the Committee had a conference with Mr. Kastor, and his associates, who were represented by the attorney, Mr. Collins. At this conference Mr. Kastor said that the bosses will not recognize the union, but that they are willing to sign a closed shop agreement with the union, provided that the bosses will have the right to discharge any worker for any reason. A week ago, this was also the attitude of the bosses, but since their experience has been such, that they will have nothing further to do with the union.

Statement Declared Arrogant.

This statement was characterized by Norman Thomas as "most arrogant and arrogant," he implored the committee not to discontinue its effort to adjudicate the differences. Thomas stated that it would be a calamity if the bosses are permitted to continue in their tactics to employ the New York city police for so-called protection, but actually, to club the strikers.

He also stated that the employers are now pitting their financial reserves against the power of the strikers, whose treasury is depleted. It was pointed out that eight attempts have been made by various church and social institutions to have the bosses meet with the strikers and to discuss the problem of settlement. At each time the employers declined. The committee decided at the end of the meeting to send a delegation to Mayor Walker, and ask for relief measures.

DARE SIGMAN TO LET MEMBERSHIP DECIDE QUARREL

Hyman Justifies Board Before Ingersol

Another challenge to Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, to hold a general election and let the members themselves determine who were the authorized leaders of the union was given by Louis Hyman, general manager of the joint board when he met with International officials before the impartial chairman, Raymond V. Ingersoll, yesterday afternoon.

"Taken Over."

In answer to some of Mr. Hyman's objections about the certified union submitting which Sigman and his followers have created, the International president declared that the joint board was not expelled, but its affairs had been taken over by the International which had a perfect right to do this in a case of emergency.

Illegal Anyway.

"Well, whatever you call it—expulsion or not," said Hyman, "it is illegal. You have no authority to do it. If you have such autocratic powers as you claim, why didn't you prevent the strike in July instead of talking about it 25 weeks later?"

Louis Hyman, representing the joint board, and Morris Sigman, David Dubinsky, Morris Hillquit, and S. Hagel, representing the International, met before the impartial chairman to discuss a settlement of a complaint in which the chairman had dealt with the regularly elected joint board instead of the International's put joint board.

Hyman accused Sigman of attempting to force the impartial chairman into a position where he would seem to approve the International's policy and therefore strengthen its attack upon the workers. At the close of the discussion, Hyman asked permission, which was granted, to file a formal reply to a lengthy legal statement which had been presented by Mr. Hillquit.

AUDIT WRECKS MORTON'S PLAN TO RETAIN JOB

Reactionary Secretary Of Carpenters Jailed

The arrest yesterday of Richard Morton, expelled member and former financial secretary of Local 2090 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, was brought to a climax the charges made by the membership of that union, that vast amounts of the union's funds had been embezzled by the reactionary officialdom.

These charges were supported by an investigation of Morton's private possessions, which, it was argued, he could never have acquired through his salary as financial secretary. It was proven that he has quite a substantial bank account, and that he also holds deeds for six houses in this city.

Attacks "Reds."

Morton, who at the last election failed to be re-elected as officer in his local union, appealed to Hutcheson, general president of the Brotherhood, that he was being made the victim of an ousting campaign, instituted by the "Reds," and asked him to investigate the election returns. This was done wit hthe end in view, that such official action would suspend the local, expel the progressives, and he would again recapture his former position.

Graft Disclosed.

Hutcheson appointed Mr. Guerin, a member of the executive board to investigate the charges of embezzlement of local 2090, but on hearing that the union was certified unanimously, immediately rejected Morton's appeal from the election returns, and left him to his own fate.

The investigation of Guerin, dealing only with the last years' finances, nevertheless revealed a shortage in the union treasury of $6364.61. The result of this finding prompted the membership of local 2090, to immediately expel Morton from their organization.

More Stealing.

It was then decided to employ the help of a public accountant, to go over the total books since the time when Morton had taken office seven years ago. The accountant's report was rendered on Dec. 7, and stated that a complete audit could not be made since several of the ledgers are missing.

A detailed statement reveals the fact that from the period of April 1, 1924 to December 31, 1924, the total funds missing amount to $1,893.08. Of the items listed as missing are 80 initiation payments, the weekly incomes of 14 meeting nights, monthly dues payments of six members; fifty items of payments of the day book were not carried of the ledger.

Trial Monday.

On the strength of this report, local 2090 asked the district attorney for a warrant for the arrest of Morton, with the result talht he is at present held in jail. Morton's brother yesterday offered a mortgage bond of $100,000 for the prisoners' release.

Will Act On Beckerman

Meet Saturday To Hear Of Trucksters

Abraham Beckerman's complete roll-out of the clothing workers union, in the needle trades, his unexplained flirting of the Italian fascist element, and his protected by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Section of the U. E. L. in a mass meeting at big hall this Saturday at 1 o'clock (at Rivington), Orchestra, 142 Second Avenue.

Angered by the illegal tactics he used in yesterday's elections, in which all the candidates were members of the Beckerman right wing faction, since members of the left wing were refused positions on the ballot, the progressive members of the clothing workers union are now prepared to force the issue.

No Regard For Workers.

"It is charged by the workers that Beckerman has reorganized the shops according to the wishes of the bosses with no regard for the workers, and that when active workers protested, he had them thrown out of the shops also.

Speakers at meetings of the progressive unionists are the most recent victims of Beckerman's sabotage, the "Mussolini" of the clothing trade having threatened that he would do his best to "run them out of the industry".

Prefers Scabs.

Beckerman told one of the progressives, it is charged, that he would rather give the work to scab shops than permit members of the T. U. E. L. to hold jobs in shops over which he has control.

Because they refused to sign statements condemning the Trade Union Educational League, left wing candidates for joint board positions were refused a place on the ballot, which was submitted to the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union yesterday. In order to set on record their disapproval of the Beckerman regime, members of the left wing have refused to take part in the election, and an effort will be made to have the "fixed" results set aside.

Kalpokas Framed.

Speakers at Saturday's meeting will include Sasha Zimmerman, of the Cloak Makers union, Ben Gold, of the Furriers union, and Ben Gitlow, S. Liptzin, L. Nelson, P. Aronberg, A. Rannells, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

At the meeting, considerable indignation will surely appear over the frame-up of Business Agent Kalpokas of Local 54, a left-winger. Beckerman demanded the resignation of Kalpokas, charging that he had distributed T. U. E. L. circulars in his shop.

Kalpokas Vindicated.

A general meeting of Local 54 was called and an election held, and Kalpokas was vindicated by the rank and file by a vote of 300 to 16. Despite this, Beckerman still insisted on Kalpokas resignation.

An interesting sidelight on yesterday's election is the fact that of the six candidates for the positions of Jewish Business Agents, not one can even sign his name in yiddish, all being Beckerman gangsters.

BOSS SWINDLES GIRL STRIKERS AT GARFINKEL'S

Paints Factory; Orders Work; Can't Move

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 27.—Striking workers from the Garfinkel and Ritter shop who went there today to collect for the shortages found in their pay envelopes last Saturday, were informed by the boss that no money was due them. There had been no price agreement for the work they were employed on when they struck, and without informing them, the boss had decided to reduce the rate of pay.

Receipt Before See Pay.

Because of the system in operation at this shop, the girls had all received for their pay "in full" before they opened their envelopes. There would have been no chance of collecting even if they had not already gone on strike against this and many other intolerable conditions in this shop.

It was learned today that while the firm was spreading rumors that it would take its business away from the city and leave the strikers without jobs, the boss is actually painting the whole factory, importing a carload of work and getting ready to reopen next week when he thinks the girls will be ready to return.

They Want Union.

Garfinkel and Ritter have already offered the strikers an increase in pay; but they refuse to listen to the demand for a union. The girls do not go back to work until their union is recognized as well as an increase of wages granted.

Their determination to continue the fight is illustrated by the courage with which some of the girls face severe hardships for the sake of gaining a union. One girl is Pt. Her 21-year old husband is going blind from working in a dye works. They have a child whose board must be paid regularly. The husband must have an eye specialist to try to save part of his sight. The girl is the sole support of this family, yet she came out on strike and is a strike committee member.

True Courage.

Another girl is a learner who was earning $5 a week. She has 5 younger brothers, eldest of whom is 11. The father is sick and cannot work and she is the sole support of the family.

Unconscious Support of Imperialism

The League for Industrial Democracy, a small society of liberal and socialist intellectuals, recently sent a telegram to President Coolidge and various senators on Nicaragua and Mexico in which it shows the utopian pacifist character of its views on American imperialism. The part of the telegram dealing with Nicaragua reads:

"The Board of Directors for the League of Industrial Democracy urges, with regard to Nicaragua, withdrawal of marines unless by mutual consent they do temporary police duty and supervise elections."

If the League for Industrial Democracy had any great mass of influence this would be precisely the kind of endorsement for the keeping of the marines in Nicaragua that the government could utilize. Even if Sacasa and Diaz, or any additional number of leaders of the Nicaraguan factions, could be induced to accept the intervention of the American marines under the guise of supervising their elections and policing their country, this would not warrant our saying that the Nicaraguan people had consented to such a shameful procedure. Moreover, anyone who is not blinded by utopian illusions will know that even if the American marines are there by mutual consent of conflicting factions or leaders, they will still be at the service of Brown Bros., Seligman and Speyer, the big banking houses that are using the American marines and governmental power to oppress the Nicaraguan people. The American government intervened by "mutual consent" in the Tacna-Arica case, but the fact that mutual consent had been secured did not prevent the government serving the interest of our copper barons there and the "mutual consent" ended in mutual indignation.

It is generally easy to get weak parties and elements, afraid of the menacing power of the American army, "to consent" to the presence of American marines rather than risk the danger of having said marines support only the consenting rivals. What Sacasa needs is energetic support and the calling off of the marines altogether. What the American people need is that our government and army and navy shall not be put at service of our bankers under any circumstances and that even with "mutual consent" the marines be not used to police sovereign countries, supervise or decide elections and interfere in internal affairs. Any Latin American, who would consent to American marines policing his country and supervising elections in it, is an open traitor to his country and the fact that you get two traitors to consent does not improve the situation any. It only gives the American bankers a freer hand and gives imperialism a protective coloring of pacifist endorsement.

We have no doubt but that the League for Industrial Democracy and Mr. Norman Thomas, who sent the telegram, had the best intention in the world, but it is precisely this type of well-intentioned pacifism that unconsciously serves the interest of American imperialism in justifying the sending of our marines to interfere with the internal affairs of other countries at the command of American bankers and generally with the consent of one or more tools of American imperialism in the countries in question. If Sacasa were to consent to such an infamous arrangement, he would lose all claim to support alike with Diaz who has always been an open tool of American imperialism and is always ready to consent to the intervention of the American marines.

Marxism Versus Loreism

It took Ludwig Lore a column and a half of editorial in Tuesday's Volkszeitung to attempt to answer our editorial of the 22nd in which we pointed out that Ludwig Lore was going the way of the union-wreckers who are trying to expel the Communists and left wingers from the workers' organizations.

Lore's excuse is in the first place that he is not responsible for what is proposed in Volkszeitung conferences! In other words Lore denies that he is the real leader of such men as Blohm, who made the proposal. A leader is responsible for the activities of those that follow him. In order to prove his innocence Lore suddenly becomes a "rank-and-filer" and Blohm becomes the leader. Moreover, Lore was very careful to keep his mouth shut while the discussion on the expulsion of ten delegates of workers' organizations was being discussed.

His second excuse is to compare such elements as the delegates from the bakers' union to "the strikebreaker who works against the interests of his union." Yet this bakers' union has devoted years of activity and energy and sacrifice to the building and maintaining of the Volkseitung which Lore is trying to convert into his personal organ.

His third answer is that "The Volkszeitung will go neither to the socialist party nor to the Workers Party—but will continue on the path of revolutionary socialism as Karl Marx, Frederick Engels, and Lenin taught it." A most unworthy slander on Marx, Engels, and Lenin, Brother Lore to say that they believed in being outside of the working class parties! It's a funny kind of Marxism and a funny kind of Leninism, that omits the role of the working class party in leading the working class. Such Marxism is not Marxism brother Lore. It is Loreism!

Chicago Daily News Questions Answered by Russian Communist

By G. MELNITCHANSKY.

Some time ago Louise Weed, the foreign correspondent of the Chicago Daily News asked G. Melnitchansky, president of the Moscow Central Labor Council several questions concerning the effect of the revolution on the social and cultural positions of the Russian workers and on their material conditions.

Whether the Daily News published the answers given by Melnitchansky or not, they are of much interest to American workers. Therefore, the first three questions and answers were published. We herewith publish the answers to the last four questions.

Question 4. Is the practice of basing a workman's rental for lodgings upon his wages an unfair burden on the state by compelling the latter to maintain buildings at a loss and enabling employing organizations to pay the worker less than would be necessary if he were paying the actual expense of the lodging?

Rent Is Small Item.

Answer: The rent and charges for municipal services do not constitute a large item of expense in the worker's budget. This method of calculating the rent was adopted during the civil war, when wages were low. We consider that it would be more correct to have wages raised to such an extent that the workers could cover the cost of maintenance and repairs of his apartment. We are endeavoring to carry it into effect in our wage policy, but the economic condition of our industries still is such that it will be possible to bring it about gradually. But even if we do carry that into effect, we shall still adhere to the class principle of our rent policy, i. e., the whole burden of maintenance and repairs should rest upon the non-laboring and possessing class.

Question 5. In what way is the condition of the worker in the USSR better than that of the worker in the United States?

Answer: In the United States the working class is enslaved politically and economically, disorganized, and its forces are scattered. The arbitrary rule of united capital; which has stripped power and all its agencies—the police, the army, the courts and the press, is so oppressive and so revolting that nothing like it exists in any other country. In the United States there are labor spies, strike-breaking agencies, provocation, the right of every plant to have its own special police-guard armed from head to foot, with armored cars and machine-guns, while the workers are denied the right to bear arms. All that is perfected more and more with such successful results year by year. The workers, under these conditions, are deprived of the right and possibility to carry on an economic struggle, because it is doomed to failure when facing such a formidable armed enemy.

Workingclass Holds Power.

In the USSR the situation is entirely different. The big industries belong to the state, in which the working class holds the reins of power. If there are private employers who exploit hired labor, the conditions of exploitation are restricted by law and controlled by the trade unions and, besides, the employers are deprived of political rights and so cannot use their pocketbooks in order to make the government administration, the courts, the press, the legislative bodies subservient to them. All laws are framed solely with a view of serving the interests of the working class and the laboring peasants. The courts, the army, the police, the press—everything is in the side of the workers and peasants. Spy and strike-breaking agencies are unthinkable here, and it is needless to say that private manufacturers are forbidden to possess arms and to hire their own police. In short, the whole political power with all its attributes—the army, police, the courts, the press, is in the hands of the working class and on the side of the workers, and it is ready at any moment to defend the life and interests of the working class. If such power were in the hands of the working class in the United States, if they should establish there such an order, the conditions of life of the working class there with such riches and high technique, would be better than in the USSR.

Question 6. Is the condition of the worker in the United States better or equal to that of the worker in USSR?

Still Partially Blockaded.

Answer. Politically the condition of American workers is worse than that of the workers in the USSR, economically it is better in the first glance. But in this case no comparison can be drawn between the richest country in the world, with its immense industries and inexhaustible supply of gold drained from Europe, particularly since the world war, and the USSR, which always was industrial backward country, which had consequently passed through a civil war, unprecedented by its ruthlessness and cruelties and the intervention of the United States, Great Britain and France, and which to this day is partially subjected to blockaded country and boycotted by bourgeois states.

The question should have been put this way: how much better would the condition of the working class in the United States be than that of the working class in the USSR if they should gain power there and establish the same regime as in the USSR? If the question should be put this way, it might be answered that the economic condition of the workers would be considerably better. The working class would gain possession of great industries with a highly perfected technique of production, enormous riches which would enable the American workers to solidify their power without such grave sacrifices as were borne by our workers.

The wages of American workers are higher than in the USSR. But out of $2,000,000 people gainfully employed, 3,000,000 are out of work the whole year round and in the winter their number reaches 6,000,000; a large percentage of the employed work on the average 6 to 8 months in the year, because of the seasonal nature of their work. The unemployed are left to shift for themselves, they suffer hunger and cold and are evicted from their homes. No one is sure that he or she may not at any moment lose the job without any advance notice.

Among the people gainfully employed there are 8 million women and over 1,600,000 children between the ages of 10 to 15 whose conditions of work are not regulated by a national law of the trade unions. In the United States prostitution is widespread not only among the unemployed, but even among the women and girls employed in factories and stores, because of their extremely low wages.

The law does not fix the work hours of women and children or of men in harmful trades and in many cases they work more than 8 hours a day. Despite the high technique of production, labor is not protected and there are on the average 2,458,400 industrial accidents in a year, of which number 21,232 result in the workers' death. Industrial accidents in the USSR workers lose 2,250,000 work-days and more than a billion dollars in wages. The workers are not insured against accidents. As there is no social insurance in the United States in case of any sickness the worker is placed in an impossible position, being liable to find himself in the street and entering a pauper's existence. Can such condition of the working class as such be considered good?

Labor Is Protected.

Ours is a poor country, yet the 8-hour day has been established everywhere and in harmful trades—in the chemical industry, mining, etc.—the 6-hour day. Night work of women is forbidden for the most part; they are also forbidden to work at injurious occupations. Labor is protected. Child labor in factories and shops is forbidden. Minors of 14 to 16 years of age are allowed to work only 6 hours a day.

At all offices and institutions those engaged in non-manual work (except those directly connected with the industry, as factory-office employes) have the 6-hour day. All workers get an annual vacation of two weeks, minors get one month, workers at injurious trades, one month, all with pay. Woman during pregnancy are entitled by law to 4 months' vacation in the case of manual workers and to 8 months in the case of non-manual, with full pay. We also have unemployment insurance which covers all persons who work by hire and which is carried at the expense of the employers.

Free Medical Aid.

The amount of unemployment relief is dependent upon the qualifications of the unemployed, but there is a fixed minimum less than which may not be paid. Besides the regular benefit, the unemployed are entitled to free medical aid, the same as the employed, and they retain the right to benefit during their illness. If the unemployed becomes an invalid he has a right to a pension. Unemployed women receive the largest benefits during the 8 weeks before and 8 weeks after confinement. The unemployed are also entitled to a special allowance for a new-born infant, for infant feeding during nine months and for the burial of members of their families, the same as all insured.

In addition, the unemployed are exempted from taxes and enjoy certain privileges in regard to municipal services, etc.

The government bodies make special appropriations for public works and for the organization of labor groups, which give employment to a considerable number of unemployed.

The trade unions also render considerable aid to their unemployed members, establishing special unemployment funds for this purpose. If all these measures were carried out for the benefit of the working class in the United States, the condition of the workers there would be better than in our country.

Question 7. In a country where the state is practically the sole employer, where the workers truly control the state, so that the worker is both employer and employe, what is the need of the Profession? Is it not a duplication of state work and expense?

Basic Industries State-owned.

Answer: In this country the form of administration of industry is of a transitory nature. The basic industries are in the hands of the state, the small industries and a considerable part of distribution of production—commerce—are still in the hands of private traders and public organizations. The conditions of industrial employment still bear traces of the capitalist order. As the labor force is hired, there is still the necessity of regulating the conditions of work and wages; there still exists surplus value, which is used to enlarge and develop industry, to improve the condition of the worker and the country. The industries, individual factories and mills are the property of the working class as a whole, the property of the state, of the entire class, not any individual group of workers employed at a given plant. The factories and mills are managed and operated by the state in agreement with the trade unions, which especially the general economic bodies, and not by the workers employed there.

The profits of individual undertakings are not divided among the workers employed at the plant, but belong to the state, and any deficit is not covered by the workers but by the state. All these conditions require the existence of trade unions, whose tasks include the regulation of conditions of work, wages, the organization and the hiring of labor, etc. The activity of individual trade unions is thus directed to serve the everyday needs of the workers of a given industry in conformance to the interests of the working class as a whole. The trade unions do not perform tasks analogous to those of state and economic bodies, because they do not manage the industries or rule the state. Their activity in this direction is exercised by their taking part in the election of governing bodies, in the selection of economic organs, by proposing their candidates and aiding in framing the measures for the improvement of industrial management, by sharing in the control over the various economic bodies, taking part in the consideration of legislative proposals, etc. All that is done in addition to their basic task, which is the protection of the every-day economic interests of the workers.

Committee Organized In Minneapolis to Fight Intervention

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 27.—A Provisional Committee against Intervention in Nicaragua, Mexico and China has been formed here, and is organizing protest meetings to oppose the department of state's imperialistic policy in Central America and China. An emergency conference to map out the work was called at the farmer labor headquarters last Friday night. It is planned to organize regular conferences, either for both Twin Cities, or separately for St. Paul and Minneapolis.

More Tax "Reduction" Talk.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Republicans will press for a big tax reduction in the next congress, convening a year hence, Rep. Madden (R) of Illinois, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, declared today after a conference at the White House. The size of the slash will be between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000, Madden said.

N. Y. Censorship.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 27.—The so-called clean books bill was introduced in the legislature today by Senator Kennedy, New York Democrat, and Assemblyman Godfrey, Rockland Republican. The measure would provide for a censorship of all publications. Similar bills were defeated at the last four sessions of the legislature.

A NEW NOVEL

Upton Sinclair

Bunny worked the trick, and shook off the other car; then he left his own in a public garage for storage, and made the purchase of a two-passenger closed car under the name of "Alex H. Jones." The dealers' receipt would serve for a license temporarily, and Bunny counted out eighteen of his hundred dollar bills, and drove away. Half an hour later he was in the town of San Pasqual, driving past the corner specified. He passed it twice, and the second time Dad stepped out of a hotel, and Bunny showed up, and then away they went! "Anybody following you?" were Dad's first words, and Bunny said, "I don't think so, but we'll make sure." They swung round several corners, and Dad kept watch through the rear windows. "All hunkydory," he said, at last, and Bunny asked, "Where are we going?" The answer was, "To Canada"; and Bunny, who had been prepared for anything, took the boulevard that led north of San Pasqual.

While he drove, Dad told him the news. The first thing, Verne had skipped to Europe; at least, his steamer was sailing today, and it was hoped he had not been caught. "A. H. Dorf" had telegraphed to Mrs. Bolling, advising her that it was absolutely necessary for Mr. Paradise—that was Dad's code name—to meet his friends in Vancouver immediately, and he must start tonight, otherwise he would be too late for the appointment. Dad hadn't needed any further hint; he had learned yesterday—though he had kept the painful news from Bunny—that the Senate investigators had got wind of that Canadian corporation, and were planning to subpoena all its records. Undoubtedly the subpoenas had been issued that day, and telegraphed to Angel City, with instructions to the United States marshal to serve them at once. Dad and young Bolling had made their getaway from the office by means of a fire-escape—more movie stuff, you see! And here they were, Alex H. and Paul K. Jones, driving all night on a ram-battered auto-way, not daring to stop at any hotel, because a United States marshal might be loafing in the lobby; not daring even to pass through the big cities, for fear the all-seeing eye of their irate Uncle Sam might be spying from a window!

They got to Vancouver in a heavy snow storm; and immediately dropped their uncomfortable aliases, and put up at the best hotel. Straightway, of course, the newspaper reporters came running; and Dad said with his quiet dignity that it was all rubbish about their being fugitives from the Senate investigation, they were American business men who had come to British Columbia to consider investments. That scandal in Washington was nothing but cheap and silly politics, the leases had been most advantageous to the government, and as for the Canadian corporation, it had been an enterprise of great benefit to Canada. Did Mr. Ross and his son plan to explore for oil in British Columbia? asked the reporters, eagerly; and Dad said that he had nothing to communicate as yet.

Here they were; comfortable in the physical sense, but mentally not at all so, in a city which to them was a foreign place, with cold weather and nothing of interest. Yet Dad was likely to be in exile for a long time; the new Congress would be in session next year, and the trouble-makers would certainly keep the oil-scandal going, so as to have something to use in next fall's presidential election. Dad sent telegrams to his office, and wireless messages to Verne on board ship; and presently came a reply from Verne requesting Dad to meet him in London immediately.

Dad had to go; and then, what about Bunny? He had his sweetheart at home, and also his paper, so perhaps he should return to Angel City. But Bunny said nonsense, it was out of the question for Dad to cross a continent and an ocean to where—and alone. He was going with him, and after they had talked things out with Verne, they could go over to Paris, and spend a while with Bertie, and meet those swell diplomatic friends of hers. Then, if necessary, Bunny might come back alone—they would see about that later.

The old man was pitifully glad of this decision. Bunny would be all he had to care about now. In his secret heart he must have been humiliated before his son, but he had to go on with the pretense that he was a dignified business man, persecuted by unscrupulous political enemies. He talked about the matter very little with Bunny, but to other people he would discourse for hours; this sudden talkativeness about his affairs was the most pitiful of all signs of his weakening.

Bunny wrote long letters to Vee, telling her the situation and pledging his love; and to Rachel, running over the paper to her, and arranging for the thousand dollars a month to be paid to her. Dad wrote long letters to his efficiency young executives—thank God for their efficiency right now! They would keep in touch with him and Verne by cable; and Verne's agents in Washington would send the "low down" on the investigation. Bunny arranged to get Dad Irving's weekly, and the various radical papers he was reading; so father and son would be in position to carry on their controversy in Europe!

They spent four days on a train crossing the snowy plains of Canada. It was bitter cold outside, but snug and warm within, and on the rear of the train was an observation car, made use of by a score or two of business men, American and Canadian. In an hour or two they had learned that the great J. Arnold Hess was among them, and after that Dad held court, and told

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

An unimportant but entertaining little comedy based upon Anita Loos' famous book, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is now playing at the Times Square Theatre.

Any one who wants to spend idle hours and digest a couple quarts of laughs should go and watch Lorelei Lee make suckers out of men who have more money than brains, and some of them are in the lightweight class.

Lorelei and her girl friend Dorothy, on a trip to Europe to be educated, spend time with a certain Piggy Bean, "button merchant of Chicago," on the boat and makes an Englishman come across with a diamond tiara, at the same time she gives goo at an American reformer, Henry Spoffard, who is on his way to visit Paris, so he can help reform it.

To make a long story short, after we have many laughs the married man. However, she has to vamp his father first. But at that is her "trade" it is done with not much difficulty.

While the entire cast is first rate, including such names as June Walker, Frank Morgan and A. F. Huntley—Edna Hibbard, who is remembered for her remarkable performance several seasons ago in "Ladies of the Evening," is extraordinary in her portrayal of Dorothy, bringing the audience back to life with her naive style whenever a dull spot in the play is reached.

"UPSTAGE."

We have had motion pictures devoted to the lives of firemen, postman, policemen, soldiers, sailors and many others. Now we can add to the list a picture revealing the humorside of vaudeville actors. And a fairly good picture at that.

Of course it has the usual amount of hokum, nevertheless "Upstage," is a story of the vaudeville performers and at the same time good entertainment. It tells a story and reaches its climax with an unusual amount of intelligence displayed by its director, Monta Bell. He needs no introduction, having produced many fine pictures in the past, obtaining his original training as an assistant to some other fine man Charles Spencer Chaplin.

Norma Shearer is the star, being ably supported by Oscar Shaw, who has in the past seen much service in musical comedies. This was well fitted him for his role of "song and dance man" who selects Dolly, played by Miss Shearer, as his partner. When their act is a success she quits him and obtains a new partner, who is a flash.

The rest of the story is devoted to the reconciliation and during this period we have some nice peaks to blind the stage. Sylvan A. Pollock

Miners' Convention in Uproar of Protest

Bonafide Delegates Wild About Plan for Salary Grab; Dilution of Constitution; Barring of Howat

By WM. F. DUNNE

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 28.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor was brought into the Miners Convention here this afternoon to stave off threatened defeat of the group's proposal to raise John L. Lewis' salary to twelve thousand dollars a year.

Fought to a standstile by indignant delegates yesterday on the proposal to give Lewis unlimited power to levy assessments on the members, the administration advanced today to push through the big salary grab.

Green's entry was staged for the salary fight. The machine postponed convening for an hour this morning and rushed adjournment entire early, convening late in the afternoon to time the new constitutional amendment with Green's arrival. John Hindmarsh was in the midst of a shaking attack on the proposition to raise the emperor's salary while West Virginia miners were begging for enough to eat when Green entered. "The president's salary is now four times as great as the average miners wage," he resumed. "Why increase it now fifty per cent just when the officials are pleading the need for more money by unlimited assessments for strike relieve?

This action means war in the ranks of the mine workers. The rank and file will not tolerate this concentration of autocratic authority and enormous wage increases."

Just as Van Bittner concluded an appeal for the $12,000 salary on the ground of Lewis' "wonderful record of achievement," Green was given the floor.

"You will make no mistake if you accept my decision," he declared. "For do you believe they would listen to you? Why do you distrust them? They should not be treated [illegible] all what I have heard."

Green urged a war on the left wing, in preparation for the big battle tomorrow to expel all members of the Workers' Party from the union.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 28.—The convention here of the United Mine Workers of America, was again convulsed with a roar of protest from the bona fide delegates when International President John L. Lewis' henchmen brazenly began to force through by use of the fake delegations from "blue sky" locals their motion to raise his salary from $9,000 a year and expenses, to $12,000 per year and expenses. Expenses include the regular daily item of fare from Springfield, Ill., where Lewis nominally lives, to Indianapolis, in which his offices are located.

Just as unpopular was the proposition to raise the annual salaries of vice-president and secretary treasurer from $7,000 to $9,000. Both salary grabs were recommended by the constitutional committee, appointed by Lewis when the convention opened. They will not be agreed to without a struggle.

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

WE feared that the old twilight twit-mare after Mr. William J. Burns who added to the gaiety of this prosaic republic by periodical admissions that he had solved the famous Wall Street bomb slaughter had faded from human ken and that his host was now flitting in the eternal shadows or hovering over the special hell which an all-wise deity would wisely reserve for steal pigeons if a deity did exist. Our weakly grin, our monthly giggle, and our semi-annual guffaw, we feared, were in danger of being indicted among lost luxuries. The world looked as dark to us, without our customary source of merriment as if we heard that The New Leader and The Weekly people were short of funds or that Morris Sigman had turned catholic to please the president of the New York Central Trades Council.

IN my youth I frequently was told that "God was good to the poor." I was usually reminded of Jehovah's generosity when those responsible for my existence were able to produce more words than food to satisfy my urge for self-preservation. And when I noticed a news item in a New York paper recording an address delivered by the inimitable Burns before a rotary club on the subject of "Crime and Radicalism," I was a fit subject for a lecture on the theory that every individual has a little god of his own who looks out for his comfort.

IT was a gloomy day, and after spending four happy years in the wide open spaces of Chicago, within easy smelling distance of the stockyards the odors of the ghetto did not stir easy on my nostrils. As I read what "Bill" Burns had to say, a satisfied grin began to settle on my countenance and by the time I got to the last period I was disturbing our staffless staff with shouts of hilarity.

IT is reported that Mr. Burns was lying on his couch in his office hatching "Red Plots" when he heard the noise. "Now I have it!" he muttered, leaping to his feet, putting on his hat and making for the seat of trouble. In a few minutes he had a whole theory of the explosion ready for the press and the announcement that he would have the conspirators in his hands within the customary twenty-four hours. By the time the public press outlawed his ravings on the subject, Burns had arrested over one hundred conspirators and made three hundred and sixty predictions. Finally the capitalist press decided that either Burns was hoaxing them or they were becoming afflicted with softening of the brain. So they advised their cub reporters to turn thumbs down on Burns' publicity or turn him over to a policeman if he in-

Only American Baron[illegible] Defy Mexico

European Oil Companies Obey Land Law

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Mexico's land and petroleum laws, which the state department considers so confiscatory that a two-year relations has been threatened, have been applied acceptable to 95 per cent of the foreign oil producers in Mexico, according to figures issued today from the Mexican embassy here.

The embassy statement did not specify the identity of the five per cent minority, but it is understood to include some of the companies controlled by the Doheny, Sinclair and Standard Oil of Indiana interests.

Only U. S. Firms Hold Out.

Up to the Dec. 31 the statement set forth, 643 applications were filed for permits to operate under the new laws, these obligations covering some 26,252,230 acres of land. Of this total, 6 applications concerned oil rights derived from contracts prior to May 1, 1917 (when the new constitution was adopted) and 236 concerned rights derived from contracts subsequent to the adoption of the constitution.

The applications filed covered 26,-235,230 acres, and embraced 94.17 per cent of the lands affected, according to the embassy's figures, while the applications withheld covered 1,560,-000 acres, and embraced 5.83 per cent.

The Embassy made public the figures without explanatory comment, preferring apparently to let them speak for themselves.

No comment was forthcoming from the state department. Secretary of State Kellogg has for several days declined to discuss the Mexican situation.

The attitude of the department apparently is to wait until there is an actual "overt act" on the part of the Mexican government in seizing some of the lands whose owners refuse to abide by the new laws. What will happen then is a matter of conjecture, but on the part of certain oil representative: in Washington there is an expectation that Ambassador Sheffield will be withdrawn from Mexico City. This expectation, however, is not generally shared.

The religious issue was injected into the Mexican controversy again last night when a mass meeting was held in Washington auditorium and addressed by Joseph Scott, a Los Angeles attorney, speaking under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. Many members of Congress and representatives of the embassies and legations in Washington, attended.

Scott bitterly attacked the Calles government as being "Bolshevistic" and "under the domination of Moscow." Instead of adopting the philosophy of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, he said, President Calles has followed Karl Marx in the premise that "religious is the opiate fo the people.

Local 91, I. L. G. W. U. Signs for 5 Day Week

The five-day week is granted to the Members of Local 91, of the I. L. G. W. U., in a new contract signed yesterday between the union and sixty-five manufacturers of dresses, bathrobes and kimonas.

This is a 45-hour instead of a 40-hour week, but it marks a gain of two hours as well as the gain of a day. Only a small proportion of the kimono workers in this city are organized—2500 out of 12,000 according to union figures.

The Manager of Local 91 states that a vigorous organization campaign is to be carried on among the non-union workers soon after the new agreement.

Bonnanz Embroiderers Demand 40 Hour Week

The forty hour week is chief among the demands of the Bonanz Embroidery Workers' Union whose contract with the Manufacturers Association expires January 31.

Yesterday, informal conferences held yesterday between officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union and representatives of the employers, the manufacturers offered a forty-two hour week but this was emphatically rejected.

[illegible]ch Government to Surrender Cantonese Concessions

LONDON, Jan. 28. — Charge d'Affaires O'Malley is reported to have made new proposals to the Cantonese government involving the surrender of the British concessions throughout China, including extra-territoriality and plans for new treaties supplanting the present unequal ones. Those who are justifiably suspicious of British diplomacy see in this move either a surrender to the Cantonese or a trick to throw the Cantonese off their guard while the British forces were rushing to Shanghai.

Reports state that the Cantonese will be in Shanghai before the British forces get there.

LEFT WING SEES SIGMAN SELLING OUT TO JOBBERS

Demands He Make Known Real Agreement

Information that a sell-out to the dress jobbers as disastrous to the interests of the workers as the sell-out to the sub-manufacturers which Morris Sigman is now busily attempting to camouflage, has been accomplished by the Internation, was received by left wing leaders today.

Challenging Sigman to publish the agreement with both jobbers and sub-manufacturers in full, C. S. Zimmerman, manager of the press division in the Joint Board, charged that Sigman has given away to the jobbers two provisions of the old agreement so that this agreement virtually sanctions the open shop.

Yielding To Boss.

He declared that according to the agreement recently negotiated, jobbers who gave out work to non-union shops would not be fined, as heretofore, and that non-union shops would be permitted to finish whatever work they had begun, whereas the union has had power to force its discontinuance at any process.

"These two changes in the old agreement make it plain that Sigman has not told the truth when he declared in his meeting on Wednesday that the agreement with the jobbers had not been changed," Zimmerman said.

Fooling Workers.

"In the same way he is attempting to fool the workers as to the provisions of the agreement he has made with the manufacturers. He does not announce what is a fact, that he has given up to the employers the extra pay for legal holidays that fell on Saturday and that the guaranteed minimum wage scales for piece workers have been practically abolished. These facts he keeps from the workers. He tries to make them think he has won a victory in a provision that piece workers do not have to finish a garment until the price has been settled, while all piece workers know that this was a provision of the agreement for many years.

By careful phrasing which he hopes the workers will not understand, he tries to hide the fact that the trial period of one week has been extended to two weeks. The "mutual consent of the worker and the employer to extend the trial period" is necessary, but where is the worker out of a job who will not consent to lengthening his trial period if the employer demands it? The abolishing of the labor bureau is another concession granted to the employers by Mr. Sigman.

Demands Full Text.

"After all these evasions and attempts at concealment on the part of Mr. Sigman of the agreements he has made, the Workers are unable to believe that the real truth about the agreements has been found out yet. We challenge Mr. Sigman to publish the real agreements in full details."

Labor Hating Jurist Attacks Victims

Joint Board Officials Denounce Injustice of Trial Garment Workers Jailed; Gangsters Free

Judge Otto A. Rosalsky yesterday vented his spite in full measure on nineteen striking garment workers brought before him for sentence. He abused and scolded them, and meted out terms ranging from "two and a half to five years," down to probationary terms.

His attitude and merciless behavior has aroused general resentment, officials of the Joint Board of the International Ladies Garment Workers have issued statements severely condemning the sentencing of garment worker strikers who merely defended themselves against gangsters, while the gangsters are unpunished.

No Considerations.

The method in which the boss' court metes out "justice" to workers was seen in the brutal sentences the strikers were given. Altho never arrested before, they were shown no more consideration than the ordinary criminal in spite of the fact that they were arrested when fighting for their most elementary rights as workers, and defending themselves against the boss' gangsters and the local police force.

Old Unionists.

Sam Cohen, a member of Local 2 for ten years, and Nathan Lenz, a member of the same local for fourteen years, were sentenced to state's prison for from two and a half years to five years charged with assault in the second degree.

Joseph Pearlman, who has been a member of Local 2 for fourteen years and Anton Romanchuak, also a member of this local for ten years, were given intermediate sentences of six months to one year. They were also charged with assault in the second degree.

Indeterminate Sentences.

Theodore Turetsky was sentenced to an indefinite term in the penitentiary.

Intermediate sentences of one month to a year and a half were given to the following:

Anton Kutzak, Local 35, Charles Walfish, Local 35, Joseph Kerensky, Sam Grossman, Harry Freedman, Morris Polonsky, Joseph Fiegewitz, Antiona Mandino, Anton Zinn, and Paul Kalechman.

Louis Antonoszki and Max Gorenstein were released on two years' probation while Jacob Levin and Jack Sharfe were placed on probation for three years each.

No Mercy.

While the complainant against Walfish was willing to withdraw the charge and the jury recommended mercy, Judge Rosalsky nevertheless gave him the unusually long sentence of a year and a half.

Many relatives and friends of the Accused workers were present in the court room when Judge Rosalsky handed out the sentences. One women fainted and had to be taken home in an ambulance and many others screamed and shouted their disapproval of bosses' justice as exemplified by Judge Rosalsky.

"Although you men are mere puppets," Judge Rosalsky said, "you are screening those who directed you to commit these acts of violence and destroy merchandise, and I am going to send you to prison as a warning to you that you must not be identified with lawlessness."

Hyman Amazed.

Louis Hyman, general manager of the Joint Board said when he heard of these sentences:

"Never in the history of the labor movement have such severe sentences been meted out to workers who have been engaged in the struggle for better conditions in their industry.

"These men are ordinary workers. They have never been arrested before. Sam Cohen and N. Lenz, who were given the heaviest sentences, have been members of Local 2 for ten and fourteen years respectively. Every other man sentenced has been a union member for years.

Strikers on Duty.

"As for Judge Rosalsky's statement that these men were incited by

SACCO, VANZETTI LAWYER EXPOSES FAULTS OF TRIAL

Powerful Argument in Full Bench Court

BULLETIN.

The court has taken the Sacco Vanzetti appeal for a new trial under advisement and promises to bring in a decision within a month.

(Special To The Daily Worker.)

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 28.—The fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair was resumed yesterday, at the appeal before the full bench of the Massachusetts supreme court.

This is copsidered by many as the final battle. The appeal is made against the decision of Judge Thayer issued last October on the plea for a new trial based on the sixty-three affidavits brought before him which contained the confession of Maderior, exonerating Sacco and Vanzetti from guilt.

Also Thayer disregarded affidavits showing the part the department of justice played in the case.

Renew Famous Case.

Fred Thompson, of the defense, and his assistant, Ehrman, read before the court a brief, reviewing the history of the case and the famous Palmer raids.

Arguing before the full bench today, Thompson showed that Judge Thayer's decision was full of mistakes and misstatements as to the facts. He proved that the decision of the judge showed that his feelings became so involved as to make him incapable of dealing logically or impartially with this motion.

Refuted Point By Point.

Thompson took up the judge's decision serintum and showed his misstatements in regards to the jury being satisfactory to the defendants, to the manner in which the judge charged the Mederios confession was gotten, and his statement to the jury as to the defendant's unpatriotism and disloyalty to the country.

He told of the Maderio's confession in detail and was corroborated by other evidence which the judge did not take into account, also the evidence that the Morreli gang are the real guilty ones in the murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti are framed.

Thompson told of the affidavits dealing with the activities of the department of justice in the case, how they assigned twelve men to espy activities of the defense, how a spy named Caribono was placed into the cell next to Sacco, and another named Ruzamenti, was sent to become a lodger at Mrs. Sacco's home.

The affidavits showed further that the department of justice believed Sacco and Vanzetti to be innocent but supplied the district attorney with facts with the hope of getting rid of them some way.

The refusal of the department of justice to give access to their documents in this case was also told by the lawyer for the defense.

Thompson in his motion for a new trial and rehearing on the motion (which was denied) also demanded that if a hearing be granted it should be before another judge as Thayer is incapable of being impartial in the case.

The hearing will continue tomorrow and after the district attorney's argument may conclude Saturday.

Quoting Atmosphere.

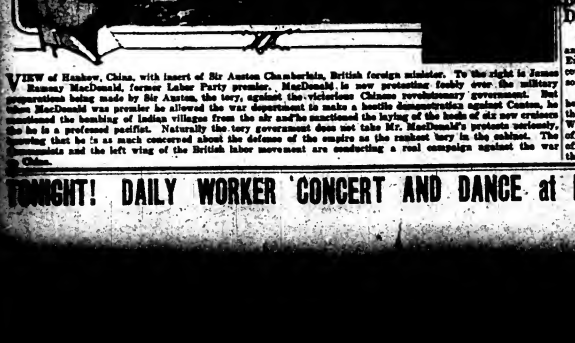
BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Several persons today were barred from the supreme court hearing

PANAMA NATIONAL ASSEMBLY KILLS SLAVE PACT WITH UNITED STATES

COLON, Panama, Jan. 28.—The proposed new treaty between the United States and Panama was virtually a dead letter today as a result of the Panama National Assembly's action in voting to suspend further consideration of the treaty and return it to the president of Panama for further negotiations.

BRITISH SPEED TROOPS TO CHINA OVER LABOR PROTEST



VIEW of Hankow, China, with insert of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister. To the right is James Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor Party premier. MacDonald is now protesting feebly over the military preparations being made by Sir Austen, the tory, against the victorious Chinese revolutionary government. But even MacDonald was premier he allowed the war department to make a hostile demonstration against Russia, he condemned the bombing of Indian villages from the air and he sanctioned the laying of the keels of six new cruisers, the he is a professed pacifist. Naturally the tory government does not take Mr. MacDonald's protests seriously, knowing that he is as much concerned about the defense of the empire as the rankest tory in the cabinet. The capitalists and the left wing of the British labor movement are conducting a real campaign against the war in China.

The Liberal Leader Did Rob the Nurseries

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Lily Langtry, the beautiful "Jersey Lily," Laura Bell, the famous nineteenth century courtesan, and Olga Nonikoff, the lovely Russian spy, were named in the London courts today as among the women who influenced Gladstone, the "Great Liberal statesman."

The allegations were made at the opening of the great trial which has aroused deep interest in the highest political and social circles of the kingdom.

Captain Peter Wright, author and former secretary to the Supreme War Council at Versailles, is suing Lord Gladstone, youngest son of the Victorian statesman, for libel.

Called Gladstone a Hypocrite.

Wright wrote in his book that Gladstone was a hypocrite in matters of sex; that his private practices did not agree with his public profession. Thereupon Lord Gladstone in a letter denounced Wright as a liar, coward, cad and a foul fellow and challenged him to sue him for libel.

Wright took the stand today and testified that since he was a boy, men had told him about Gladstone's fondness for women.

"I was told that Lily Langtry, Laura Bell and Olga Nonikoff were his mistresses," he swore. "Mme. Nonikoff was sent over by the czarist government in the seventies for the purpose of fascinating Gladstone and thoroughly succeeded.

Watched Outside of House.

"In Lord Morley's Life of Gladstone she is described as a Russian lady who was beginning to exercise an influence on the opinions of the important man. I heard also that detectives appointed to watch over Mr. Gladstone during the Fenian days complained they were kept up late watching the outside of Mme. Nonikoff's house, yet had to attend divine service the same morning.

"Fourteen years ago I went to Eastbourne and met a man called Cecil Gladstone, whose resemblance to the statesman was unmistakable. He told me he was an illegitimate son.

"I was also told by a Frenchman named Jean Bertrand that he and an actress named Brasin had an intrigue with Gladstone while visiting London with a theatrical company."

A Nineteenth Century Sheik.

Wright was also allowed to say on the stand that a well-known West End physician used to say that his women patients were in the habit of remarking that Gladstone was paying them attentions. In this connection Wright added:

"A steeplechase rider named Charlie Thompson, who is still alive, told me three years ago of an actual case. The event occurred forty years ago when Gladstone tried to make the acquaintance of a lady he was with. Thompson said he left the lady outside of a shop for a few minutes and on his return Gladstone was talking to her. Gladstone fled when he saw Thompson and the lady told Thompson Gladstone had been making overtures to her."

During the sitting of the Supreme War Council in December of 1917, Lord Milner said to Wright, according to his testimony:

"Gladstone was governed by his sexuality," which the witness understood to be a reference to the statesman's passion for women.

The following passage was read from Mrs. O'Shea's book on Parnell. (Parnell's liaison with Mrs. O'Shea ruined him):

"Parnell said to me: 'I don't trust that grand old spider any further than I can see him.'

Five Committed Adultery.

There ensued an argument between Judge Avory and Wright about this statement attributed to Lord Granville, who was once Gladstone's foreign secretary: "I have known five of Queen Victoria's prime ministers who committed adultery."

The judge observed the five did not necessarily include Gladstone.

Extracts were read from a book, "Recollections and Reflections," by "A Lady of No Importance," which mentioned Gladstone as an admirer of Laura Bell, a beautiful woman with fair hair, wonderful eyes and pretty figure. "Gladstone," said the writer, "was a wonderful old man and in his old age distinctly amorous."

Faithless to His Wife.

Before court adjourned the cross-examination of Wright began. He was asked:

"Isn't the charge that a man is a gross sensualist about as horrible a charge as can be brought against any man?"

Answer—"No, because it has been brought against innumerable men."

Question—"The charge is that Mr. Gladstone was faithless to his wife of sixty years?"

Answer—"Of course it is."

Question—"If somebody made foul charges against the memory of your father what would you call him?"

Answer—"If it were true I would keep silent."

A Nineteenth Century Sheik.

Wright was also allowed to say on the stand that a well-known West End physician used to say that his women patients were in the habit of remarking that Gladstone was paying them attentions. In this connection Wright added:

"A steeplechase rider named Charlie Thompson, who is still alive, told me three years ago of an actual case. The event occurred forty years ago when Gladstone tried to make the acquaintance of a lady he was with. Thompson said he left the lady outside of a shop for a few minutes and on his return Gladstone was talking to her. Gladstone fled when he saw Thompson and the lady told Thompson Gladstone had been making overtures to her."

During the sitting of the Supreme War Council in December of 1917, Lord Milner said to Wright, according to his testimony:

"Gladstone was governed by his sexuality," which the witness understood to be a reference to the statesman's passion for women.

The following passage was read from Mrs. O'Shea's book on Parnell. (Parnell's liaison with Mrs. O'Shea ruined him):

"Parnell said to me: 'I don't trust that grand old spider any further than I can see him.'

Five Committed Adultery.

There ensued an argument between Judge Avory and Wright about this statement attributed to Lord Granville, who was once Gladstone's foreign secretary: "I have known five of Queen Victoria's prime ministers who committed adultery."

The judge observed the five did not necessarily include Gladstone.

Extracts were read from a book, "Recollections and Reflections," by "A Lady of No Importance," which mentioned Gladstone as an admirer of Laura Bell, a beautiful woman with fair hair, wonderful eyes and pretty figure. "Gladstone," said the writer, "was a wonderful old man and in his old age distinctly amorous."

Faithless to His Wife.

Before court adjourned the cross-examination of Wright began. He was asked:

"Isn't the charge that a man is a gross sensualist about as horrible a charge as can be brought against any man?"

Answer—"No, because it has been brought against innumerable men."

Question—"The charge is that Mr. Gladstone was faithless to his wife of sixty years?"

Answer—"Of course it is."

Question—"If somebody made foul charges against the memory of your father what would you call him?"

Answer—"If it were true I would keep silent."

ENDS REED BILL FOR LOWER TAX

But Refunds to Big Incomes Go Right On

(Special To Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Jan. 28.— The Reed plan, which was a rider on the Deficiency Appropriation Bill, a republican measure, and which resembled the rebate proposed by Coolidge some time ago, was struck down by a ruling of Vice-president Dawes on a point of order. The defeat of the Reed proposal was inevitable, however, in view of the opposition of the insurgent bloc, which declared that it was opposed to any plan which proposed to return taxes actually paid by consumers to large corporations. Insurgent leaders declare that they favored a permanent reduction in taxes, and were opposed to income taxe rebates.

Rush Funds.

Though the administration wishes to postpone a general tax slash for political reasons, it is quite anxious to see large corporations get their gravy now in the form of refunds. The Deficiency Appropriation Bill, of which the Reed proposal was a rider, sets aside $175,000,000 for income tax refunds. Many of the claims for refunds are absolute frauds, arranged by clerks in the Internal revenue bureau and corporation lawyers, according to democratic leaders.

Three of the largest refunds under the measure were $6,695,000 for the E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Co., $5,117,000 for the British-American Tobacco Co., and $5,062,000 for the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

BIBLE QUOTING EMPLOYER HIRES VILE GANGSTER

Paper Box Thug Jailed For Violence

Joseph Weiss, a gangster, of 49 Pitt Street, was arrested in front of the S. & M. Paper Box Co., 207 Wooster St., on a charge of kicking a paper box striker and using vile language and threats. Mrs. Clara Downey of 223 West 10th Street made the complaint.

Mr. Seligson, the owner of the S. & M., is the same employer who came to the Citizen's Committee and complained of the union's alleged persecution of the Jewish bosses and demanded that the government come in and control strikes. He quoted the Bible. He said he was persecuted enough in Roumania and in Russia and didn't want to be persecuted in America for being a Jew. He said he always believed in unions, but he had one for three years and wanted a vacation for three years. And the way he intends to get it is to have a gang of thugs to intimidate and disgust women pickets.

Can't Trust Him.

The value of the boss' word was shown to be slight by Jacob Billikopf, Impartial Chairman of the Men's Clothing Industry when he scored Mr. Saveth of the Hatters' Hat. "Who gave his solemn word to the Citizen's Committee that he would go back and use his influence with the Employers Association to get them to send a committee to meet with the Citizen's Committee and then went to the meeting of the Greater New York Paper Box Manufacturers Association and spoke three-quarters of an hour against sending a committee."

Developments at Miners' Convention Important to All American Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

SOME of our readers take the attitude that too much space is being given to the convention of the Miners' Union now being held in Indianapolis.

There is no way of measuring just how widespread this feeling is. The fact that it exists, however is proof enough that more, not less, space should be given to this historic gathering, the developments of which are vital to the whole American labor movement, and bear directly upon the international working class struggle. The refusal of the Lewis administration to come to the assistance of the British coal strike, for instance, had a great deal to do with the defeat of that important labor effort.

Only as the labor movement in the metropolis acquaints itself with the problems of the workers in the great basic industries, of which the mining industry is one of the most important, will it be possible to solidify and thus strengthen American organized labor, in which the New York trade unions should play an important part.

The United Mine Workers of America is the largest trade union in this country, in spite of its diminishing membership. There was a time when it had close to 500,000 members. This has dropped to nearly a quarter million. It is organized on an industrial basis, including all workers in and around the mines, from breaker boys to machine runners, and no matter whether they mine anthracite or bituminous coal. The organization extends into Canada and for a time maintained close connections in Mexico. An effort was made at one time to bring in the metal miners also. In the pre-war days this union had a left wing, without the least bit of organization, possessing a pre-war socialist ideology. Nearly 20 years ago the Miners' Union declared for "the socialization of the means of production and distribution," which was hailed at that time as an acceptance of the Socialist program. Frank J. Hayes, who long had been a member of the socialist party, in 1910 became international vice-president. Socialists were strong in many districts, holding high official positions.

It is no accident, therefore, that this union, organized on an industrial basis, the coal miners of the American labor movement, which left wing struggles valiantly, thru its chosen spokesmen today at Indianapolis, is the steel rod stiffening this spine. No worker, no matter what his job, can fail to thrill at the fight being made by John Brophy, William Stevenson, William Brennan, Powers Hapgood, Alex Howat, Pat Toohey and all the rest. They are battling as much for the needle trades worker, the building trades unionist, the railroader and the steel worker, as they are for the coal miners. If the opposition in the Miners' Union can be crushed, if an expulsion policy can be successfully carried out in this organization, then the Green-Woll-Lewis-Sigman clique of black reaction can ride rough shod over the left wing in every union.

For the socialists are today in close compact, thru Sigman and Kaufman, with the Lewis reaction, helping Lewis fight his battles against the opposition and the Communists.

The opposition to the Lewis regime in the Miners' Union is the best ally of the left wing in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, the Furriers' Union, the Capmakers' Union and the other needle trades unions challenging the reaction in their respective organizations. No one knows this better than President William Green, former secretary-treasurer of the Miners' Union, who is now leading the attack on the needle trades workers in New York City. The left wing of the New York labor movement will learn this, too, and interest itself in every issue as it comes before the convention of twelve hundred delegates of miners' unions scattered all over the land.

New York labor can get a better perspective of its own struggle as it beholds the Abe Cahana, the Morris Sigmans, the Morris Kaufman's, the Morris Hillquits, the James Oneals, the Abraham Beckermans and the Sidney Hillmans allied with the sluggers of the Lewis-Bittner-Kennedy reaction in the Miners' Union, beating up the youthful coal miner, Powers Hapgood; gaging Michigan's militant, William Stevenson, and vilifying as it only knows how, the head of the opposition slate, John Brophy.

The opposition comes into the convention with a definite program to "Save the Union." It calls for a new spirit of struggle. It is not by the reactionary bedpartners of the Sigman-Hillman-Kaufman regime in the needle trades. Instead of a clash of ideas, the arguments they are compelled to meet are those offered by brass knuckles, a piece of gas pipe or an automatic. Facts blown must weld the left wing in all the American trade unions into a unified opposition to the reigning reaction. The left wing in New York City should be in the lead of the effort to develop this national unity of progressives. This can be done only by acquainting the thinking workers of each industry with the problems, the struggles and the achievements of the workers in every other industry. The needle trades worker, the miner, the railroader, the steel worker, and all the rest must stand shoulder to shoulder, in the effort to develop a class program for all American labor. To help develop this sense of purpose, to draw all militant labor into a common left wing struggle, so that the minority forces of the whole trade union movement may march as one man against the capitalist class and its ally, the labor bureaucracy, to become some day the majority, this is the task of The DAILY WORKER, the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party.

As such it gives extensive space to the present convention that is the most crucial so far in the whole history of the Miners' Union. It is not space wasted. It is space used to build a firm foundation on which to rear a working class organization in this country able in time to go forward to the successful seizure of all power in government and industry. To this end it seeks and appeals for the support of the widest masses of New York labor.

CAPITALISTS BID FOR OVER AIR MAIL ROUTE CONTROL

New York and Mid-West Firms Seek Award

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—President Coolidge today was called upon to help settle the bitter battle being waged here for control of America's prize air mail line—the Chicago-New York route.

Two huge sky transportation corporations, each backed by a group of millionaire captains of industry, are seeking the route to form the nucleus for their passenger, express and mail carrying lines that are soon to be placed in operation between the country's two largest cities.

Rival Capitalists Bid.

Bids for the route, the eastern leg of the transcontinental mail line, were opened ten days ago.

Colonial Air Lines, Inc., backed by William Rockefeller, W. H. Vanderbilt, C. V. Whitney, Governor John Trumbol of Connecticut and General John F. O'Ryan of New York, submitted a bid of $1.88 per pound to carry the mail. Colonial also is associated with the Henry Ford airplane interests.

National Air Transport, Inc., formed largely by Chicago and Detroit capitalists, bid $1.98 per pound. It is backed by Howard E. Coffin, of Detroit, a member of the president's air board; William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing gum king; Marshall Field and members of the Armour family of Chicago. Paul Henderson, former assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail and a son-in-law of Representative Martin Madden, chairman of the house appropriations committee, is its general manager.

Postmaster Confers On Award.

So insistent have lobbyists for one of the concerns become that postmaster General Harry S. New today went to the White House where he had a long conference with President Coolidge over the bids and respective qualifications of the bidders.

Emerging from the executive office Mr. New said no decision has yet been reached, but that he expected to make the awards this week.

PLOT TO KILL CHICHERIN ON GERMAN TRAIN

Arrest Tsarist Officer; Like Vorovsky Case

BERLIN, Jan. 28. — A plot has been discovered here to assassinate Georges Chicherin, Soviet Commissary of Foreign Affairs, who is here at present, under the guise of operation.

The man arrested today, for being implicated in this plot, is M. Kianaroff, a former officer of the Russian imperial army. The attempt was to be made during Chicherin's trip from Berlin to Frankfort-on-the-Main, where further treatment of his illness was to be given.

This attempted assassination recalls the murder of Vaslav Vorovski at Lausanne, Switzerland in 1923, by Maurice Conrady, who, though brought into court was acquitted.

COLOMBIA RULERS RUSH TROOPS FOR ROCKEFELLER AID

River Strikers Prevent Sending More

BOGOTA, Colombia, Jan. 27.—A state of martial law has been declared by presidential decree at Barranca Bermeja on the Magdalena River. This action is the result of the strike of the employes working at the Tropical Oil Co., a branch of the Standard Oil Co. The strike has been in progress some time and has had a very strong effect, tying up all production and transportation of oil in this district.

The strikers, who are assisted by the crews of the river steamers, refuse to handle any of the company's products, so that loading and discharging along the whole river has had to be suspended.

An effort was made by the company to have soldiers shipped up river, to employ in strikebreaking activity. This plan had to be given up, however, as no vessel could be manned to carry the troops to their destination. So far, two regiments have been stationed at the oil center.

Firemen Meet Mediator Ask Wage Raise, Time To Eat, Light Work

Wage demands for $1 to $2.75 a day increase are being discussed by officers of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen with G. W. W. Hanger, representative of the Federal Board of Mediation. Hanger has been assigned the task of bringing brotherhood and railroad leaders together, if possible.

Higher wages the only part of the gains desired. The union also demands that mechanical stokers be placed on locomotives weighing 175,000 pounds and over on drivers. Till such relief is furnished the union asks that two firemen be assigned to such engines. The union complains that firemen are unduly exhausted by the present practice requiring one man to stand the shovel gaff on these bi glocomotives.

Firemen also call for a reasonable time-allowance for eating, when on freight service, and they ask for 35 cents a meal and 50 cents a night for lodging expenses when away from home.

The one dollar wage demands is for passenger firemen, now getting a $5.25 a day guarantee. Firemen in through freight service now receiving $5 to $6.20 a day ask increases of $1 to $2.45; those getting $5 to $5.15 a day ask increases of $1 to $2.75 and those paid $6.20 to $6.51 ask $1.19 to $2.60 more. The minimum wrate today for firemen is $4.56 to men on steam locomotives.

...OF CLOAKMAKERS IN ... CAMPAIGN

Workers Realize Joint Board Fights for Them

The campaign to raise a loan of $250,000 to save the Cloakmakers' union is showing very good progress. Wherever there are workers assembled, in every shop and in every city, the question of the Cloakmakers' union is on the order of the day. There are already about 225 various workers' organizations, unions, clubs, etc., that have subscribed to this loan. Money is coming in steadily, and there can be no doubt that the full amount of $250,000 will be raised.

Los Angeles Says.

Mr. Max Lerner, one time chairman of the Joint Board of the Cloakmakers' union of Philadelphia, and secretary of the out-of-town strike committee during the recent strike of the cloakmakers in New York, is at present in California in connection with the bond issue. He is meeting with a generous response wherever he approaches workers for bonds. During his short stay in Los Angeles, he raised and sent in $5,600. In addition to this, he has already raised $600 in San Diego.

He will also visit a number of other places, and there can be no doubt that all the workers who will hear his message relating the program tactics of Sigman will do their utmost to help the New York Joint Board fight the fascist clique that is determined to break the union if they cannot control it.

Additional money also came in from Boston, Philadelphia, Stamford, St. Louis and Chicago.

Ms. S. Fox, a member of the Cloakmakers' union, will visit Richmond, Atlanta, Savannah, Chattanooga, Jacksonville, Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Galveston.

Mr. B. Cooper is at present touring the middle west.

From the results obtained in cities that were already visited by other members of the union in connection with the loan, there can be no doubt that Levine, Fox and Cooper will meet with a generous response wherever they will come.

Workers or Joint Board.

It has already become quite apparent to thousands of workers that the fight in the Cloakmakers' union is the fight of the labor movement as a whole. In order that the fascists should not succeed in their attempt to destroy the Cloakmakers' union, they must meet with a united determination of the whole labor movement to offset their program tactics. The bond issue is the ammunition in this fight and is also a splendid manifestation of the solidarity of workers in all and every union to fight to a finish every attempt to force upon the union a non-wanted, despised and discredited leadership such as the clique of Sigmen, Dubinsky, Ninfo, and the rest.

The slogan of the workers in every union at present should be "the complete amount of $250,000 within the shortest possible time."

The article by Joseph Zack, entitled, "Year of Work Among Fifth Ave. Needle Workers," will be concluded in Monday's issue. The first instalment appeared in yesterday's issue.—Editor.

FIVE PASSAIC STRIKERS GET PRISON TERMS

Paterson Judge Hands Down Vicious Sentences

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 28.—The Passaic textile barons exacted a terrible vengeance from their revolting slaves this afternoon, when Judge Delaney of the Special Sessions Court handed out three-year jail sentences to five striking textile workers implicated in the police bomb frameup of last September. Those sentenced were Joseph Bellani, Anthony Pochno, Alex Kostomacha, Paul Gmnik, and William Skora.

A non-striker, Charles Current was given, very significantly, only a one-year sentence. As the sentences were pronounced silence settled over the court-room, which was filled with the wives, children and friends of the strikers. The silence was broken when women and children began to sob as the men were led out of the court-room. A crowd of sobbing women and children surrounded the hand-cuffed men in the corridor to bid them a heart-rending farewell.

The sentenced men were six of the eleven who were arrested last September on the charge of having thrown a bomb which hurt no one and which damaged little property. The bomb-throwing and the trial are regarded as a frame-up designed to prevent the entrance of the A. F. of L. into the textile strike.

The remaining five of the eleven, still held at Hackensack for trial, are Thomas Regan, Adolph Wisniewski, Joseph Toebi, Paul Kovac, and Nicholas Stehlliaci. They are being held on $15,000 bail apiece.

SOVIET GUARD INTRIGUE WITH NEWARK BOSSES

But Fail to Oust Left Wing of Furriers

(Special To The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 28.—Unsuccessful in their attempt last Thursday to take over Local 35, of the Fur Workers' union, with the assistance of the local police force, the right wing controlled general executive board of the Furriers union, yesterday adopted a new method of attack.

Stab In The Back.

It sent a letter to the local bosses' association known as the Consolidated Rabbit Dressing Corp., instructing them not to recognize the regularly elected officials of the local union.

When business agent, M. Langer, whom the right wingers were not able to oust, heard about the latest move on the part of Sachtman, Serkin and Co., he immediately called up three of the largest shops in town and asked them what action they would take on the matter.

Boss Yields.

At first, they said they would not recognize the left wing officials, who have the support of the overwhelming majority of the members of the union, but when Langer told them that if that was their opinion, he would call strikes in their shops, to show the actual feelings of the workers.

The bosses then retreated and up to the present time the left wing administration is still carrying out all the work of the organization.

I. L. D. Holds Bazaar Meeting, Sun., Jan. 30, at Manhattan Lyceum

The International Labor Defense Bazaar Committee held its usual weekly meeting, with representatives from many organizations present. The reports from same showed that 12 booths were already taken up.

Work is new under way and everything points to the bazaar this year being the most successful ever held.

Organizations, who have not yet decided whether they are going to have a booth, should do so at once. Time is short and immediate action is necessary.

Individuals who have done nothing so far are requested to seriously take upon themselves the task of making the bazaar their main activity from now onwards.

With united 100 percent action we can do something this year that will be a monument of our comrades' help, sympathy and solidarity with our martyred fighters lying in jail.

You are urged to get busy.

The next meeting of the Bazaar Committee will be held on Sunday, January 30, at 2 p. m., in Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th Street.

TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE NEEDLE TRADES SECTION CALLS AMALGAMATED MEET

All Progressive Needle Trades Workers come to Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave., New York, today at 1:00 P. M.

Speakers: Wm. Z. Foster, Ben Gold, C. B. Zimmerman, and Arenberg discuss important problems.

At this meeting will be clarified Becherman's action towards the tailors.

Becherman threw thousands of workers out of the shops. Becherman said out the failure to the employers. In any shop where active workers do not consent to Becherman's methods of throwing out workers from their shops, he throws out the active workers first and proceeds to reorganize the shops according to the desire of the employers.

Miners' Convention in Uproar of Protest

Alexander Howat, probably the most popular man with the rank and file in the miners' union, because of the courageous way in which he fought against the compulsory arbitration law in Kansas before Lewis arbitrarily removed him from that office, was a delegate to the convention, but Lewis stated that he would not be seated because, "The President of District 14 has returned his credential". The Kansas (Dist. 14) administration has been under Lewis' control since Howat's removal.

Progressive Demands, Why.

John Hindmarsh of Riverton, Illinois, took the floor to demand an explanation of Howat's being barred, and received the above excuse during the argument.

Lewis Threatens.

Following this verbal passage at arms, President Lewis said: "There are men on the floor of this convention who are not delegates and who have been taking a part in the proceedings. Now that the committee on credentials has made its final report and we know who are delegates I am advising these men who are not delegates to go to the galleries if they wish to attend this convention." Lewis said he knew who these men were but did not name them.

Lewis Wrecks Constitution.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 27.—The slaughter on the United Mine Workers' constitution began early in the afternoon when the declaration that the union is organised to obtain for the members "the full social value of their product" was stricken from the preamble, where it had been placed by the pioneers in 1890.

Instead, the weasel words, "an equitable share of the fruits of their labor" were inserted to make way for Emperor Lewis' efficiency union policy.

Progressive Proposals Killed.

A score of amendments proposing the democratization of the union were killed without ado. Individual appeals will continue to end in the districts, election of organizers was defeated and efforts to cut the ground out under the machine by taking away Lewis' patronage failed.

All officers, including the local union functionaries, must be citizens of the United States or Canada, or take out papers. International officers need no longer apply.

The convention indefinitually, a joint report in the future accounting for their "stewardship."

Zimmerman's Statement.

Charles S. Zimmerman, manager of the dress department of the Joint Board, I. L. G. W. U. issued the following statement to The DAILY WORKER:

Not Sluggers.

"Some of them have been members of the union as long as ten to fourteen years, many being married and having families to support. These people are not sluggers, but workers who are fighting for food for their children and in defense of their union.

"While we find these union men being sentenced to long terms of imprisonment, gangsters hired by the bosses who brutally beat up the strikers, are either discharged or let go with a small fine.

Strikers Slugged.

"Today, many of the strikers are still in the hospital as a result of the beatings they received on the picket line from the gangsters of the bosses, who are walking the streets as free men, and at the same time we find the strikers being sentenced to long terms of imprisonment."

Portnoy's Statement.

Julius Portnoy, manager of Local 22 of the I. L. G. W. U. expressed the greatest indignation at the severe sentences saying

"Most of these men are absolutely innocent, and only pleaded guilty when they had been held in jail for a long time under excessive bail and were made to feel that by pleading guilty to a lesser offense they would fare better in this obviously prejudiced case. It is disgraceful that it is possible in this city to persecute workers in this way."

Gold's Statement.

Ben Gold, manager of the Furriers Union Joint Board, also issued a statement:

"Judge Rosalsky's wholesale job on the cloak strikers would be a surprise even to such a one would expect the worst from him. His sentencing of cloak strikers to Sing Sing will open the eyes of thousands of workers to the truth that workers cannot expect justice from judges who serve the interests of the ruling boss class. It must be said about Rosalsky that he faithfully serves his masters—the bosses.

Did Rosalsky Care?

"Did Judge Rosalsky know that these men would be sent away to prison for years were striking and struggling for a bigger slice of bread for their wives and children? Did he stop to think that while his family will have plenty of the best food, while his children will have the best clothes and education and life's pleasures, the wives and children of these striking workers whom he sent to prison will suffer in misery and starvation?

Not Justice.

"Why this gulf between Rosalsky and a worker? Because capitalist society rewards such judges as Rosalsky who help the ruling class to subjugate and exploit the workers. It is not a question of justice or conscience to him. Suffer, or make the other one to suffer, is the law of capitalist society. Rosalsky has chosen the latter. Will the organized workers be silent? I wonder what President Green or Matthew Woll will have to say? I suspect they will say nothing. But the workers must express their feelings in this matter. The time is fast approaching when the workers will know the place for such judges as Rosalsky. The Rosalskys will only help to bring this time nearer."

In view of the fact that his appearances will be limited in number, Mr. Toscanini has decided that a Beethoven festival would be interesting and timely. He will conduct the Metropolitan Opera House next Tuesday evening, the program consisting of two symphonies—the Third ("Eroica") and the Fifth.

Next Saturday night and Sunday afternoon, February 5 and 6, Mr. Toscanini's program will consist of the Ninth Symphony preceded by the First. The assisting chorus for the Ninth Symphony will be that of the Schola Cantorum and there will be a quartet of soloists.

Rosalsky's Savage Sentences

Nineteen cloakmakers were yesterday sentenced to long terms of imprisonment by Judge Rosalsky for picketing scab shops last summer during the course of a strike between members of the I. L. G. W. U. and the employers.

In imposing sentence on the defendants Judge Rosalsky made a record for himself that will not fail to endear him to the employing class and earn for him a reward from the manufacturers when the workingclass whom he is persecuting bring an end to his judicial career on some future election day.

From two and-a-half to five years in Sing Sing to three year probation terms were the two extremes of punishment inflicted on those workers for performing their union duty. The sentences are the most severe in the history of the organization.

When these savage sentences were handed out by this judicial flunkey of the clothing bosses the families and friends of the sentenced workers made a demonstration. In describing the scene, the respectable New York Evening Post referred to the participants as "the herd (emphasis ours—Ed.) of screaming women, squalling babies and cursing men". This reference speaks volumes for the scorn and hate that overflows from the hearts of the capitalists and their hirelings, for the workers. The sacredness in which they hold womanhood disapates like mists before the sun when womanhood is concretized into a striking needle trades worker, or a mother of a convicted striker.

The brutal treatment accorded these prisoners by Rosalsky was made possible and encouraged, by the traitorous conduct of the Sigman-Green combination which entered into an alliance with the blackest capitalist reaction in an effort to smash the closed ranks of the workers in their struggle for better conditions for themselves and a better standard of living for their dependents. The conduct of the biblical Judas who took the thirty pieces of silver for giving up his leader into the hands of the Roman taskmasters was decency itself compared to the role played by Sigman and his blackhearted squad of sluggers. Judas at least had a conscience that could be touched. He could not bear the sting of his treachery so he went and hanged himself.

Green, Sigman and the yellow socialist tribe that are chiefly responsible for those workers being behind prison bars will sleep soundly tonight when they hear of Judge Rosalsky's action.

Lewis' First Defeat

The Lewis machine on Wednesday sustained its first defeat. Lewis had to save his proposal to wreck the constitution in the matter of assessment control by taking the count and refusing a roll call. Even the New York Times correspondent's version of the event proves that the count was faked. This victory of the progressives in rallying a majority of the delegates for maintaining democratic forms in the union constitution is all the more important because it was achieved in a convention packed by Lewis with paper delegations and payroll votes. It shows that the progressive elements are putting up a militant battle at the convention and winning adherents as the fight continues. Back of the vote of the majority of the delegates Wednesday was the support of over 95 per cent of the rank and file. When people think they have the miners licked is when they really begin to fight.

McAdoo and Corruption.

William Gibbs McAdoo, former Doheny retainer who got badly smattered with Elk Hills Basin and Teapot Dome oil, is now in a bid for the presidency on a platform of political purity.

The late Woodrow Wilson's Crown Prince declares that in flaunting the prohibition laws the United States is treading a path to anarchy. This sweet breeze blowing thru the stinking political alleyways of politics charges corrupt municipalities with plotting to control national politics. No more idiotic outburst ever came from the mouth of a mountebank. What are politicians in business for, McAdoo included, except to control municipal, state and national politics in the interests of the capitalists on something better than a paltry commission basis?

We suppose Mr. McAdoo is convinced that the masses have forgotten the story of his efforts to bribe or bludgeon the Mexican goverament into turning over its oil fields to Edward L. Doheny, while Woodrow Wilson was in the White House—McAdoo using the influence that his marriage relationship with the president clothed him with to blackjack concessions from the Mexican government and money from Doheny.

This is the man who is now out to purify American political life! A Herculean task indeed. Granting that Mr. McAdoo were honest and not a slimy hypocrite, the job of finding a needle in a haystack would be trivial compared to what he essays. Corruption is as much a part of capitalism as a tail is of a normal dog.

I would not have a word to say about old William Gladstone and his amorous escapades, except for two reasons; he was a bourgeois and a damned hypocrite.

The Soviet Union will not interfere in the struggle between the Cantonese and their imperialist foes, but the government will not place any obstacles in the way of any worker or peasant who desires to assist the Cantonese to clean out the robbers. That is the kind of neutrality that the Cantonese would like to hear about from Coolidge and Kellogg.

Lewis Attacks the Constitution

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

The attack of Lewis on the constitution of the United Mine Workers of America, which Wednesday's convention of the union is to consider, is the logical outcome of the whole policy of the Lewis machine since it first came to power. Lewis has always stood for the centralization of power in the hands of the machine, making them an aid to the bosses in increasing production, in speeding up, in increased profit at the expense of the workers. The Lewis-Wells plan is only the open version of the trade unions into agencies of the boss, the officials into foremen and straw bosses paid not by the boss but by the dues of the membership; it means the converting of our unions into company unions with the difference that they have officials not directly employed by the company, doing their nefarious things outside of the plant. These are, of course, important differences, but the tendency is clear just the same.

In trying to put these things over, Lewis has had to run counter to the traditions of the union, the constitution of the union, the whole spirit of the union. He has had to run counter to the rank and file, who have always resented any attempt of the machine to usurp the rights of the membership and the workers of the industry and put the private profits of the bosses first.

The move is in line with the general policy of the trade union bureaucracy, best expressed by Matthew Woll, of making the trade unions "responsible" agencies, which means "responsible" to the bosses from Alex Howat and the progressive miners!

But although the Employers' Association of Pittsburg did not inspire the raids they refuse to be pushed back of the scene even by John L. Lewis. They say that the raids were not timed properly and that this left "open to-arrest and identification every operative who had furnished the information on which the raids were based." This is a pleasant pickle. Some of the poor stools in the radical ranks were picked up in the raids. But, as I recall they—whoever they were—were quickly released and the charges against them dropped. The Employers' Association also tells us that it "drew the briefs and furnished practically all of the information on the Blankenstein case, which is being used as a precedent in this case. The Employers' Association furnished all of the information on which the search warrants were based in the recent raids."

Gold Star For Lewis.

Well, let them have some of the credit. Let them share it with the officials of the United Mine Workers of America. Who would begrudge them this, several years after the event. Incidentally Blankenstein was a W. P. member who received a 2 year sentence for having some party literature in his parlor. That's all. The Flynn anti-sedition law is an effective weapon against the thinking worker. The United Mine Workers' officials knew this when they plotted these raids.

One final word from the Employers' Association statement: "The nature of the activities of the Workers' Party down to its most minute detail has been known to the department of justice from information furnished by the Employers' Association and others. (Italics ours.) These raids could have been made at any time for the past year. "However, no action could be gotten until the United Mine Workers brought their political influence to bear to have this work done."

And David Berry? God knows what has happened to him and his damage suit. Our last information was that he had been arrested in Washington, D. C., for issuing bad checks. He's probably in an alcoholic ward somewhere, or shaking money out of a boss. Wherever he is, he has our thanks for bringing that suit. It helped us to confirm a few suspicions we had about those raids—and to learn more about Mr. Lewis and his gang.

In the Wake of the News

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE Cantonese may remember the saying about Greeks bearing gifts when Great Britain's representatives offers them a compromise. And what a magnanimous compromise! England is now willing to allow the Chinese to run their own country, but there are sure to be some condition attached. Until recently the British adopted a truculent attitude towards China. The idea of the "Heathen Chinese" being on equal terms with Britain! But force is a great convincer and now England is ready to allow the Chinese a few rights in their own home.

THE armed power of Chinese masses led by Kuomintang and supported by propaganda has proved powerful in bringing the long oppressed people of that country to the threshold of national deliverance from all the puny efforts of all the militarist cut-throats that ever lived. The failure of the rubber imperialists to oppose enemy themselves failed. The powerful aid of the workers and peasants of the British Empire, of at least equally effective, is all probability the Cantonese will have succeeded in unifying China by next summer. Then there is certain to be some desperate struggle between the reactionary Chinese who wish to develop the country into a capitalist exploiting land and those who wish to begin laying the groundwork for a Workers' and Peasants' government.

THERE is a very interesting trial going on in London. The ashes of the long dead hypocrite Gladstone are being raked and the result is not soothing to the nostrils of British statesmen. Gladstone was the most outstanding, bible-quoting moralist in England. He posed before the public as a paragon of virtue. He admitted that he was a sinner of rectitude. When in the height of his career as liberal leader he was confronted by his master in the person of Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish nationalist leader, Gladstone set about to devise ways and means of ruining his political foe. He found the means in the person of Kitty O'Shea, the wife of a British army officer.

WHEN the news about Parnell's relations with Mrs. O'Shea came to light, Gladstone, who posed as a friend of the Irish cause, turned his face to heaven, beat his breast and with both hands and conditions pro-claimed the sentence of political excommunication on Parnell. An Irish leader was not fit to associate with the pontifical Gladstone of Great Britain. The catholic clergy, those priests who are ever ready to change their books into a militant attack against the ruling classes sided with Gladstone. So did the majority of the politicians who knew that Parnell stood between them and the loot of the British treasury. Parnell died a ruined man.

"NOW it can be told" about Gladstone. The truth about the dastardly attack on moral rectitude has been suppressed and the British are learning something they did not know about one of their favorite hypocrites. A certain Mr. Justice is good thing when he here is pulled "the shirt" on Gladstone. He got a moving personality. There is nothing like a private letter than to make the tongue to a certain politician. The writer proved that Gladstone was by no means what he claimed to be. For example, he claimed that Lord Chief Justice Russell had told him that Parnell had committed adultery. What of it? That was the law under Queen Victoria. Parnell should have lived well and perhaps wisely. But the French are not the English and a mistress is not necessarily a blackmailer.

FOR ages the ruling classes have framed a moral code to their liking and compelled them to live up to it under penalties, the penalty depending on ability of the ruling classes to inflict it. In the twelfth century an English king, possessing much less power than that possessed by Gladstone could command his Cuakeys to seize a damsel and take her into his castle by force. His subjects would continue to till the soil and think nothing of it. To them it was just as legal for the king to do that as the average worker of today thinks it is for the capitalist to exploit him in a factory. But in Gladstone's days the masses did not have the same mental attitude towards their rulers. They kept an eye on them. Therefore Gladstone had to prowl around Hyde Park and see what might come his way. He had to be cautious, since he was a statesman. And it would not look well for the man who hounded Parnell to his grave over an infatuation for another man's wife to be exposed as a sensualist.

A TALE without a moral would be a tale without an end. One of the most favored arguments used by pro-capitalist orators against socialists, when socialists were socialists, and today against Communists is that the introduction of the new order of society would destroy the home and the family, introduce polygamy and in general turn society into a sexual madhouse. The capitalist hacks knew they were indulging in rubbish, that all thru history the ruling classes observed the moral ethics of the barnyard and that even if radicals set out to deliberately bring society to a lower moral level than prevails under capitalism they would find the task impossible. They are simply using a prejudice planted in the minds of the masses by the capitalists themselves to poison the workers' minds against the message of Communism, just as the hypocrites Gladstone used it against Parnell to wreck the Irish revolutionary movement of which Parnell was at the time the "legal" leader.

Secret Banquets and Open Attacks

By WILLIAM PAUL (London)

IN a hundred different and devious ways the federation of British industries and the government are continuing their attack upon the trade unions.

The capitalists and their press, with the aid of the right wing, are doing their utmost to destroy the prestige of well-known left wingers, and, at the same time, to praise those leaders who called off the general strike. This is being done so that the general council may achieve a reactionary triumph over the miners' leaders at the forthcoming conference of trade union executives on January 20.

The government and the mine owners are deeply interested in helping the general council to whitewash themselves at this conference. A triumph for the general council will mean a triumph for "industrial peace" and defeatist tactics in coming struggles. It will mean the temporary ascendancy of those leaders who helped the government to defeat the general strike by their slanderous writings in the millionaire press, are preparing the way for the government's legislation against trade unionism.

Reaction's United Front.

Baldwin, Churchill and lord Winborne remember how the general council saved the government and the mine owners by calling off the general strike when the masses were sweeping forward to victory. It is, therefore, necessary for the government and the mine owners to see to it that the general council score heavily at the conference of trade union executives.

To attain this end Baldwin, Churchill and lord Winborne—backed up by the powerful millionaire press and the federation of British industries—are leaving no stone unturned to attain their objective. This may be seen in the secret banquet recently given by lord Wimborne, and attended by Winston Churchill, viscount D'Abernon, sir Hugo Hirst, Philip Snowden, J. H. Thomas, Arthur Pugh, C. T. Cramp, and Robert Williams.

Every honest worker knows that lord Wimborne, the mine owner, and Snowden, the leader of the Labour government—which starved and imprisoned the miners—do not dine and win later leaders because they are anxious to see them happy.

Important problems, of vital interest to the workers, were discussed. We know this because of what has happened since the secret dinner took place.

The Price Paid.

We know, for example, that one of the first things that happened was an outrageous attack upon the miners' leaders, in the capitalist press, by the right honorable Philip Snowden, M.P., F.C., LL.P., A. J. Cook, who loyally carried out the delegate conference decisions of the Miners' Federation, is compared to Judas.

Snowden, in his frenzy against Cook, declares:

> He has wrecked the Miners' Federation, destroyed the thirty years' work of infinitely better men than himself, given to the mine owners a power they have never before possessed, given the conservative government an excuse for lengthening hours and making a general attack upon trade union rights, reduced practically every trade union to a state of bankruptcy, and inflicted permanent injury upon British trade."

Not one word against the government; not one word against police terrorism in the coalfields, or a protest against the starving of children and women by Baldwin and Churchill; not one syllable against the use of the press and pulpit to insult the miners—of the general strike, the refusal to impose the embargo, and the treachery of the right honorable leaders who accepted twenty guineas per article from the millionaire press mongers to attack militant trade unionism. One man alone is to blame—A. J. Cook!

Snowden also attacks Russia. And by so doing shows that he is leading an offensive against militant leadership at home and abroad.

Anglo-Russian trade union unity is the one real fear of international

he was always able to give up anything that hindered his work. When still at school, for example, he used to love skating, but found he got tired and sleepy after it, and therefore gave it up as it hindered his studies. He was also very fond of Latin, but he also gave this up as it hindered more important work. Krupskaya, in her reminiscences, alludes to the fact that several writers have compared Lenin's style and phrasing with the phraseology of the Roman orators. She thinks that this is not by chance, but under influence of his former enthusiasm for the Roman writers.

Meanwhile, throughout these years of exile, Lenin's interest and enthusiasm for the revolutionary movement did not subside. On the contrary, as the termination of his exile drew near, his hopes for the future increased with his impatience to be free. Already before his return, he was planning the work for the formation of a compact Party with a clear-cut ideology. He spent many sleepless nights thinking out detailed plans for a Party paper published abroad, means of illegal transportation into Russia, and so on. He communicated these plans to Martov and the comrades in Russia.

Return From Exile.

In March, 1900, Lenin's exile ended. Day and night he travelled in a sleigh across the Siberian snow—300 versts up the River Yenesaei, dreaming of the future. Returning to Pskov, he began organizing a network of connections for the future Social-Democratic paper that was to be published abroad, but he was soon to leave Russia to join Axelrod and Plekhanov. Just as he was about to leave Pskov for abroad, Lenin was arrested in the street together with Martov. He had 2,000 roubles in his pocket. He explained to the police that he had got the money from his "aunt." Luckily, the list of contacts for the newspaper was written in chemical ink and covered with faked calculations. If the gendarmes had thought of heating this piece of paper, the entire scheme for the newspaper might have been wrecked. However, Lenin was released after being under arrest ten days.

In August, 1900, Lenin came to agreement with the Plekhanov group for the publication of "Iskra." After a short stay in Geneva, he settled in Munich, where he was later joined by Krupskaya, who had just completed her Siberian exile. Krupskaya relates an interesting incident connected with her journey abroad. She had been given an address in Prague. On arriving there, she found Lenin not actually in Munich and the Prague address had only been a point for the dispatch of correspondence. Occurrences of this kind were frequent in the history of the illegal work of the Party. Shlapnikov, for instance, once went to Genoa instead of Geneva, while another comrade was almost sent to America instead of England. In this case, Krupskaya was sent on from Prague to Herr Rithmeyer at an address in Munich. She arrived at a beer-house and inquired for Herr Rithmeyer, expecting to be presented to Lenin. But again it appeared she was on the wrong track. "I am Rithmeyer," replied the owner of the beer-house. But he told her there was a Russian gentleman staying there who was expecting his wife from Siberia. Fortunately, the Russian gentleman turned out to be Lenin. He had written to her to come to Munich, but she had not received his letter.

Krupskaya found Lenin living very simply. The owner of the beer-house to whom the room belonged, was a Social-Democrat. His wife, a Saxon German woman, used to feed Lenin on mehlspeise (a kind of pudding) while he used to get his breakfasts and suppers himself. He drank out of a tin mug which he himself washed out and hung up on a nail by the tap. Although the Russian emigrants in Munich mostly lived legally, Lenin and Krupskaya lived apart from the Russian colony in order not to compromise comrades coming from Russia on Party work. Krupskaya was appointed editorial secretary. Together with Axelrod, Vera Zassulitch and Plekhanov, they organized the production of "Iskra" and its illegal transportation to Russia. It was generally sent to various arranged addresses in Russia, "to be called for."

While in Munich, Lenin commenced his famous book, "What is to be Done?" First, he would pace up and down in deep thought. Then he would sit down and write for hours at a stretch. Krupskaya never interrupted him with questions while he was working. But afterwards, in the evening, they would walk right out to the quietest part of the suburbs, and he would outline with great enthusiasm the main content of what he had written. They would then return to their room where the meetings of the Editorial Board were held.

Martov used to come in the morning to look over the post and sit nearly all day long smoking and telling all the latest news. He used to go on and on, jumping from one subject to another. "Martov is a typical journalist," Lenin often said. "He is extremely talented, seems to grasp everything immediately, extremely impressionable, but takes up a light attitude towards everything." Other comrades used to drop in and they had long, heated arguments for hours at a stretch. Most of the Russian emigrants preferred talking, smoking and sitting round the table drinking endless glasses of tea. Lenin, however, could not stand this and whenever possible he tried to slip away for a walk. His love for Nature attracted him to the river, or far away to the outskirts of the town. Seeing that the long arguments and talks fatigued Lenin, and were detrimental to his health, Krupskaya went round to Martov and asked him to come to see them less frequently. It was agreed that she should go to Martov and report on all the letters received from Russia. But after two days the whole scheme broke down. Martov could not live without the long talks.

In London.

In April, 1902, Lenin came to London. As Lenin had translated Webb's "Theory and Practice of Trade Unionism" from English into Russian while in exile in Siberia, and as Krupskaya had learnt English from a self-taster while in prison, they both thought they would be able to speak the language. To their dismay, they found that no one understood a word they were talking about. Nor could they understand a word of English "as she is spoke." However, they started learning the colloquial language assiduously. They went to all kinds of meetings, sat in the front, and attentively watched the speaker's mouth. Lenin used to go to Hyde Park to hear an Irish Atheist whose pronunciation he found easier to understand than the London accent. He also advertised and got two Englishmen to exchange English lessons for Russian. Lenin was thus able to learn the language fairly thoroughly.

Lenin also took great interest in studying London. Except for the British Museum, where he spent half his time in the library, he did not like visiting museums. Egyptian mummies and Babylonian cuneiform wearied him. The only museum of which he never tired, was a little museum of the 1848 French Revolution, in Rue des Cordilieres, Paris. Very fond of going round London on top of the bus, he would observe the contents of semi-detached houses with gardens in the residential parts of the city and the squalid slums of the workers' districts. "Two nations!" he would mutter through his teeth in English to Krupskaya. He always felt an attraction towards crowds, and often took a bus ride on Saturday night through the working class districts, watching with interest the long rows of barrows with flares, and the people doing their Saturday shopping.

Already in those days, Lenin had great hopes in the British workers. He always tried to get as near to the rank and file as possible. He not only listened to the Hyde Park orators, talking about atheism, garden cities and the bad conditions of shop assistants, but also went to various Socialist meetings in the suburbs, and a Socialist church in Seven Sisters Road. He used to go to Whitechapel and talk with the Russian sailors and listen to the troubles of poor Russian Jew immigrants.

Even in whirling and smoky London, Lenin's love for Nature did not diminish. To use Krupskaya's own words, ". . . even in London we managed to get a glimpse of Nature, and this was not so easy in this smoky, foggy city—especially when we could not spend more than three-halfpence for a bus." When a comrade once said that Lenin only sat in the British Museum, Vera Zassulitch burst out indignantly: "He passionately loves Nature." During this period, Lenin paid a visit to his mother in Brittany. He loved the sea; its continual movement and great breadth soothed him, and he felt rested. While in London, he was very fond of the Zoological Gardens. He often walked up Primrose Hill and admired the view of the city.

"NEW MASSES" WRITERS TALK WAR

By S. A. GARLIN.

The February issue of "The New Masses" is practically an "all" number. The daring exploits of the American capitalist imperialists in the Caribbean area are described with much gusto by Scott Nearing, with the active assistance of several of the cartoonists of the magazine.

In an article entitled, "Uncle Sam—Buccaneer" Nearing, in his customary crisp manner, tells some of the reasons that make it necessary for the Coolidge administration to have 15 warships and several hundred U. S. marines in Nicaragua.

"Uncle Sam needs another canal across the Isthmus. The Panama Canal is getting crowded and besides, in time of war its locks and slides are indefensible against an attack from the air,

"Nicaragua has the only alternative route, thru the San Juan River and Lake Nicaragua. To be sure, Costa Rico claims a voice in the matter as the San Juan River borders that country. But Costa Rico will be dealt with later."

The role of Adolpho Diaz as a petty henchman of American business interests is explained by Nearing in this article, who points out that the present "head" of the government was a clerk in the office of an American corporation operating in Nicaragua when he advanced $600,000 to finance a revolution that was supported, recognized and defended by the U. S. State Department.

In another article on the present situation in Mexico, Nearing puts down all the current troubles of the Mexican people to the discovery of oil in that republic in 1863.

"If the keeping of the Mexican oil fields costs a few rivulets of working-class blood—well, at any rate, Standard will have the oil—and oil is thicker than blood any day."

John B. Chapple, who shows an intimacy with the struggle of the American farmers, writes in this issue on their growing disgust with petty reforms on the one hand, and patronizing "scientific agriculturalists" on the other.

Declaring that "the dirt farmers are hungry," the writer says that they are being driven off the farms throughout the United States.

"Their costs are going up and their receipts down. Taxes and mortgages have them helpless. Insurance companies are cancelling policies, because the value of farms has dropped below what the buildings were insured for a few years ago, and the companies fear the temptation to set the buildings on fire is too great."

"Love Feasts for Labor" is the title of a bristling article by Robert W. Dunn. Discussing the recent outpourings of sociological bilah about the "way to handle the labor situation," and how "labor and capital can work together," Dunn gives the heap to the pompous hypocrites.

There is an interesting article on "The Russians in China" by Lewis S. Gannett, an editor of The Nation, who spent more than a year investigating conditions in that no-longer benighted country.

the whole drive against the Communists at this time. The Communists stand for the class struggle for better conditions for the workers, for the organization of the unorganized, against class collaboration. They must be destroyed. The honest rivals all of the American Federation of Labor, the Socialists to help them in this work. Eat they do not stop here. They do not want any kind of unionism. They want the open shop. When the Communists are cleaned out, they want the A. F. of L. to aid them in cleaning out the Socialists, and when that has been done the open shoppers will begin their campaign to destroy Unionism in this country and proclaim the open shop.

But the New York Commercial and the bosses as a whole will find that while they may and are enlisting the American Federation of Labor officials and the Socialists in the united front against the Communists and militant unionism, they will not destroy the Communist movement and they will not destroy the trade union movement. The Communists will continue their work. The left wing in the trade unions will continue their work. What the New York Commercial and other agencies are doing is to expose the Socialists and the trade union bureaucrats before the broad masses of organized and unorganized workers, and hasten the process of clearing the labor movement of the agents of the bosses and prepare the ground for a bigger, broader and more militant trade union movement in this country.

"Against the united front of the government, the open shoppers, the Socialists and the labor bureaucrats there will be formed the united front of all militants in the American labor movement."

Flashlights on Lenin, The Man

By ERIC VERNEY

MUCH has already been written about the greatest revolutionary leader, thinker and fighter of our times—Vladimir Ilyitch Lenin. But we have mainly seen Lenin from the angle of his theoretical conceptions and his practical policy, expressed in the Russian Revolution. We are now also beginning to study his political and economic doctrines and put them into force. But how many people know the human side of Lenin, how he worked and how he rested? Little is known as yet of the inner side of Lenin's life in his schooldays, in exile and in emigration.

It is true we get some "close-ups" of Lenin from the works of John Reed, Ransome and other writers. But only from those Russian comrades who lived and worked with Lenin in intimate terms can we get a real insight into Lenin's personality. With the exception of writings by Trotsky and Gorky, practically no Russian biographical material on Lenin has appeared in English. Meanwhile, the literature on Lenin in Russia is increasing year by year, and the valuable reminiscences of Lenin's fellow workers, there is a multitude of books, pamphlets and articles by intimate associates of Lenin. These reminiscences describe the enormous influence Lenin had on the masses of the workers, not only in Russia, but in other countries. Between the years 1917 and 1923 Lenin's influence grew and strengthened, whereas the influence of other Bolshevik leaders in Germany and elsewhere, the workers who had Lenin to thank for their training and knowledge of Marxism, declined. Why? Because they had not learned from Lenin how to apply Marxism to the concrete conditions of their own countries. Lenin had a unique knowledge of the psychology of the workers and peasants of Russia, and he knew how to apply Marxism to the Russian conditions.

For French, German, Latin and Greek.

By the time Lenin was 13, he was an ardent chess player and bookworm. Tolstoy's "Anna Karanina" was one of his favorite books at this period. His father having liberal views, Lenin had a fair amount of freedom. Although there was a reasonable amount of discipline, he could develop his inclinations as he wished. As a youth, Lenin was extremely interested in everything surrounding him and very impressionable. It is not known exactly when he first became infected with revolutionary ideas, but he was undoubtedly greatly influenced by his elder brother, Alexander Ulianov.

He loved to sit listening to the various political exiles and revolutionaries who came to see his brother. Once a visitor when speaking on secret matters pointed to the young Vladimir sitting nearby. "Don't worry," said his brother Alexander, "he is a born conspirator."

The execution of his brother Alexander Ulianov, in connection with a plot to assassinate Tsar Alexander III, made a tremendous impression on Lenin. He was only 17 years old at the time, and was greatly attached to his brother, who had been the head of the family since the death of their father. Life became serious and the family left for Kazan, where Lenin entered the university of the revolutionary students.

Persecution at the University.

Persecution followed. Lenin entered the University of Kazan. Here he took a leading part in a students' riot, being the youngest out of thirty-two participants. He was expelled for this exploit. It was in Kazan that Lenin first studied the works of Marx. After getting his degree in law at St. Petersburg, as an external graduate, Lenin settled in Samara. At the age of 22 he worked as assistant juror in the Samara district court. In this capacity he had to defend many peasants tried on various charges, such as stealing. He nearly always pleaded for reduced sentences. In one case, when a merchant was charged with whipping his wife with a knout, the young juror, Lenin, was asked to plead for a reduction of sentence. This Lenin refused. During this period Lenin took part in Samara Marxist circles.

Work in Exile.

When he came to St. Petersburg in 1895, this ostensibly also to practice at the bar. He actually defended a few criminal cases, wearing his father's black frock coat. But he soon established contact with workers' circles and started revolutionary activity. The police were immediately on his track. But even by this time he was skilled in conspirative work. He not only knew how to dodge detectives. He taught the comrades how to inscribe various secret signs, how to write with "invisible" chemical inks, how to make seals, etc.

Arrested by Tsarists.

In 1895, Lenin went abroad to establish contact with Plekhanov. He returned to Russia with Illegal Social-Democratic literature. He was shortly afterwards arrested and imprisoned for over a year. He soon learnt the technique of getting things passed out of prison, and maintained contact with the outside world by correspondence in books, and passing out notes in his soiled linen.

Prison Writings.

Here he wrote whole pamphlets which he got smuggled outside while still in prison. These included "On Strikes" and "Draft Programme of Russian Social-Democracy." This term of imprisonment was spent in writing his first important work, "The Development of Capitalism in Russia."

In 1897, exiled for three years to the little village of Shushensk in Siberia, he lived in a small clean room in a peasant's house with whom he was on friendly terms. Other political exiles were a Polish worker and a Finn. Lenin soon began to teach them Marxism and explain Marx's "Capital." He tried to make acquaintance with the local "intelligentsia." However, the teachers whom he approached preferred to drink and to play cards with the priests, merchants and other members of the local aristocracy.

After a while, Lenin was joined by Krupskaya, who was also exiled to Siberia and was accompanied by her mother. As it was difficult to employ a girl in the winter months, they did their own cooking. The food was very simple. Bread, milk and sometimes mutton. It could not be otherwise, for political exiles only got a "grant" of 8 roubles per month to cover all expenses. However, there was a kitchen garden by the house, so they grew their own cucumbers, carrots and beetroots.

Lenin accomplished a tremendous amount of work during these years of exile. In the mornings, together with Krupskaya, he would translate Sydney Webb's book on trade unionism. After dinner, they would write out "The Development of Capitalism in Russia," which he had commenced in prison. At this time a wide correspondence was maintained not only with the Social-Democrats in Russia, but also with the exiles in Siberia. This was difficult as the police were vigilant and correspondence had to go by way of indirect addresses. Lenin always looked forward eagerly to the post which came twice a week.

His sister, Anna, used to write all the St. Petersburg news. The correspondence covered Russian news, plans for the future, new books and philosophical tendencies. Lenin did considerable translation work from English, German and French into Russian, assisted by Krupskaya. They translated, at this time, Kautsky's "Anti-Bernstein" in two weeks.

Another of Lenin's occupations in exile was chess playing. Lepeshinsky recounts how he used to play chess with Lenin for hours at a stretch, when the latter used to come to visit him at his place of exile in Minnusinsk. Lepeshinsky could never win a game. Once he organized an "alliance" of three comrades against Lenin. Lenin began to lose piece after piece. But stubbornly, persistently he fought them, concentrating the whole strength of his mind on the board. So great was his effort that the perspiration was dripping from his brow. At that moment nothing would have moved him from the board, not even the cry of "Fire." Lepeshinsky compares this game of chess to Lenin's own life work.

In the evenings, after work was finished, the chief recreations were walking, fishing and shooting. He was specially fond of hunting wild duck and hare. Krupskaya tells how Lenin was absolutely bubbling over with high spirits on those Siberian evenings.

Love for Nature, Music, Poetry.

Lenin was passionately fond of nature. He loved to walk miles along the river on autumn nights, and hear the thin ice cracking beneath his feet. In the summer he would sit by the running river, which reminded him of his native Volga. He was very fond of music, but what music there was, was very primitive in these parts. The harmoniums of the village youth plagued him none the less. When he returned from the evening walk his reading generally comprised the philosophical books of Hegel, Kant or the French materialists. When he became tired he would turn to the poems of Pushkin, Lermontov or Nekrassov. It has been said that Lenin only liked "serious" books and never read novels. This is a legend. He read Turgenev, Tolstoy, and was very fond of the classics. It is interesting here to note that he kept a photograph album containing portraits not only of famous revolutionary revolutionaries, but also of Emile Zola, Heroen and Tchernyshevsky.

On returning to Russia from exile, Lenin gave up chess playing. "It gets too much of a grip on you, and hinders work," he said. And as he did not do anything by halves, but always put his whole heart into all he accomplished, he was unwilling to devote himself to chess even when resting

May Day Raids, 1923, Inspired By Lewis

By ROBERT DUNN

A DOCUMENT has just come into my hands which may be of interest to those who are following the miners' convention at Indianapolis. If my good friend Powers Hapgood is butchered up by the brass-knuckled agents of Mr. John L. Lewis and Mr. Pat Fagan it is certainly no surprise to any of us. We know what that union machine can do against its enemies. This document gives an instance.

As a background to our story it is necessary to remember Mr. David J. Berry, formerly of Pittsburg, Pa., and his National Labor Journal, published for many years and as late as the spring of 1924 in that city. It called itself "Organized Labor's Official Newspaper" and declared that it was published "in the interest of the American Federation of Labor." The office of the general manager and editor was in the Union Labor Temple at Pittsburg. The list of organizations holding stock in the paper and appearing on the masthead were the Pittsburg Central Labor Union, the United Mine Workers of America District 6, Street Railway Employees Div. 85, Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 27, Barbers Local 188. The "advisory board" of the paper was made up of gentlemen from those organizations. The journal carried the press service of the A. F. of L. Mr. Berry claimed to be an intimate of Samuel Gompers, indeed this was his premier asset, and stock in trade in making approaches to manufacturers.

Flags and Real Estate.

It is unnecessary to describe the National Labor Journal in detail. It was a gorgeous mixture of American flags and real estate ads, flattering sketches of republican politicians and stern attacks on the labor radicals. On one occasion the journal announced that "as the official mouthpiece of organized labor in the Pittsburgh district, we can say without fear of successful contradiction that the labor organizations affiliinted with the Pittsburg Central Labor Union are composed of men who desire not the wealth of the world, but a fair wage and working conditions which enable them to live according to the American standard." (It may be observed in passing that one of these members, Mr. Robert Beattie of the Firemen and Oilers Union certainly lived according to the workingclass standards—several motor cars, diamond stick pins, $15 a day plus expenses from the Railroad Audit and Inspection Co., industrial spy corporation, in addition to his union wages which were by no means meagre.)

Eater, Brother Berry.

It goes without saying that brother Berry did not love the radicals. He featured anything that hit them below the belt. As far back as the great steel strike he was engaged in the sort of red-baiting that has now become so popular even in so-called socialist unions. During the strike, his paper, appeared in Pittsburgh, the heart of the struggle, with no word of encouragement for the strikers. Only colorless accounts marked by prejudice against the strike leadership. At the same time he played up stories headlined "deportations ahead" he speeded up, "there is too much radicalism in the labor unions," "labor awakened for battle with radicals." The radicals, it will be remembered, were chiefly William Z. Foster, John Fitzpatrick; yes, and Jim Maurer of the Penna. State Federation of Labor, whom Berry bitterly hated. He tried to link up Jim with Ludwig Martens, the Soviet representative in America at the time.

The Blackmail Tour.

There is no space here to recount the various exploits of Berry except a few that lead up to the lawsuit from which our document derives. It is possible to summarize them.—1. Berry went to a number of employers in the Pittsburg district and promised them that if they would contribute money he would see that a certain person was elected president of the Iron City Central Trades Council. He picked up several thousand dollars. Then he made a compromise supporter of the other candidate, Mr. Phillip Murray, now the vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America, by which Berry's candidate was to withdraw and run instead for the presidency of the Penna. State Federation of Labor. Then Berry toured the state picking up funds from employers to elect this man to the state office. This blackmailing tour netted Berry about $22,000. He and his followers pocketed the money and their candidate was not successful. The employers who had been shaken down were naturally pretty sore.

And Papa Gompers.

2. Berry had also been the Pennsylvania representative of the notorious American Alliance for Labor and Democracy which was fathered by Samuel Gompers and other labor chauvinists in order to offset the activities of the Peoples' Council in the war days. Berry attended the congress of this alliance held in Minneapolis and came back with a wad of money to spend on the enterprise in Pennsylvania. The money was spent for other purposes connected with Berry's own private business.

Berry's Private Business.

3. Part of this private business was the "settlement" of labor disturbances. The employers of the Pittsburg district were given to understand that the alliance above mentioned, was a patriotic body to which a manufacturer could turn if he had any "trouble" with his foreign-born workers. One Chas. F. Matheson, superintendent of the Tyler Tube and Pipe Co., of Washington, Pa., thought there was a strike brewing in his plant. He called on Mr. Berry. Berry visited Mr. Matheson in his home and told the latter he must have $350 in cash before he could take any action in the matter. He got the cash, and assured Mr. Matheson that he would adjust the trouble and that he had with him an agent of the department of justice who was assisting him.

Two Hundred Berries More.

Matheson heard nothing more of Berry for a few days when he received a phone call. Berry was speaking: "Matters are still in a very bad state. I will have to do some additional work. I want $200 more." Matheson drew a check made out to Berry's Journal and mailed it in to the Labor Temple.

Meanwhile Matheson became suspicious of brother Berry and discovered at the D. of J. office in Pittsburg that Berry had not had any agent with him when he went to Washington to head off the strike. Berry was subsequently backed into a corner and forced to confess his blackmail game. He signed a statement to this effect.

Saving His Reputation.

These were just a few of the tricks that Mr. Berry pulled and none of them seemed to win him favor with the employers. He simply could not deliver the goods. The candidates he supported were not elected; the strikes he attempted to prevent broke out. The employers decided to expose him. Lead by the Employers Association of Pittsburgh and its secretary-manager, E. B. Moreland, they charged Berry with much dirty work, and issued a long statement against him on May 10, 1923. Berry, to save his "reputation," filed a suit for $200,000 damages against the employers. The suit was filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny county in 1924. The plaintiff's statement in this suit is the document which has just reached my hands. It contains the confidential statement of the employers issued in 1923 and dealing with the activities of brother Berry. And it tells us something about the officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

Cops Celebrate May Day.

Workers may recall the raids made on the headquarters of the Workers' Party of Pittsburg just before May Day, 1923. They were conducted by federal and local agents, professedly to forestall a May Day celebration. Twenty-three persons were arrested and held in bail of $5,000 to $25,000 under the state anti-sedition act. The brutalities of these raids and arrests were investigated by the American Civil Liberties Union, whose officials including its chairman, Dr. Harry F. Ward, pronounced it one of the most unwarranted and illegal attacks made on workingclass liberties since the war.

U. M. W. of A. and The Raid.

It will also be remembered how Tom Meyerscough, one of the leaders of the Progressive Miners Committee which had been formed in Pittsburg, was arrested a few days later as he was going to take bail to some of the arrested workers. The police seized all of Meyerscough's books and business papers. Later when Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal issued his pamphlet exposing the paper exposing of the militants' work in the mine workers' union we noticed that much of the material used was that which was supplied by the under seal at the office of the department of justice in Pittsburg. It was clear that there had been some collusion between the United Mine Workers' officials and the raiders and prosecutors of Meyercough and others. The attempt to frame-up Alex Howat while he was stopping at a Pittsburg hotel will also be recalled.

The May 10, 1923 statement of the Employers' Association of Pittsburg which is appended as Exhibit "A" to this damage suit of Berry's clears up some of the mystery surrounding these raids, and makes it plain as daylight what forces were behind them. The document tells us bluntly:

"The recent red raids in Pittsburg which have received considerable publicity in the local press were inspired by the United Mine Workers of America."

Why did the United Mine Workers inspire those raids? The document goes on to tell us how the Workers' Party, at that time lead in the Pittsburg district by Fred Merrick, "had met with considerable success in the newly organized mine fields, particularly those controlled by the H. C. Frick Coal and Coke Co." Their influence within the ranks of certain elements of the miners from this field has been very embarrassing to the so-called reactionary leaders of District No. 5, of the United Mine Workers."

Strikebreaker Lewis.

The story reviews the calling off of the strike in this field by the International and the formation of the Miners' Relief Committee through which food was distributed to those workers who remained out and who refused to be trapped back to work by the Lewis order. It tells about the conference of militant miners to protest against the action of the machine.

Howat on the Job.

"These various conferences," the document continues, "resulted in forming the Miners' Progressive Committee and the calling into the field of Alex Howat of Kansas strike fame. Howat is an expelled officer of the United Mine Workers, as a result of his defiance of the Kansas Industrial Court and incarceration in jail for defiance of this court. The Miners' Progressive Committee immediately started to coordinate the work of all the disgruntled factions of the United Mine Workers of America, embracing their activities in the Frick field."

It then tells how several conferences of the militants "were broken up by the officers and followers of the regular officers of District No. 5." However, it admits that Howat and others had developed quite a following and had arranged for a national conference which was to convene in Pittsburg June 2. This made the officialdom of the miners' union desperate. This is how the employers' document puts it:

Enter "Justice"

"Naturally, all this has resulted in considerable embarrassment to the regular officers of the United Mine Workers with the result that a few weeks ago, they called upon the Pittsburg office of the United States department of justice with a complaint against Merrick, Howat, et al, with a request that these men be prosecuted because of their activities in the Workers' Party. It was explained to these leaders that there was no federal violation by citizens in participating in the Workers' Party activities, but that there was a state violation under the said sedition act. It was suggested to these leaders that they use their influences with the county and city officials and the state police and if they could get them officials to act the government agents would lend all of the expert assistance possible."

The statement of the employers' association continues:

"Mr. Mitchell Palmer" Lewis.

"The Mine Workers' officers followed these suggestions and a number of the International officers coming to Pittsburg to push this prosecution. (Italics ours). As usual, in cases of this kind, where politics in the ruling forces, in aid of the county, city and federal officials was easily secured, particularly when the possible votes of the United Mine Workers, in elections were solicited before their eyes, these officials agreed to act, the local office department of justice was officially enlisted with the result that arrangements for the raids were made by the department of justice men who instructed the city, county, and state police as to whom to raid in the manner of making the raid, etc."

This, it will be recalled, is just what happened. A department of justice dick named Keenan, was the technician in charge of the raids, and the prosecutions were brought by county attorneys under the state anti-sedition act. All of this was carefully inspired by the lofty ideal of saving the United Mine Workers of America

Youth and the Textile Industry

By CLARENCE MILLER

The textile industry in the United States at the present time is undergoing a partial crisis. This is due particularly to the introduction of the speed-up system and labor saving machinery, but it is even more due to the competition which is growing, especially in the German textile industry, which due to the introduction of the Dawes plan has cut the standard of living of the German workers to such an extent that it can compete with American interests in America's own home market in spite of our high protective tariff rates.

The present crisis does not effect so much the profits and dividends of the stockholders as it does the standard of living of the textile workers. The mill owners utilize this competition to carry on a campaign of wage cuts and even raise the already high tariff as well as utilize it for a basis for wage cuts.

The outstanding feature in the industry today is the development that is going on in the South. Cheap labor supply of both white and negro, and cheap power and raw materials is helping the growth of the textile, especially of the cotton industry in the South.

The textile industry is the country employing the largest number of women and children and next to agriculture employs the largest number of workers. Over 40 per cent of those who are employed in the textile industry are women. 60 per cent of those who are employed are children. Thirty-five to 40 per cent of the wage earners are females. The majority of these workers is usually a little higher amongst the whites.

Geographically the textile industry is distributed as follows: Connecticut about 40,000 workers; Massachusetts about 200,000 workers; New Jersey, 75,000 workers; New York, 90,000 workers, many of these are upstate New York; Pennsylvania, 150,000, and the rest of the textile industry is primarily in the South.

Of the 610,000 textile workers in the East there are 191,000 cotton workers, 141,000 woolen and worsted workers, 113,000 silk workers, 104,000 knit goods workers and 50,000 dyeing and finishing workers.

Economically the textile workers, especially the child and youth laborers are among the most exploited. Eight to ten dollars per week is not an unusual wage. On the other hand the profits of the mill owners in many cases reach to the 1,000 per cent. It must also be born in mind that the textile industry has a protective tariff of an average rate as high as 75 per cent, which helps to maintain these high profits.

The introduction of the speed-up system taking the form of the introduction of new machinery, labor saving devices, increased number of looms per worker, etc., continually displaces large numbers of workers by youth, and child laborers, and adds to the already large number of unemployed textile workers. Unemployment in the textile industry can be said to be almost chronic. This last is especially true in the New England states.

The hours in the textile industry range from 48 to 60 and more hours per week. In some states the law provides for a shorter work day for the child laborers, but there are many ways by which the manufacturers beat the law. Wherever it is enforced the work day is in no places less than eight hours for the child laborers. In some very few places the 44-hour week has been achieved, but this is very insignificant for the industry as a hole. At the present time in New England there is a tendency, as shown in Salem, and Mannville, to introduce the 54-hour week instead of the 48-hour week that is prevailant in the New England mills.

The sanitary conditions in the textile industry are very bad though the technique and nature of the industry permits better sanitary conditions. The death rate and industrial diseases in the textile industry are higher than in any other industry. Investigations by the Workers Health Bureau of the Passaic strikers disclosed that the young of textile workers especially are affected by tuberculosis.

Workers Unorganized And Divided

Of the one million workers in the industry not more than 50,000 are organized and these are organized into several unions. The largest of these is the United Textile Workers having about 15,000 to 20,000 members including the new Passaic locals; the second largest is the Federated Textile Unions of America, a federation of several loosely-connected national bodies with a membership of about 10,000. Then comes the Associated Silk Workers of Paterson with a membership of about 2,000. The other independent organizations are the United Front Committees, Textile Workers Clubs, etc.

Some time ago the progressive textile workers had a conference in New York at which they decided on a program of work that is needed to organize the textile industry. It was shown that only the progressives can force the present unions to start an organization drive in the industry as well as push forward amalgamation which is so important in this industry.

The progressives also realize that if we are to be successful in organizing the textile workers we must reach the young workers who form such a large section of the workers in the industry. The conference therefore decided on the following program:

1.—All progressive blocs within local textile unions shall nominate upon their slate at least one youth worker to local union executive boards and upon all union committees in order to carry out the program for organizing the large number of youth workers in the textile industry.

2. Local progressive committees shall try to draw in as many young workers from local unions, unorganized mills, social clubs and sports organizations as is possible.

3. A special youth program shall be drawn up for each local committee and special committees shall be created to carry out this program to organize the youth in the textile industry.

4. A youth and children's section to be included in the progressive textile publications to be prepared by a special editor under direction of the executive committee.

This program should help to draw the young workers into the campaigns that are initiated by the progressives and it will help make the progressives the champions of the interests of the young textile workers.

Only American Barons Defy Mexico

European Oil Companies Obey Land Law

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Mexico's land and petroleum laws, which the state department consider so confiscatory that a break in relations has been threatened, have proved acceptable to 95 per cent of the foreign oil producers in Mexico, according to figures issued today from the Mexican embassy here.

The embassy statement did not specify the identity of the five per cent minority, but it is understood to include some of the companies controlled by the Doheny, Sinclair and Standard Oil of Indiana interests.

Only U. S. Pirates Hold Out.

Up to the Dec. 31, the statement set forth, 643 applications were filed for permits to operate under the new laws, these obligations covering some 26,833,830 acres of land. Of this total, 323 applications concerned oil rights derived from contracts prior to May 1, 1917 (when the new constitution was adopted) and 236 concerned rights derived from contracts subsequent to the adoption of the constitution.

The applications filed covered 26,833,320 acres, and embraced 94.17 per cent of the lands affected, according to the embassy's figures, while the applications withheld covered 1,860,008 acres, and embraced 5.83 per cent.

To Let Facts Speak.

The Embassy made public the figures without explanatory comment, preferring apparently to let them speak for themselves.

No comment was forthcoming from the state department. Secretary of State Kellogg has for several days declined to discuss the Mexican situation.

The attitude of the department apparently is to wait until there is an actual "overt act" on the part of the Mexican government in seizing some of the lands whose owners refuse to abide by the new laws. What will happen then is a matter of conjecture, but on the part of certain oil representatives in Washington there is an expectation that Ambassador Sheffield will be withdrawn from Mexico City. This expectation, however, is not generally shared.

Papal Agent Speaks.

The religious issue was injected into the Mexican controversy again last night when a mass meeting was held in Washington auditorium and addressed by Joseph Scott, of Los Angeles attorney, speaking under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. Many members of Congress and representatives of the embassies and legations in Washington, attended.

Scott bitterly attacked the Calles government as being "Bolshevistic" and "under the domination of Moscow." Instead of adopting the philosophy of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, he said, President Calles has followed Karl Marx in the premise that "religious is the opiate fo the people.

BANKERS OPPOSE EVEN WEAK FARM RELIEF STATUTE

Supporters Compare It To Reserve Bank Law

PEORIA, Ill., Jan. 28.—Criticism among the farmers of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill is that it provides for farm relief to come largely from the farmers themselves. It will not set any minimum price on farm products, or provide any money for assistance in the difficult time of crop moving (harvesting and selling) nor even do much in the way of cooperative selling, beyond a misery loan, not a gift, for that purpose.

Congressmen supporting the bill, which even as it stands is too "radical" for the extremely conservative try to compare it with the Federal Reserve act. Congressman Chas. Brand, of Ohio, speaking yesterday at the Twelfth Annual Convention of the Illinois Agricultural Association here said:

"The recent attack made on the McNary-Haugen bill by Melvin A. Traylor of Chicago, president of the American Bankers Association was unfair, the bill is analogous to the federal reserve act which does for the bankers what the proposed farm relief measure is designed to do."

"Traylor has stabilized legislation and is now denying the farmer the same right. What the federal reserve act does for the money of the banker, the McNary-Haugen bill would do for food or the farmer's production."

Rest For Hotel Employes.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Hotel employes would be granted one day of rest in every seven under a bill introduced in the legislature today.

Severe Prison Terms Handed Cloakmakers

Judge Rosalsky Is Merciless In Strike Cases

What are characterized as the most severe sentences ever given striking workers in the history of the American labor movement were pronounced yesterday afternoon by Judge Otto A. Rosalsky in the Criminal Court upon 19 members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union who were convicted of assault charges growing out of the recent cloakmakers' strike.

No Consideration.

The method in which the boss' court metes out "justice" to workers was seen in the brutal sentences the strikers were given. Altho never arrested before, they were shown no more consideration than the ordinary criminal in spite of the fact that they were arrested when fighting for their most elementary rights as workers, and defending themselves against the bosses' gangsters and the local police force.

Old Unionists.

Sam Cohen, a member of Local 2 for ten years, and Nathan Lenz, a member of the same local for fourteen years, were sentenced to state's prison for from two and a half years to five years charged with assault in the second degree.

Joseph Pearlman, who has been a member of Local 2 for fourteen years and Anton Romanchek, also a member of this local for ten years, were given intermediate sentences of six months to one year. They were also charged with assault in the second degree.

Indeterminate Sentences.

Theodore Turetsky was sentenced to an indefinite term in the penitentiary.

Intermediate sentences of one month to a year and a half were given to the following:

Anton Kutzuk, Local 35, Charles Walfish, Local 35, Joseph Kerensky, Sam Grossman, Harry Freedman, Morris Pinsky, Joseph Pilegowsky, Antiona Mandino, Anton Zinn, and Paul Kalechman.

Louis Antonozski and Max Gorenstein were released on two years probation while Jacob Levin and Jack Sharfs were placed on pruhation for three years each.

No Mercy.

While the complainant against Walfish was willing to withdraw the charge and the jnry recommended mercy Judge Rosalsky nevertheless gave him the unusually long sentence of a year and a half.

Many relatives and friends of the accused workers were present in the court room when Judge Rosalsky handed ont the sentences. One women fainted and had to be taken home in an ambulance and many others screamed and shouted their disapproval of bosses' justice as exemplified by Judge Rotalsky.

"Although you men are mere puppets," Judge Rosalsky said, "you are screening those who directed you to commit these acts of violence and destroy merchandise, and I am going to send you to prison as a warning to you that you must not be identified with lawlessness."

Hyman Amazed.

Louis Hyman, general manager of the Joint Board said when he heard of these sentences:

"Never in the history of the labor movement have such severe sentences been meted out to workers who have been engaged in the struggle for better conditions in their industry.

"These men are ordinary workers. They have never been arrested before. Sam Cohen and N. Lenz, who were given the heaviest sentences, have been members of Local 2 for ten and fourteen years respectively. Every her man sentenced has been a union ember for years.

Strikers on Duty.

"As for Judge Rosalsky's statement that these men were incited by union leaders to destroy property and injure non-union men, they have no foundation in fact.

These men were not sent and did not go out to slug anybody. They went on the picket lins and when they were attacked they attempted to defend themselves.

Gangsters Free.

"There were numerous instances during the strike in which pickets were beaten and assaulted and even shot by the hired gangsters of the employers, yet these gangsters go free today, while ordinary workers are sent to jail."

British Government Offers to Surrender Its Chinese Concessions

LONDON, Jan. 28. — Charge d'Affaires O'Malley is reported to have made new proposals to the Cantonese government involving the surrender of the British concessions throughout China, including extra-territoriality and plans for new treaties supplanting the present unequal ones. Those who are justifiably suspicious of British diplomacy see in this move either a surrender to the inevitable or a trick to throw the Cantonese off their guard while the British forces were rushing to Shanghai.

Reports state that the Cantonese will be in Shanghai before the British forces get there.

FIVE PASSAIC STRIKERS GET PRISON TERMS

Paterson Judge Hands Down Vicious Sentences

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 28.—The Passaic textile barons exacted a terrible vengeance from their revolting slaves this afternoon, when Judge Delaney of the Special Sessions Court handed out three-year jail sentences to five striking textile workers implicated in the police bomb frame-up of last September. Those sentenced were Joseph Bellani, Anthony Pochno, Alex Kostomacha, Paul Ozmik, and William Sikora.

A non-striker, Charles Current was given, very significantly, only a one-year sentence. As the sentences were pronounced silence settled over the court-room, which was filled with the wives, children and friends of the strikers. The silance was broken when women and children began to sob as the men were led out of the court-room. A crowd of sobbing women and children surrounded the hand-cuffed men in the corridor to bid them a heartrending farewell.

The convicted men were six of the eleven who were arrested last September on the charge of having thrown a bomb which hurt no one, and which damaged little property. The bomb-throwing and the trial are regarded as a frame-up designed to prevent the entrance of the A. F. of L. into the textile strike.

The remaining five of the eleven, still held at Hackensack for trial, are Thomas Regan, Adolph Wisneski, Joseph Toehl, Paul Kovac, and Nicholas Stehllaci. They are being held on $15,000 bail apiece.

Girl Textile Workers Display Solidarity

CARBONDALE, Pa., (FP). — Twenty girls who have been working overtime for the Carbondale Mills, Inc., won a two-day strike for reinstatement of a girl worker discharged when family illness called her home. The girl strikers resisted efforts of a company agent to bring them back into their fellow worker was admitted. They complained that they had been working beyond the legal limit of hours. A town police officer is credited with mediating the dispnte between the girls and the knit goods manufacturer.

Legislators Shirk.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Two minnte sessions of Senate and Assembly were held day. Less than a dozen members were present in both houses.

Miners' Convention In Uproar of Protest

Bonafide Delegates Wild About Plan for Salary Grab; Dilution of Constitution; Barring of Howat

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 28.—The convention here of the United Mine Workers of America, was again convulsed with a roar of protest from the bona fide delegates when International President John L. Lewis' henchmen brazenly began to force through by use of the fake delegations from "blue sky" locals their motion to raise his salary from $9,000 a year and expenses, to $12,000 per year and expenses. Expenses include the regular daily item of fare from Springfield, Ill., where Lewis nominally lives, to Indianapolis, in which his offices are located.

Just as unpopular was the proposition to raise the annual salaries of vice president and secretary treasurer from $7,000 to $9,000. Both salary grabs were recommended by the constitutional committee, appointed by Lewis when the convention opened. They will not be ageed to without a struggle.

Alexander Howat, probably the most popular man with the rank and file in the miners' union, because of the courageous way in which he fought against the compulsory arbitration law in Kansas before Lewis arbitrarily removed him from that office, was a delegate to the convention, but Lewis stated that, he would not be seated because, "The President of District 14 has returned his credential". The Kansas (Dist. 14) administration has been under Lewis' control since Howat's removal.

Progressive Demands Why.

John Hindmarsh of Riverton, Illinois, took the floor to demand an explanation of Howat's being barred, and received the above excuse during the argument.

Lewis Threatens.

Following this verbal pasage at arms, President Lewis said: "There are men on the floor of this convention who are not delegates and who have been taking a part in the proceedings. Now that the committee on credentials has made its final report and we have men who are delegates I am advising these men who are not delegates to go to the galleries if they wish to attend this convention." Lewis said he knew who these men were but did not name them.

Lewis Wrecks Constitution.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 27.—The slaughter on the United Mine Workers' constitution began early in the afternoon when the declaration that the union is organized to obtain for the members "the full social value of their product" was stricken from the preamble, where it had been placed by the pioneers in 1890.

Instead, the weasel words, "an equitable share of the fruits of their labor" were inserted to make way for Emperor Lewis' efficiency union policy.

Progressives Proposals Killed.

A score of amendments proposing the democratization of the union were killed without ado. Individual appeals will continue to end in the districts, election of organizers was defeated and efforts to cut the ground out under the machine by taking away Lewis' patronage failed.

All officers, including the lowest local union functionaries, must be citizens of the United States or Canada, or take out papers. International officers need no longer report to the convention individually, a joint report in the future accounting for their "stewardship."

Constitution Revision.

Revision of Article 9, Section 25, giving the international board, that is, Emperor Lewis, absolute right to levy assessments on the membership for more than two months without referendums, broke the administration's triumphal march through the constitution. Hiding their plea for the unlimited power which this momentous decision would give them under the guise of helping West Virginia, the gang brought forward their biggest guns for the crucial battls of the day. Their best argument, however, proved to be control of the count.

Hindmarsh Refused Floor.

Vice-president Murray in the chair ruled with the despotism of an autocrat. Hindmarsh was refused the floor to discuss amendments proposed by his own union. Other progressives were rapped down during the assessment debate when they

SACCO, VANZETTI LAWYER EXPOSES FAULTS OF TRIAL

Powerful Argument in Full Bench Court

(Special To The Daily Worker.)

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 28.—The fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair was resumed yesterday, at the appeal before the full bench of the Massachusetts supreme court.

This is considered by many as the final battle. The appeal is made against the decision of Judge Thayer issued last October on the plea for a new trial based on the sixty-three affidavits brought before him which final report and the confession of Madeiros, exonerating Sacco and Vanzetti from guilt.

Also Thayer disregarded affidavits showing the part the department of justice played in the case.

Renew Famous Case.

Fred Thompson, of the defense, and his assistant, Ehrman, read before the court a brief, reviewing the history of the case and the famous Palmer raids.

Arguing before the full bench today, Thompson showed that Judge Thayer's decision was full of mistakes and misstatements as to the facts. He proved that the decision of the judge showed that his feelings became so involved as to make him incapable of dealing logically or impartially with this motion.

Refuted Point By Point.

Thompson took up the judge's decision seriatum and showed his misstatements in regards to the jury being satisfactory to the defendants, to the manner in which the judge charged the Madeiros confession was gotten, and his statement to the jury as to the defendant's unpatriotism and disloyalty to the country.

He told of the Madeiros confession in detail and was corroborated by other evidence which the judge did not take into account, also the evidence that the Morrell gang are the real guilty ones in the murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti are framed.

Thompson told of the affidavits dealing with the activities of the department of justice in the case, how they assigned twelve men to cover activities of the defense, how a spy named Caribono was placed into the cell next to Sacco, and another named Ruzamenti, was sent to become a lodger at Mrs. Sacco's home.

The affidavits showed further that the department of justice believed Sacco and Vanzetti to be innocent but supplied the district attorney with facts with the hope of getting rid of them some way.

The refusal of the department of justice to give access to their documents in this case was also told by the lawyer for the defense.

Thompson in his motion for a new trial and rehearing on the motion (which was denied) also demanded that if a hearing be granted it should be before another judge as Thayer is incapable of being impartial in the case.

The hearing will continue tomorrow and after the district attorney's argument may conclude Saturday.

Creating Atmosphere.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Several persons today were barred from the supreme court hearing on arguments over exceptions to a denial of a new trial of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti by Judge Webster Thayer.

Court officers refused admission solely upon the appearance of the applicants. Police plain clothes men were scattered among the spectators.

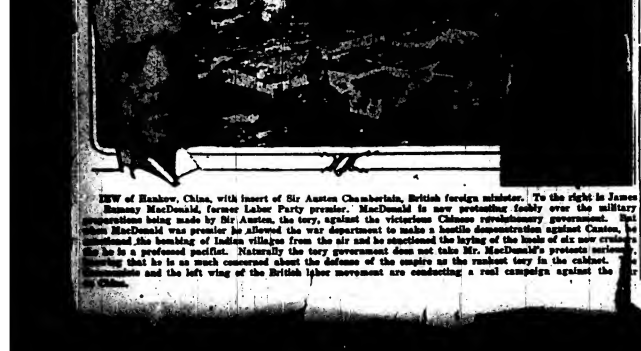
BRITISH SPEED TROOPS TO CHINA OVER LABOR PROTEST



HEW of Hankow, China, with insert of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister. To the right is James Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor Party premier. MacDonald is now protesting feebly over the military preparations being made by Sir Austen, the tory, against the victorious Chinese revolutionary government. But even MacDonald was premier he allowed the war department to make a hostile demonstration against Canton, he ordered the bombing of Indian villages from the air and he sanctioned the laying of the bods of air craft carriers. He is a professed pacifist. Naturally the tory government does not take Mr. MacDonald's protests seriously, knowing that he is as much concerned about the defense of the empire as the rankest tory in the cabinet. Meanwhile and the left wing of the British labor movement are conducting a real campaign against the ... China.

PANAMA NATIONAL ASSEMBLY KILLS SLAVE PACT WITH UNITED STATES

COLON, Panama, Jan. 28.—The proposed new treaty between the United States and Panama was virtually a dead letter today as a result of the Panama National Assembly's action in voting to suspend further consideration of the treaty and, return it to the president of Panama for further negotiations.

GLADSTONE, THE MORALIST, 2ND DADDY BROWNING

The Liberal Leader Did Rob the Nurseries

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Lily Langtry, the beautiful "Jersey Lily," Laura Bell, the famous music hall country singer, and Olga Nonikoff, the lovely Russian spy, were named in the London courts today as among the women who influenced Gladstone, the great liberal statesman.

The allegations were made at the opening of the great trial which has aroused deep interest in the highest political and social circles of the kingdom.

Captain Peter Wright, author and former secretary to the Supreme War Council at Versailles, is suing Lord Gladstone, youngest son of the Victorian statesman, for libel.

Called Gladstone a Hypocrite.

Wright wrote in his book that Gladstone was a hypocrite in matters of sex; that his private practices did not agree with his public profession. Thereupon Lord Gladstone in a letter denounced Wright as a liar, coward, and and a foul fellow, and challenged him to sue him for libel.

Wright took the stand today and testified that since he was a boy, men had told him about Gladstone's fondness for women.

"I was told that Lily Langtry, Laura Bell and Olga Nonikoff were his mistresses," he swore. "Miss. Nonikoff was sent over by the czarist government in the seventies for the purpose of fascinating Gladstone and thoroughly succeeded.

Watched Outside of House.

"In Lord Morley's Life of Gladstone she is described as a Russian lady who was beginning to exercise an influence on the opinions of the important man. I heard also that detectives appointed to watch over Mr. Gladstone during the Fenian days complained they were kept up late watching the outside of Mme. Nonikoff's house, yet had to attend divine service the same morning.

"Fourteen years ago I went to Eastbourne and met a man called Cecil Gladstone, whose resemblance to the statesman was unmistakable. He told me he was an illegitimate son.

"I was also told by a Frenchman named Jean Bertrand that he and an actress named Brassin had an intrigue with Gladstone while visiting London with a theatrical company.

A Nineteenth Century Sheik.

Wright was also allowed to say on the stand that a well-known West End physician used to state that his women patients were in the habit of remarking that Gladstone was paying them attentions. In this connection Wright added:

"A steeplechase rider named Charlie Thompson, who is still alive, told me three years ago of an actual case. The event occurred forty years ago when Gladstone tried to make the acquaintance of a lady he was with. Thompson said he left the lady outside of a shop for a few minutes and on his return Gladstone was talking to her. Gladstone fled when he saw Thompson and the lady told Thompson Gladstone had been making overtures to her."

During the sitting of the Supreme War Council in December of 1917, Lord Milner said to Wright, according to his testimony:

"Gladstone was governed by his seraglio," which the witness understood to be a reference to the statesman's passion for women.

The following passage was read from Mrs. O'Shea's book on Parnell. (Parnell's liaison with Mrs. O'Shea ruined him):

"Parnell said to me: 'I don't trust that grand old spider any further than I can see him.'"

Five Committed Adultery.

There ensued an argument between Judge Avory and Wright about this statement attributed to Lord Granville, who was once Gladstone's foreign secretary: "I have known five of Queen Victoria's prime ministers who committed adultery."

The judge observed the five did not necessarily include Gladstone.

Extracts were read from a book, "Recollections and Reflections," by "A Lady of No Importance," which mentioned Gladstone as an admirer of Laura Bell, a beautiful woman with fair hair, wonderful eyes and pretty figure. "Gladstone," said the writer, "was a wonderful old man and in his old age distinctly amorous."

Faithless to His Wife.

Before court adjourned the cross-examination of Wright began. Asked was asked:

"Isn't the charge that a man is a gross sensualist about as horrible a charge as can be brought against any man?"

Answer—"No, because it has been brought against innumerable men."

Question—"The charge is that Mr. Gladstone was faithless to his wife of sixty years?"

Answer—"Of course it is."

Question—"If somebody made foul charges against the memory of your father what would you call him?"

Answer—"If it were true I would look glum."

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 28.—Frank Purington, state senator in the Harding administration, was indicted by the Marion county grand jury today on charges of bribery. Twenty-eight resolutions demanding officers to refuse to negotiate with operators' association contracts, Purington and [illegible] were killed by the machine. Five were killed by the machine. The exact statute to the question whom they shall or shall not appeal on their committee, "—" the machine. Write your own editorial.

Eleven resolutions demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti, a congressional investigation of their frame-up and a national labor conference to defend them were replaced by a gentle substitute praying for a new trial.

The machine did not dare oppose resolutions denouncing registration of aliens. They passed unanimously with an emphatic vote from foreign-born workers, the majority perhaps of the convention.

Six resolutions for recognition of the Soviet Union recounted the successful nine years' resistance of Russia to the hostile imperialist world, its steady progress toward industrial production, and recognition by all other world powers with growing trade. Recognition of the "first workers republic" and the sending of a miner's committee to Russia were demanded. The machine introduced a four-page substitute branding Communism as the foe of all labor movements, and particularly those led by Lewis & Co.

Sometimes the international organizers are charged with stealing the relief, so a resolution asked that they always be checked in financial matters by a local committee of those "relieved." Thumbs down from the gang.

Demand that hard and soft coal agreements expire together to permit joint action by all union miners in a strike was sidestepped by the wary machine. "Referred to the scale committee." They'll bury it.

Sharp criticism of the gang's habit in grouping hostile resolutions together and then offering a substitute, which cannot be amended came to naught.

Competent field workers are demanded by Utah and Colorado, now entirely non-union. They've had plenty of the kind.

A fighting resolution asking the A. F. of L. to levy a 10-cent assessment on each member for six months to help finance the West Virginia struggle, was knocked galley west.

Pennsylvania and West Virginia each have 100,000 non-union miners, Kentucky 50,000 and seven minor coal states have 50,000 more, declared a resolution demanding real efforts in the organizing line.

* * *

Other resolutions condemned the 1922 policy of leaving the Somerset miners in the lurch and discredited the union in the eyes of unorganized men.

Call for a fighting alliance with the railway workers for mutual strike protection was tossed in the Tahcan for half a dozen good machine reasons. The Brotherhoods don't hang together themselves, they don't belong to the A. F. of L., and the Engineers run scab mines in West Virginia.

Twenty resolutions of the Labor Party never came before the convention. The machine adopted a substitute backing the A. F. of L. non-partisan political action and forget it through.

You should have seen what happened to a resolution denouncing the B. & O. plan, company unionism, the Watson-Parker Act and trade union capitalism. First, it was out of order for dealing with more than one subject. Second, the gang didn't like it anyway. Third, they had a substitute which referred to company unions only. Exit original resolution.

Seven resolutions lauded the Russian miners for sending $3,500,000 for their British brothers and castigated the officialdom of the U. M. W. A., the British trade union congress, the Miners' International and Amsterdam for failing to give whole-hearted support.

POLITICAL NEED ENDS REED BILL FOR LOWER TAX

But Refunds to Big Incomes Go Right On

Special To Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — The Reed proposal for an immediate ten percent tax rebate, which would benefit the big business corporations, is defeated.

With the 1928 presidential election in view, the supporters of Economy Coi are determined to postpone their much-vaunted tax slash until December.

Like A Rebate.

The Reed plan, which was a rider on the Deficiency Appropriation Bill, a republican measure, and which resembled the rebate proposed by Coolidge some time ago, was struck down by a ruling of Vice-president Dawes on a point of order. The defeat of the Reed proposal was inevitable, however, in view of the opposition of the insurgent bloc, which declared that it was opposed to any plan which proposed to return taxes actually paid by consumers to large corporations. Insurgent leaders declare that they favored a permanent reduction in taxes, and were opposed to income taxa rebates.

Rush Funds.

Though the administration wishes to postpone a general tax slash for political reasons, it is quite enxious to see large corporations get their gravy now in the form of refunds. The Deficiency Appropriation Bill, of which the Reed propsal was a rider, sets aside $175,000,000 for income tax refunds. Many of the claims for refunds are absoluto frauds, arranged by clerks in the internal revenue bureau and corporation lawyers, according to democratic leaders.

Three of the largest refunds under the meafure were $6,696,000 for the E. I. Du Pont De Nemoura Co., $5,117,000 for the British-American Tobacco Co. and $5,062,000 for the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Developments at Miners' Convention Important to All American Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

SOME of our readers take the Sattitude that too much space is being given to the convention of the Miners' Union now being held in Indianapolis.

There is no way of measuring just how widespread this feeling is. The fact that it exists, however, is proof enough that more, not less, space should be given to this historic gathering, the developments of which are vital to the whole American labor movement, and bear directly upon the international working class struggle. The refusal of the Lewis administration to come to the assistance of the British coal strike, for instance, had a great deal to do with the defeat of that important labor effort.

Only as the labor movement in the metropolis acquaints itself with the problems of the workers in the great basic industries, of which the mining industry is one of the most important, will it be possible to solidify and thus strengthen American organized labor, in which the New York trade unions should play an important part.

The United Mine Workers of America is the largest trade union in this country, in spite of its diminishing membership. There was a time when it had close to 500,000 members. This has dropped to nearly a quarter million. It is organized on an industrial basis, including all workers in and around the mines, from breaker boys to machine runners, and no matter whether they mine anthracite or bituminous coal. The organization extends into Canada and for a time maintained close connections in Mexico. An effort was made at one time to bring in the metal miners also. In the pre-war days this union had a left wing, without the least bit of organization, possessing a pre-war socialist ideology. Nearly 20 years ago the Miners' Union declared for "the socialization of the means of production and distribution," which was hailed at that time as an acceptance of the Socialist program. Frank J. Hayes, who long had been a member of the socialist party, in 1910 became international vice-president. Socialists were strong in many districts, holding high official positions.

It is no accident, therefore, that this union, organized on an industrial basis, the largest organization of labor, with a membership that has been touched somewhat by Socialist principles, should be the backbone of the American labor struggle. The left wing that struggles valiantly, thru its chosen spoke-men today at Indianapolis, in the steel rod stiffening this spine. No worker, no matter what his task, can fail to thrill at the fight being made by John Dropby, William Stevenson, William Brennan, Powers Hapgood, Alex Howat, Pat Toohey and all the rest. They are battling as much for the needle trades worker, the building trades unionist, the railroader and the steel worker, as they are for the coal miners. If the opposition in the Miners' Union can be crushed, if an expulsion policy can be successfully carried out in this organization, then the Green-Woll-Lewis-Sigman clique of black reaction can ride rough shod over the left wing in every union.

For the socialists are today in close compact, thru Sigman and Knufman, with the Lewis reaction, helping Lewis fight his battles against the opposition and the Communists.

The opposition to the Lewis regime in the Miners' Union is the best ally of the left wing in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, the Furriers' Union, the Capmakers' Union and the other needle trades unions challenging the reaction in their respective organizations. No one knows this better than President William Green, former secretary-treasurer of the Miners' Union, who is now leading the attack on the needle trades workers in New York City. The left wing of the New York labor movement will learn this, too, and interest itself in every issue as it comes before the convention of twelve hundred delegates of miners' unions scattered all over the land.

New York labor can get a better perspective of its own struggle as it beholds the Abe Cahans, the Morris Sigmans, the Morris Kaufmans, the Morris Hillquits, the James Oneals, the Abraham Beckermans and the Sidney Hillmans allied with the sluggers of the Lewis-Bittner-Kennedy reaction in the Miners' Union, beating up the youthful coal miner. Powers Hapgood; garging Michigan's militant, William Stevenson, and villifying as it only knows how, the head of the opposition slate, John Brophy.

The opposition comes into the miners' convention with a definite program to "Save the Union." It calls for a new spirit of struggle. It is met by the reactionary bedpartners of the Sigman-Hillman-Kaufman regime in the needle trades. Instead of a clash of ideas, the arguments they are compelled to meet are those offered by brass knuckles, a piece of gas pipe or an automatic. Such blows must wald the left wing in all the American trade unions into a unified opposition to the reigning reaction. The left wing in New York City should be in the lead of the effort to develop this national unity of progressives. This can be done only by acquainting the thinking workers of each industry with the problems, the struggles and the achievements of the workers in every other industry. The needle trades worker, the miner, the railroader, the steel worker, and all the rest must stand shoulder to shoulder, in the effort to develop a class program for all American labor. To help develop this unity of purpose, to draw all militant labor into a common following struggle, so that the minority forces of the whole trade union movement may march as one man against the capitalist class and its ally, the labor bureaucracy, to become song day the majority, this is the task of The DAILY WORKER, the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party.

As such it gives extensive space to the present convention that is the most crucial so far in the whole history of the Miners' Union. It is not space wasted. It is space used to build a firm foundation on which to rear a working class organization in this country able in time to go forward to the successful seizure of all power in government and industry. To this end it seeks and appeals for the support of the widest masses of New York labor.

CAPITALISTS ... OVER AIR MA... ROUTE CONTR...

New York and Mid-We... Firms Seek Award

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Pr... dent Coolidge today was called upon to help settle the bitter battle waged here for control of America's prize air mail line—the Chicago-New York route.

Two huge sky transportation corporations, each backed by a group of multionaire captains of industry, are seeking the route to form the nucleus for their passenger, express and mail carrying lines that are soon to be placed in operation between the country's two largest cities.

Rival Capitalists Bid.

Bids for the route, he eastern leg of the transcontinental mail line, were opened ten days ago.

Colonial Air Lines, Inc., backed by William Rockefeller, W. H. Vanderbilt, C. V. Whitney, Governor John Trumbul of Connecticut and General John F. O'Ryan of New York, submitted a bid of $1.68 per pound to carry the mail. Colonial also is associated with the Henry Ford airplane interests.

National Air Transport, Inc., formed largely by Chicago and Detroit capitalists, bid $1.98 per pound. It is backed by Howard E. Coffin, of Detroit, a member of the president's air board; William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing gum king; Marshall Field and members of the Armour family of Chicago. Paul Henderson, former assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail and a son-in-law of Representative Martin Madden, chairman of the house appropriations committee, is its general manager.

Postmaster Confers On Award.

So insistent have lobbyists for one of the concerns become that postmaster General Harry S. New today went to the White House where he had a long conference with President Coolidge over the bids and respective qualifications of the bidders.

Emerging from the executive office Mr. New said no decision has yet been reached, but that he expected to make the awards this week.

PLOT TO KILL CHICHERIN ON GERMAN TRAIN

Arrest Tsarist Officer; Like Vorovsky Case

BERLIN, Jan. 28. — A plot has been discovered to assassinate Georges Chicherin, Soviet Commissary of Foreign Affairs, who is here at present, undergoing an operation.

The man arrested today, for being implicated in this plot, is M. Kianzaroff a former officer of the Russian Imperial army. The attempt was to be made during Chicherin's trip from Berlin to Frankfort-on-the-Main, where further treatment of his illness was to be given.

This attempted assassination recalls the murder of Vaslav Vorovski at Lausanne, Switzerland in 1923, by Maurice Conrady, who, though brought into court was acquitted.

COLOMBIA RULERS RUSH TROOPS FOR ROCKEFELLER AID

River Strikers Prevent Sending More

BOGOTA, Colombia, Jan. 27.—A state of marital law has been declared by presidential decree at Barranca Bermeja on the Magdalena River. This action is the result of the strike of the employes working at the Tropical Oil Co., a branch of the Standard Oil Co. The strike has been in progress some time and has had a very strong effect, tying up all production and transportation of oil in this district.

The strikers, who are assisted by the crews of the river steamers, refuse to handle any of the company's products, so that loading and discharging along the whole river has had to be suspended.

An effort was made by the company to have soldiers shipped up river, to employ in strikebreaking activity. This plan had to be given up, however, as no vessel could be manned to carry the troops to their destination. So far, two regiments have been stationed at the oil center.

Firemen Meet Mediator Ask Wage Raise, Time To Eat, Light Work

Wage demands for $1 to $2.75 a day increase are being discussed by officers of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers with G. W. W. Hanger, representative of the Federal Board of Mediation. Hanger has been assigne dto the task of bringing brotherhood and railroad leaders together, if possible.

Higher wages the only part of the gains desired. The union also demands that mechanical stokers be placed on locomotives weighing 175,000 pounds and over on drivers. Till such relief is furnished the union asks that two firemen be assigned to such engines. The union complains that firemen are unduly exhausted by the present practice requiring one man to stand the shovel gaff on these bi glocomotives.

Firemen also call for a reasonable time-allawonce for eating, when on freight service, and they ask for 50-cents a meal and 50 cents a night for lodging expenses when away from home.

The one dollar wage demands is for passenger firemen, now getting a $5.25 a day guarantee. Firemen in through freight service now receiving $5 to $6.20 a day ask increases of $1 to $2.45; those getting $5 to $5.16 a day ask increases of $1 to $2.75 and those paid $6.20 to $6.51 ask $1.19 to $2.69 more. The minimum mrate today for firemen is $4.84 to men on steam locomotives.

Paper Box Thug Jailed For Violence

Joseph Weiss, a gangster, of 49 Pitt Street, was arrested in front of the S. & M. Paper Box Co., 207 Wooster St., on a charge of kicking a paper box striker and using vile language and threats. Mrs. Clara Downey of 223 West 10th Street made the complaint.

Mr. Seligson, the owner of the S. & M., is the same employer who came to the Citizen's Committee and complained of the union's alleged persecution of the Jewish bosses and demanded that the government come in and control strikes. He quoted the Bible. He said he was persecuted enough in Roumania and in Russia and didn't want to be persecuted in America for being a Jew. He said he alwaya believed in unions, hut ho had one for three years and wanted a vacation for three years. And the way he intends to get it is to have a gang of thugs to intimidato and disgust women pickets.

Can't Trust Him.

The value of the boss' word was shown td be slight by Jacob Billikopf, Impartial Chairman of the Men's Clothing Industry when he scored Mr. Sayel of the Hatters' Hat. "Who gave his solemn word to the Citizen's Committee that he would go back and use his influence with the Employers Association to get them to send a committee to meet with the Citizen's Committee and then went to the meeting of the Greater New York Paper Box Manufacturers' Association and spoke three-quarters of an hour against sending a committee."

...T B. E. A. ...ST CONVENTION

...Denounce G. E. B. To A. F. L. Locals

The New York Joint Board of the Fur Workers Union yesterday sent a letter to the International Executive Board demanding that it immediately issue the call for the regular biennial convention to be held during the spring of this year.

The letter sent a lengthy statement to all local unions the American Federation of Labor in the United States, setting in great detail the entire controversy that has been going on in the Fur Workers' union.

The letter to the General Executive Board points out the chaotic condition to be found in most of the local unions in the United States and Canada.

It says in part:

"The fur workers of Locals 1, 9 and 15 of the New York Joint Board, who constitute eighty per cent of the entire membership of the International Fur Workers' union, are at present engaged in a bitter struggle with the International officers, who do not dare to face the fur workers of New York because of their treacherous betrayal during the recent strike, and because of their slanderous and malicious attacks upon the Joint Board since the convention. The latest action of the General Executive Board, expelling Vice-President Gross, of local 5, and supporting the Greek company union, "the Brotherhood," against the Joint Board, has greatly agitated our members."

"In addition to this, the collaboration of our International officers with Brother Mathew Woll in his recent frame-up against the Joint Board, and the refusal of the subcommittee (of the G. E. B.) to furnish the necessary supplies to the Joint Board has created a serious state of affairs in New York."

It was announced at the office of the Joint Board, that all the locals which constitute that body, will act on the question of holding a convention at their meetings next week.

BISHOPS, SICK OF THEIR JOB, LEAVE MEXICO

Seem to Have Sneaking Notion Fat Days Over

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 28. — Two hundred catholic archbishops, bishops and priests, including Archbishop Mora y Del Rio, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Mexico, will leave for the United States and other foreign countries within the next 30 days according to reports in tonight's morning newspapers.

Declaring their information was obtained from "absolutely authentic authority," the newspapers maintained the exodus of catholic clergy will begin early in February and asserted the prelates are already preparing themselves for voyages abroad.

The venerable Archbishop Mora y del Rio, head of the church, is said to be planning to follow the example of Bishop Diaz, who, is now reported to the United States via Havana.

While individual prelates have denied the intentions, publicly attributed to them, of "voluntarily" leaving the country, many persons are inclined to attach special significance to persistent reports impending the departure, as indicating the authorities' desire to feel out public opinion and thus to put any obstacles in way of clerics who are leaving the republic except those being detained on charges of seditious activities."

It is expected to obtain the release on bail of the other strikers within a few days.

NEW YORK LOCAL JEWEL WORKERS REFUSE RED HUNT

Delegated Right Wing Starts Riot

Last night's meeting of Local 1, International Jewelry Workers' union where Samuel E. Beardsley, secretary-organizer of the local and ally of Morris Sigman, attempted to put the organization on record in favor of red baiting, broke up in disorder after the socialist clique saw that the majority of the members were not in favor of that policy.

The right wing group found out during a test vote taken earlier in the meeting that they would not be able to pass the resolution indorsed by the executive board which called for the indorsement of the December 21 meeting of the so-called "conference for the preservation of trade unions." The test vote was 84 to 47 against the red baiting group.

When the meeting was drawing to a close and Beardsley was speaking, he made statements attacking Local 17, a cutter local claiming that the last strike was leading Communists, who made agreements that demoralized the local worse.

I. Cohen, secretary of Local 17, and a member of the district council who was present asked for the floor to answer the charges made against his local.

Leon Williams, president, demanded that Cohen leave the hall. Cohen went to get his coat when Joseph Smith, vice-president, stepped on his foot and attempted to treat him roughly when prevented from doing so by other members of the local.

Fights then broke out in different parts of the hall and President Williams declared the meeting closed thus saving the right wing from a defeat by a real expression of the membership who had up to that time shown their opposition to policies of Beardsley, Williams and Company.

"UNDERSTANDING" BY SIGMAN AND BOSS A BAD ONE

But No Dressmakers at His Meeting Anyway

As reported by eye-witnesses of the event, Mr. Sigman's little meeting at Cooper Union on Wednesday night was a pleasant enough affair for those who took part, and although the gathering had been called to discuss the terms of the "understanding" agreement, no one seemed to notice that there was no agreement present.

Maybe A "Misunderstanding."

True enough, Mr. Jailer Hochman outlined a set of terms which comprised the "understanding" which the International had reached with the bosses, but as one of the contractors' lawyers, Mr. Reuben Tafty states, "much depends on the wording of the written agreement to be worked out next week."

And No Dressmakers.

"There is no agreement," as Louis Hyman, general manager of the Joint Board, said when asked to comment on the meeting. "And there was no meeting of dressmakers."

Just as Hyman prophesied, there were almost no women at Mr. Sigman's meeting. It was supposed to be a meeting of dressmakers and the majority of the dressmakers are women. But the majority at Mr. Sigman's meeting were husky men; some of them looked like cutters, some of them looked like sluggers. There were not enough to fill the hall even after a committee had gone out at six-thirty and rounded up a delegation.

No Respect For Sig.?

Manager Antonini of Local 89 kidded Sigman about the size of the meeting saying, "you have to hand it to the Communists; they can certainly get a meeting when they call one, and we can't." But Mr. Sigman said he was not worried; all he needed was to register a few more shops and all would be well.

It was Hochman who announced the terms of the "understanding," and Antonini says he made a pretty poor speech. But since there was really no agreement to present, his talk was only of importance as an indication of what may be expected if the International does put its name to an agreement.

What Can You "Understand"?

In the "understanding," (1) the schedule for operators is abandoned; (2) it is stated that the minimum wage is $44, but that scale is not guaranteed! (3) A worker's trial period is stated to be one week, which may be extended to two weeks "by mutual consent of employer and employee"—whatever that means. Apparently it actually means a two weeks' trial period throughout the industry. (4) Every day a Saturday holiday is not mentioned, and therefore is evidently abandoned.

All of these points were discussed last night at a meeting of the English-speaking branch of the dressmakers local which met in the local's auditorium after work. The members present denounced this betrayal of the workers' interests, and repudiated any such agreement as well as the International officials who are trying to negotiate it.

Charlie Hits Back.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28.—Charlie Chaplin, thru his attorneys today began striking back at the 42 page divorce complaint pf his estranged wife, Lita Grey Chaplin. In behalf of Chaplin Studio, Inc., Chaplin's legal council has filed today a demurrer to the divorce bill. This was supplemented by a motion asking that certain portions of the complaint bearing on the financial phases of the comedian be stricken out.

Uncle Sam Works Men Full Seven-Day Week; Bill to Grant Sunday

WASHINGTON, (FP). — Many thousands of federal employes still work seven days a week, with little or no extra pay for their Sunday work, Luther Steward told the house civil service committee when testifying in support of the Oldfield bill. The measure gives custodial workers in federal service a work week of six days, 8 hours a day. Steward is president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

While the seven-day week is due chiefly to legislative neglect, Steward argued, it should now be set right by congress in view of the low wages given this class of workers. Representative Oldfield, democratic politician, said congress should set a good example in this field at once.

SACCO, VANZETTI GUILTLESS SAYS WASHBURN CHILD

NEW YORK.—Richard Washburn Child, ambassador to Italy under the Harding and Coolidge regimes, joins in the demand for a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti in a long statement given to the press. Child's point is that the law itself is on trial in the case of these two radical Italian workers. The case is actually pending before the Massachusetts state supreme court, which will hear arguments in April against Judge Webster Thayer's latest denial of new trial.

After his resignation as ambassador, Child devoted his time to an investigation of law enforcement methods in the United States. The National Crime Commission was organized when his findings were published. Child is chairman of the organization's committee to promote state and local crime commissions.

Child states that the newspapermen "who followed the trial as closely, perhaps, and more intelligently than many men who have been in jury service, do not believe that Sacco and Vanzetti are guilty" of the murder for which they were convicted. Now, says Child, "enlightened public opinion, represented by law professors, by lawyers of standing, even by conservative business men and bankers" is "slowly but steadily taking its stand" with the newspapermen. [Labor has maintained for years that the Italian workers were framed up and are innocent.]

The international effect of the Sacco-Vanzetti case "in helping to maintain or destroy general confidence in the law—our system of law" must be considered by Massachusetts, Child declares. The state must face the issue of making the law "a living force rather than a mummified majesty," he emphasizes. "The vast accumulation of passion and prejudice, smugness and technicality, which has piled up to obscure that issue" must be lifted away.

Child mentions briefly the international agitation carried on by labor for Sacco and Vanzetti. Strikingly enough he begins his present article by attacking the idea that the Sacco-Vanzetti case is "the business of the state of Massachusetts" alone. This was the story the state department told him when as ambassador he queried in response to Italian workers' pleas for intercession. In articles favorable to Mussolini which he wrote for the Saturday Evening Post two years ago, Child accepted this explanation. His present article attacks the court for ignoring sworn statements of former federal agents telling of department of justice activities in the case.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 28. —At least one miner was killed and 25 others were trapped in the Connellsville By-Products mine at Scott's Run, 2 miles from here, when fire of unknown origin broke out in the mine this afternoon. The mine is owned by the James A. Paisley interests of Cleveland.

LABOR DESIRES EXTRA SESSION NEW CONGRESS

To Avoid Lame Ducks Who Fight Workers

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Organized labor, seeing the impossibility of getting enacted at the present session of congress any of a chief pending measures, is enlisted with the western farm group and the anti-imperialist forces to try to force the white house to call the new congress in special session.

In the 70th Congress will at a largely increased proportion of representatives and senators pledged to support various labor measures. The senate will be particularly favorable to humane legislation, as contrasted with the senate as now organized.

The farmers demand not merely a farm relief measure which has been denied them for the past four years, but they want congress to take action on Muscle Shoals, so that cheap fertiliser or cheap electric power can be furnished the southern states from the government power plant at that point.

Millions of anti-war adherents of Protestant and Jewish congregations, labor unions and other civic bodies are protesting against any threat of the use of armed force against Mexico or any further armed intervention in Nicaragua. They have indicated in resolutions, telegrams and straw ballots in newspapers their lack of confidence in the administration. There is growing among these anti-imperialists a demand that congress be kept in Washington to act as a check on Coolidge and Kellogg, who might otherwise run amuck as soon as congress adjourns.

Miners' Convention In Uproar of Protest

touched vital issues of the anthracite check-off and expenditure of the millions in their controls.

Thomas Maloney and William Salinsky made the big anti-Lewis speeches, bringing down the house. Fishwick came to the rescue with an admission that an "iron ring of non-unionism is encircling the union fields" and that therefore Lewis must be given unlimited resources to spend in West Virginia. Progressives retaliated that the membership would always approve, by referendum, of any financial sacrifice for that state, but did not want to take the risk of issuing Lewis a blank check on the organization.

The first big break in the convention saw Lewis' control over the delegates crumble. Boston back by an overwhelming majority, his lieutenants called on the tellers to do their work. While they counted hands excitedly, running down the aisles without anyone checking up on their count, the paper majority for Emperor Lewis' unlimited expense account was undoubtedly achieved at last. Then Cook, where anti-Lewis supporters gathered to the exclusion of progressives to add up the tellers' written figures.

Another Slugger Identified.

William Tumblazer, president of District 19, Tennessee, was identified today as the third man who slugged Powers Hapgood in a hotel room last Sunday. Tumblazer it was who invited Hapgood into the trap, where Vice-president Patton of District 5, western Pennsylvania, and Joe Angelo, an international organizer, helped him beat Hapgood's face into a bloody pulp. Hapgood's fighting spirit has only been intensified by the savage, violent assaults upon him this week.

The machine is slated to adopt constitutional amendments barring members of the Workers Party and their supporters from membership in the union and raising Emperor Lewis' salary to $15,000 a year. President William Green of the A. F. L., former secretary of the Miners' Union, is slated to address the convention.

Pat Toohey Stages Debate.

The debate grew more bitter during the forenoon when Patrick Toohey, young progressive miner delegate from Local Unions Nos. 175 and 1758, in the anthracite field took the platform and declared that Powers Hapgood, Alexander Howat, and he had not had a square deal. The machine had tried in every possible way to keep Toohey from coming as a delegate. Suddenly called rump meetings of locals that had elected him their delegate, withdrawing his credentials, one secretary failed in some of the red tape connected with issuing delegates' credentials, and his convention fare was withdrawn by machine trickery.

No Fear of Lewis.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 28.—Despite rumors of a threatened coal strike unless miners are given an increased scale of wages, the committee of mine operators met here today and decided to stand by their plans for submitting a lower scale when they meet with representatives of the miners, Feb. 14th.

The scale which will be offered the men will cut their wages from $7.50 a day to $6.25, and has been made necessary, the operators declared, to meet competition with the non-union fields of West Virginia and Kentucky.

Lewis Attacks the Constitution

By WILLIAM D. WOLFE.

The attack of the reactionary leadership of the United Mine Workers' Union in the fighting spirit and fighting traditions of its rank and file.

One of the most treacherous of the moves planned to the constitution of the U. M. W. of A. by its founders way back in 1890 declaring that the union is organized to obtain for its members "the full social value of their product."

"Case" Lewis and the administration machine on Wednesday attacked this famous section of the preamble of the union constitution, giving as their ground that "the bosses object" and called the union socialistic." And the machine substituted for "full social value of their product" the words "an equitable share of the fruits of their labor."

The preamble of a union constitution is only a symbol, but the clause just wrecked by Lewis was the symbol of a fighting union, giving as the symbol of a real struggle against the coal barons, the symbol of an unflinching fight for the interests of the union that will be their defense, the symbol of the organization of the miners for the control of the industry in the interest of the community and the welfare of the miners and not for private profit of the coal barons.

This move is in line with the general policy of the trade union bureaucracy, best expressed by Matthew Woll, of making the trade unions "respectable," making them satisfactory to the bosses, making them an aid to the bosses in increasing production, in speeding up, in increased profit at the expense of the workers. The Lewis-Woll plan means the conversion of the trade unions into agencies of the boss, the officials into foremen and straw bosses paid not by the boss but by the dues of the membership; it means the converting of our unions into company unions with the difference that they have officials not directly employed by the company, does, per capita and meetings outside of the plant. These are, of course, important differences, but the tendency is clear just the same.

In trying to put these things over, without their rank and file knowing what they mean, Lewis has joined with the Gompers-Green-Woll machine in the A. F. of L. Executive Council, which has turned into a tool of the coal barons.

Nor will the building trades workers, who are generally regarded as conservative trade unionists, even consent to their unions being turned into speed-up machines and their officials into foremen and straw bosses. The attack on the philosophy of not working so fast as to lead to exhaustion, the old plan to "make work" for other workers by not hogging it all themselves, was not very revolutionary, but is a far better working class policy than the speed-up policy and the please-the-boss policy of the Wolls and the Lewises. The rank and file of the trade unions have not yet had their final say to this new theory of their officialdom.

As far as the United Mine Workers are concerned, the miners are really begin to fight after the bosses think they are licked. And Lewis, agent for the coal barons, will yet find that out.

Rosalsky's Savage Sentences

Nineteen cloakmakers were yesterday sentenced to long terms of imprisonment by Judge Rosalsky for picketing scab shops last summer during the course of a strike between members of the I. L. G. W. U. and the employers.

In imposing sentence on the defendants Judge Rosalsky made a record for himself that will not fail to endear him to the employing class and earn for him a reward from the manufacturers when the workingclass whom he is persecuting bring an end to his judicial career on some future election day.

From two and-a-half to five years in Sing Sing to three year probation terms were the two extremes of punishment inflicted on those workers for performing their union duty. The sentences are the most severe in the history of the organization.

When these savage sentences were handed out by this judicial flunkey of the clothing bosses the families and friends of the sentenced workers made a demonstration. In describing the scene, the respectable New York Evening Post referred to the participants as "the herd (emphasis ours—Ed.) of screaming women, squalling babies and cursing men". This reference speaks volumes for the scorn and hate that overflows from the hearts of the capitalists and their hirelings, for the workers. The sacredness in which they hold womanhood discriminates like mists before the sun when womanhood is concretized into a striking needle trades worker, or a mother of a convicted striker.

The brutal treatment accorded these prisoners by Rosalsky was made possible and encouraged, by the traitorous conduct of the Sigman-Green combination which entered into an alliance with the blackest capitalist reaction in an effort to smash the closed ranks of the workers in their struggle for better conditions for themselves and a better standard of living for their dependents. The conduct of the biblical Judas who took the thirty pieces of silver for giving up his leader into the hands of the Roman taskmasters was decency itself compared to the role played by Sigman and his blackhearted squad of sluggers. Judas at least had a conscience that could be touched. He could not bear the sting of his treachery so he went and hanged himself.

Green, Sigman and the yellow socialist tribe that are chiefly responsible for those workers being behind prison bars will sleep soundly tonight when they hear of Judge Rosalsky's action.

Lewis' First Defeat

The Lewis machine on Wednesday sustained its first defeat. Lewis had to save his proposal to wreck the constitution in the matter of assessment control by faking the count and refusing a roll call. Even the New York Times correspondent's version of the event proves that the count was faked. This victory of the progressives in rallying a majority of the delegates for maintaining democratic forms in the union constitution is all the more important because it was achieved in a convention packed by Lewis with paper delegations and payroll votes. It shows that the progressive elements are putting up a militant battle at the convention and winning adherents as the fight continues. Back of the vote of the majority of the delegates Wednesday was the support of over 95 per cent of the rank and file. When people think they have the miners licked is when they really begin to fight.

McAdoo and Corruption.

William Gibbs McAdoo, former Doheny retainer who got badly smattered with Elk Hills Basin and Teapot Dome oil, is now in a bid for the presidency on a platform of political purity.

The late Woodrow Wilson's Crown Prince declares that in flaunting the prohibition laws the United States is treading a path to anarchy. This sweet breeze blowing thru the stinking political alleyways of politics charges corrupt municipalities with plotting to control national politics. No more idiotic outburst ever came from the mouth of a mountebank. What are politicians in business for, McAdoo included, except to control municipal, state and national politics in the interests of the capitalists on something better than a paltry commission basis?

We suppose Mr. McAdoo is convinced that the masses have forgotten the story of his efforts to bribe or bludgeon the Mexican government into turning over its oil fields to Edward L. Doheny, while Woodrow Wilson was in the White House—McAdoo using the influence that his marriage relationship with the president clothed him with to blackjack concessions from the Mexican government and money from Doheny.

This is the man who is now out to purify American political life! A Herculean task indeed. Granting that Mr. McAdoo were honest and not a slimy hypocrite, the job of finding a needle in a haystack would be trivial compared to what he essays. Corruption is as much a part of capitalism as a tail is of a normal dog.

I would not have a word to say about old William Gladstone and his amorous escapades, except for two reasons; he was a bourgeois and a damned hypocrite.

The Soviet Union will not interfere in the struggle between the Cantonese and their imperialist foes, but the government will not place any obstacles in the way of any worker or peasant who desires to assist the Caitonese to clean out the robbers. That is the kind of neutrality that the Cantonese would like to hear about from Coolidge and Kellogg.

LEWIS PROPAGANDA ON WAGE SCALES PLAYS INTO HANDS OF OPERATORS; FAILURE TO ORGANIZE IN SOUTH LEAVES UNION WAGE "GEARED TO MARKET"

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

The announced wage cut of 20% by the Pittsburgh Coal Co. reveals again the relentless progress of the open shop campaign against the miners' union. As pointed out by The Federated Press Dec. 8, the temporary wage increases granted by non-union operators at the tag end of the boom caused by the British strike were designed to weaken the bargaining strength of the United Mine Workers at the coming wage conference. The 8-year Jacksonville agreement expires April 1. The wage issue was prematurely sprung in the non-union fields.

Just four days before Pittsburgh Coal announced its wage cut the United Mine Workers' Journal made the following editorial comment on this giant of the industry: "The best evidence that it can pay the Jacksonville wage rate is that it is doing it now and recently announced that it would make no further reductions." The action of Pittsburgh Coal practically completes the return of non-union producers to the 1917 scale. The international convention of the union is now in session in Indianapolis.

Reductions in most West Virginia fields were effective Jan. 5. In practically all instances the rates of pay now in effect there are about a third under the Jacksonville scale. At the Ben Franklin Coal Co. mine at Moundsville a cut of 15¢ on 200 miners struck, but in general the cut caused little trouble. The test has convinced the operators that the union will get scanty support from the non-union fields in case of a strike. Only the remote possibility of a railroad strike on coal roads could prevent the non-union mines from supplying the country with plenty of scab coal.

The United Mine Workers, by treating the temporary non-union wage increases as a vindication of its policy, has played into the hands of the operators. The latest full report of the federal bureau of mines placed the annual capacity of the bituminous industry on a full-time basis in 1923 at 970,000,000 tons. Best estimates put about 70% of this capacity in the non-union column. The country requires only 500,000,000 tons a year.

Since the windup of the British coal dispute production has, in general, been ahead of consumption, running in a number of weeks to 13,000,000 and even 15,000,000 tons. Probably 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 tons a week have been going to swell stocks of coal which would supply the country for weeks even if non-union miners joined their union brothers in a walkout. Total stocks may now have reached the 60,000,000 ton mark.

In the past week operators of the central competitive field have been meeting in Toledo to determine their wage policy. Apparently they will urge a sliding scale based on selling prices in the competing non-union fields. Their present suggestion is that union operators pay a perpetual differential of 10% to 15% above non-union rates of pay. This resembles the situation during the 20 years preceding 1920. In that period, however, the fact that union wages were geared to the market for coal was concealed by a steady upward trend of prices and wages.

The two ways in which the miners can break this dependence of union wages on non-union wages are either organization of enough of the country's capacity to force operators to fix prices on the basis of a decent wage or a successful movement for government operation.

CURRENT EVENTS

sisted on forcing his predictions on them.

THOSE responsible for the bomb explosion were never apprehended because the government did not dare tackle the Du Pont powder people. The bankers gave their money to Burns to arrest the conspirators until it hurt—the bankers. Then they also began to look on "Bill" with a jaundiced eye. So "Bill" went to work for Harry Daugherty and Jess Smith. But he still kept saying that he knew who committed the outrage. Then a wise reporter got the idea that perhaps Burns did know. Wouldn't it be fun if Burns did know?

BURNS gave the bomb explosion a rest for a while. He was busy framing up on senators who were after Harry Daugherty's scalp. The cabinet that Harry was a member of, was about to sell the army and navy after peddling the naval oil reserves to Doheny and Sinclair. Burns put his agile brain to work to save the crooks. But before the storm blew over Burns was kicked out of the department of justice. He could now devote his whole time to private finking.

HIS name had become so odious, however, in the minds of decent people that outside of the National Civic Federation, The Stoolpigeon's Guild and the Allied Women's Patriotic League, Burns had as much chance of getting by a sergeant-at-arms as a prohibition agent would have of getting into the Bartenders' Union. But time has a mellowing influence on memory and rotarians are not noted for cerebral activity. So we find Burns addressing them on his favorite subject.

THIS is what Burns said in substance: "Gentlemen, the country is faced with a danger of which unfortunately the substantial citizenry are not aware, ontside—If you will permit me—forward-looking Americans such as I see here before me today. I stand here to call the attention of America to the insidious propaganda that is being spread broadcast by the Communist agents of Lenin and Trotsky. (Burns was aware that the Rotarians knew not of Lenin's death and the cognomenal combination produced a fearful effect). I am now going to state for the first time who were the perpetrators of the Wall Street bomb plot." At this point the Rotarians shivered and began to look suspiciously at each other's hip pockets, afraid that the bulge was not due to a packed flask but to a stick of dynamite.

HAVING created a favorable impression, Burns continued: "I knew that the bomb was going to be thrown thirty-six hours before the explosion and I would have been in a position to apprehend the criminals had my man been able to gain access to the meeting at which . . . conspiracy was planned. But I have decided to devote my life to running down the murderers at whatever financial cost or personal risk. Love of country, gentlemen, stands second in my conception of virtue to love of God. Yes, gentlemen, I put my country even before my mother. . . ." This was too much for the emotional Rotarians. Thrice one hundred flasks appeared suddenly from as many pockets and inside of five minutes they were singing "Yes, Sir, She's My Baby." "Bill" Burns out-singing all the rest.

"PEACHES"

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

WITH the exception of The DAILY WORKER, every New York newspaper is devoting column after column to the "Peaches"-Browning trial now taking place at White Plains, N. Y.

When you pick up a copy of Willie Hearst's rag, the Daily Mirror, you need a magnifying glass to find anything else to read except this very "important" case.

Only a Few Lines.

The same can be said for The Daily News, which has the largest circulation of any newspaper in America—over one million copies daily. Likewise in the case of Bernarr McFadden's Evening Graphic.

News about China, Mexico and American intervention in Nicaragua is not printed at all, or relegated to a few lines in some obscure corner. These tabloids would not print any other story on their front page as long as the trial lasts, with the possible exception of an official declaration of war by America, or some other major power.

While in the case of the other newspapers in New York, The Times, New York World, Evening Telegram, etc.—it is true that they publish stories about other questions than "Peaches," yet it must be remembered that they are giving as much as seven or eight columns to "Peaches" every day.

Of What Importance?

Should a labor paper publish news stories about this trial? Yes and no. A brief paragraph every once in a while is not out of place in a paper such as The DAILY WORKER. As an example at the opening and close of the trial and every important piece of evidence is presented.

Cases such as "Peaches"-Browning, Hall-Mills, etc., should be treated by a labor newspaper and the working class in general in relation to its actual importance. That sets us thinking. Of what importance, if any, is the present "Peaches" case or the past Hall-Mills case or others of a similar vein which will crop up any second and give the circulation managers of the large metropolitan papers an opportunity to hope that the sensational headlines of their respective papers will have the desired effect. As an example: Yesterday's Daily Mirror covered one-third of its front page with the following headline: "PEACHES SHAME."

News About Unemployed.

How much space is given in these same papers about unemployed work-ers? And about strikes, beatings of workers on the picket line by thugs hired to the bosses and by the police? Yes, they published stories about these events. But how. Always from the point of view of the bosses. And the same time they do not give these happenings anywhere as much space as the "Sex Appeal" tales.

When the workers read about "Peaches," their mind is taken off Nicaragua and China, so when war is declared they are taken unawares. Bewildered, they don a uniform and fight for "dollar diplomacy."

Or in the case of a strike or fakers in the unions, with their minds full of "Peaches" they forget about the everyday struggles for better working conditions.

What Will Be Next?

Yesterday it was the Hall case, today it is "Peaches," tomorrow it will be someone else, and so on, down the line. These are unconnected episodes having no relation to one another or to the many millions who read about them. This should be realized by the workers and be judged accordingly.

Every day Dad was getting long telegrams from Verne, not coming direct, of course, but addressed to Mrs. Bolling, the wife of the trusty young executive; they were signed "A. H. Perry"—one play upon Dad's favorite formula, "All hunky-dory." They were not the sort of telegrams that a doctor would have picked out for soothing of his patient's nerves; no, they kept the patient in a fever of anxiety—how many, many times he wished that he had listened to the warnings of his young idealist, and kept clear of this mess of corruption! But of course Bunny couldn't say that now; he could only read the news and wait and wonder at what hour the thunderbolt would descend upon them.

Annabelle's new picture was done, "A Mother's Heart," and she was going to be an especially Browning trial now taking place at grand premiere, and Bunny was to take Vee, of conrse, and Dad was to take Annt Emma, and everything would be all hunky-dory for that one night at least. Bunny came home from reading the proofs of the next issue of the paper, and there in the entrance hall he found his aunt waiting for him, her hands shaking with excitement, and her teeth chattering. "Oh, Bunny! The most dreadful thing! They're trying to arrest your father!"

"Arrest him?"

"Men are after him—right in front of the house! You've got to get away without being seen—they'll follow you—oh, I'm so frightened—oh, please, please, be careful! Dan't let them catch your father!"

He managed to get the story, and it was really almost as melodramatic as her wild words conveyed. Young Bolling, the trusty executive, had been to the house a few minutes ago, looking for Bunny with a message from Dad of the utmost urgency; he had written it out, and Bunny read it; he was to drive in his car, and make absolutely certain that he was not being followed —there would be men trying to follow him, in order to trail Dad. As soon as he had shaken off these men, he must leave his car, which of course had his name on the license, and get to some automobile place where he was no, should, and buy a closed car under an assumed name; it must not be a new car, because they might have to do very fast driving. Still making sure that he was not being followed, Bunny must proceed to the station town of San Pasqual, and at a certain corner Dad would join him. Mr. Boling had given Aunt Emma five thousand dollars in bills, and they were to go away, hoping that the men who were watching the house would follow him.

Bunny and a few words to comfort the poor old lady. Nobody wanted to put Dad into jail, they just wanted to get him on the witness stand, the way they had done the "Petes," young and old. Bunny threw a few clothes into an old suit-case, that had no name or initials on it, and hurried out to his car. Sure enough, there was another car just down the street, and when Bunny started, this other started also. Bunny swung round half a dozen corners, but the other car kept on his trail. He bethought himself of the traffic jam in the heart of the city, which was at its worst now, between five and six in the evening. The traffic was controlled by signals, with two or three officers at the crowded corners, and it would be possible by dodging here and there to get several cars between you and a pursuing car, and sooner or later to get across just as the bell rang and compelled your pursuer to wait. his troubles to all and sundry. It was curious to Bunny to see the class-consciousness of these men, an instant automatic reaction; every one of them was with Dad, every one knew that the exposure was the work of malicious political disturbers, and that the leases had been a good bargain for the public. The savings that intelligent business men effected always made up many times over for what profits the business men took.

When they got to Montreal, there was a palatial steamer waiting, with several hundred wage-slaves of various sorts prepared to serve them in return for a few hundred barrels of the stolen oil. They went on board, and the steamer proceeded down the St. Lawrence river; it stopped at Quebec, and there were newspapers, and Bunny read that Federal agents had raided a secret convention of the Workers' party, and arrested all the delegates. It was a highly sensational event, and the Canadian papers gave full particulars—they too had this problem! Their account gave the names of the officials who had been trapped, and one of them was Paul Watkins!

Not all the oil money in the world could make the winter passage to England other than cold and stormy. Dad proved to be a poor sailor, and so he was a forlorn object when he got to Vermont Roscoe's hotel in London. But Verne cheered him up; yes, truly, Dad began to revive with the first thump upon the back and the first boom of Verne's voice in the hotel lobby. "By Jees, the old skeezicks! believe the reds have got his nerve!"

Nobody had got Verne's nerve, you bet he was sitting on the top of the world! That investigation—shucks, that was a circus stunt to entertain the yokels. It would blow over and be forgotten in a few months! Verne quoted a chieftain of Tammany Hall who had been up against the same kind of racket, and said, "Dis a nine day town. If yes kin stand de gaff for nine days, ye're all right." No, by Jees! —and Verne gave his partner another thump—they were getting the oil out of Shaynlyde, and the money was going into their bank accounts, and not into anybody's else, and they were going to have one hell of a lark spending it. What was more, they were going to turn the tables on those blankety-blank red senators—just let Dad wait a few days, and he'd see some stuff that would get on the front pages of the papers, even here in England!

Jim Amier got his due share of back-slapping. The boy Bolsheviki must take his old man around and show him some of the sights of London; hadn't he learned about 'em in the history books—the places where men had had their heads chopped off five hundred years ago, and such cheerful spectacles? After the old man had got rested up, then Verne would show him some oil propositions that would make his eyes pop open. Verne hadn't been losing any time —not he! He had put five million into a project that was to reopen a great oil field in Roumania that had been burned during the German invasion, and it was a deal that would beat Sunnyside, and Verne had got Dan Pasquini, and at a certain corner Dad would join him. Mr. Boling had given Aunt Emma five thousand dollars in bills, and they were gone away, hoping that the men who were watching the house would follow him.

Bunny and a few words to comfort the poor old lady. Nobody wanted to put Dad into jail, they just wanted to get him on the witness stand, the way they had done the "Petes," young and old. Bunny threw a few clothes into an old suit-case, that had no name or initials on it, and hurried out to his car. Sure enough, there was another car just down the street, and when Bunny started, this other started also. Bunny swung round half a dozen corners, but the other car kept on his trail. ## ...n Planned For Rosalsky Savagery

...Garment Workers' President Orders...

...Boss Gangsters Used...

...Secretary of the I. L. G. W. U. ordering the ...lawyer from the defense of the ...ers, was revealed today in the ...lines of thirty brief and desperate ...that followed this notice, with evidence ...mplete demonstration of the fatal ...Board leaders for their conduct of the ...tion of those strikers who were given ...best contemporary prison terms by ...Judge Rosalsky.

Louis Hyman, general manager of the Joint Board, lays the blame directly on President Sigman.

Tragedy Follows Sigman.

"The irresponsible actions of Morris Sigman which have produced so much tragedy in our union," says Hyman, "have now been the cause of a direct calamity in the savage sentences meted out to the cloakmakers.

"When the cases of these men came up for trial, he caused his lawyers to withdraw from the defense of these men, stating that they no longer wished to have anything to do with them, a circumstance which in itself was a great hindrance to a fair consideration of the cases by the jury. This was a direct betrayal of these old-time members.

Lies Influence Rosalsky.

"The bitter prejudice of Judge Rosalsky against workers is plain to all, yet it is doubtful if he would have gone to such extreme lengths were it not for the lies told him by Sigman and his henchmen, with their falsehoods about "communists" have served to make the general public believe that every honest cloakmaker who went on a picket line to defend the strike against the sweatshop which Sigman blandly ignored, was a potential criminal full of criminal desire to destroy property and inflict bodily injury. He has been able to throw around the cloakmakers' strike. ## SOME QUESTIONS FOR PRESIDENT LEWIS TO ANSWER

...SIEGE ...Growing, Not Fighting, As Employers Say

The members of the union are encouraged by the ... to their ranks of the organization ... were laid away by employers ... during the strike.

Answer Lies.

In a brief drawn up by the union and to be presented to Acting Mayor Hellen at the conference in City Hall, Tuesday, Feb. 1st, at noon, the figures given by the Greater New York Paper Box Manufacturers Assn. in their letter refusing to send delegates, were shown to be wrong in every particular, and other figures on the industry and working conditions were given which the employers are not anxious to have known. The brief states "In at least 90 per cent of the shops the cutters, corner cutters, stitchers and creasers work in dark, damp and unventilated cellars.

"Nearly per cent of the shops affected by the strike do not employ cutters to keep the shops and wash rooms clean, so that they are constantly dirty and impregnated with foul odors. In almost all the shops there is but one dressing room for both male and female workers where they must both change into their work clothes. At least 90 per cent of these shops never get direct sunlight in any season of the year."

Not Much Competition.

The cry of competition was branded as a subterfuge, in so far as these manufacturers have a different class of work than the open shops. Also the union affirms that it has spent "thousands of dollars during the period of its agreement with the manufacturers in an endeavor to organize the workers in the open shops, but the employers in these shops invariably answered the organization campaigns by granting their workers reductions in the hours of labor and increases in pay. However, the greatest competing advantage which the open shops have over the union shops is that as a rule, they conduct their operations in modern, sanitary and up to date factory buildings containing an abundance of light and air as well as sanitary wash rooms and rest rooms."

Mass Picketing.

A demonstration of mass picketing is planned for sometime before the meeting in City Hall to-give the lie to the statement that there are only "a few hundred workers out, mostly young boys and girls." Among the eight hundred workers who came to the decision the union to call a strike over a hundred of the workers who had made some break back into the shops. Drivers especially were back in the union after cases had been brought where the employers cut men who were getting $40 to $50 a week. Girls who had been scabbing for two weeks cease to the union lately, and told a story of having been taken in by a policeman when they were looking for a job in the neighborhood.

Hillquit Admits Sigman Can't Expel Board

the orders of the general executive board," says Hyman. "We challenge Mr. Hillquit to take this question before any court of competent jurisprudence. And I need not tell you that if Mr. Hillquit believed his on statement as to what a court would do in the premises, this matter would long ago have been in the courts and if these orders are valid, the Joint Board of which I am general manager would have been out of business long ago"

Powers of International.

The argument makes an able comparison of the construction and powers of the union to the construction of the United States, likening the International to the federal government, which latter, however, has more power since it can tax directly and judge citizens in its own courts—powers which have not been given the International.

The limits imposed upon the powers of the General Executive Board are also discussed in the argument, making it plain that Sigman's action in "taking over the affair" of the Joint Board, as he now terms it, was nothing short of usurpation.

Hillquit Backs Down.

The charges which the C. E. B. made against the Joint Board officers were read into the record before the Impartial Chairman, but withdrawn as evidence by Mr. Hillquit when Hyman began to answer them. "I regret that Mr. Hillquit beat such a hasty retreat, for I would welcome such a discussion, as I would have no difficulty in proving that these charges are not only baseless but made in utter bad faith. The very men who have made them do not believe any part of them. And they have never dared to bring them forward whenever the other side has had a chance to answer. These charges are always trotted out when ever there is nobody around to refute them and immediately withdrawn when a hearing before an impartial tribunal is imminent."

The decision of the Impartial Chairman will be made early in the week. It is expected.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—Aristide Briand French foreign minister declared today that the French and American attitudes towards China were similar, speaking on the Kellogg declaration of American policy in the present Chinese crisis.

But by the time Briand got thru talking it is clear that France is not willing to surrender extra-territorial rights in the near future. Briand also insisted that France had concessions in China while the United States had not.

REACTIONARIES OF FUR WORKERS SUE IN NEWARK

Left Wing Winning, So Rights Rush to Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 30. — The latest move on the part of the right wing group in the Furriers' union to take over control of Local 25, is an appeal to the local courts to oust the regularly elected left wing officials and install themselves in their place.

In petitioning the Chancery Court in this city the Schachtman-Sorkin clique state that the left wingers desire to overthrow the American government, the dreaded Communists being in control of the local.

Langer Singled Out.

Twenty officials of the local are named defendants in the complaint, which cites the progressive manager of the local, Morris Langer, as a "terrible example."

An affidavit signed by Samuel Aaleman, a flunkey of Shachtman, attached to the complaint, states that Langer offered him $2,000 "to help spread Communistic ideas among workers." The affidavit is ridiculous on the face of it but is being used.

Vice Chancellor Church directed the officials of the local to show cause tomorrow why they should not be removed as officers of the union.

"Three Times And Out"

This is the third attempt within one week by the right wing to oust the regularly elected officers of the local. Last Thursday a committee headed by Sorkin, and including local police tried to remove the progressives by a display of force. Unsuccessful, on Friday they adopted a new method of attack. They demanded that the association refuse to recognize Langer as business agent, and transact business with their puppet. At first the bosses were in favor of doing so, but, when they saw that the overwhelming majority of the union's supported the left wing, they changed their mind.

Left Wing Mass-meeting Scores Beckerman

With Manager Abraham Beckerman's agents outside of the entrance of the hall, but afraid to do anything to stop the meeting, about 800 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America met at the call of the Trade Union Educational League at Stuyvesant Casino on Saturday afternoon, and adopted a resolution condemning the reactionary leadership which does not organize the clothing workers but fights the militants among them instead.

The crowd completely filled the wing speakers: Ben Gitlow, C. Sh Zimmerman, Ben Gold, S. Lipzin, L. Nelson and Phillip Aronberg. It listened to a detailed discussion of the various difficulties in the union, and participated in the plans to inaugurate an energetic drive to organize the industry.

Stops Destructive Leadership.

Beckerman's destructive leadership was scored. His expulsion compulsion. His unfavorable agreement and the systematic attempt to eliminate from the shops all progressives, in order to replace them with his personal following were done away with by the union, said the speakers.

Gitlow described Beckerman's willingness to aid the reactionaries in other unions, his offer of help to President Sigman to break up the Madison Square Garden mass meeting, and his boast that as long as he was a manager of the Cloak Board progressive meetings would be held.

The resolution read and unanimously adopted at the meeting states that "The rule of Beckerman . . . is responsible for the bad conditions in the industry. Wages have been reduced, hours of employment increased, the speed-up system has been developed and the preferential system widely practiced with the result that hundreds of workers are thrown out of their jobs. Work cut by union cutters is allowed to be sewed up in non-union shops. No standards as to wages, hours or conditions are being maintained in the shops. Business agents are allowed to make individual agreements."

The resolution declares that these conditions are responsible for the dissatisfaction of the rank and file, but that Beckerman's policy is not to remedy the conditions, but to institute a reign of terror against the dissatisfied workers. He also confocts fraudulent elections in the Amalgamated, and lends terrorists to other reactionaries, attempting to break up in this way the Furriers and the T. U. U. L. unions.

In view of these facts, the resolution concludes.

Cite Beckerman As Menace.

"That Beckerman is a menace to the Amalgamated organization of New York and demands Beckerman, who has not the support of the membership, be immediately ousted as manager of the New York organization.

"That all the suspended and expelled members of the organization who were expelled or suspended for political reasons be reinstated with full rights.

"That all workers who have been deprived of their posts for political reasons immediately be placed back to work on their old jobs.

"That no readjustments be permitted and equal division of work enforced, and that all work cut by union cutters be sent to union contracting shops.

"That the Amalgamated give full support to cloak, dressmakers and furriers in their brave fight to maintain the unity of their organizations.

"Furthermore, this meeting calls upon the Amalgamated membership to enroll in the fight not only to oust Beckerman, not only to maintain the unity of the needle trades unions, but for establish the Amalgamated as a rank and file organization that will improve conditions, establish the 40-hour five-day week and pave the way for the union of all the needle trade workers in America."

Premier Pilsudski Has Them Guessing

WARSAW, Poland.—The jingoists of world imperialism expected to find in Marshal Pilsudski, premier dictator of Poland, a second Mussolini, but they are puzzled by his ever changing policies.

Both Mussolini and Pilsudski, assumed power under identical circumstances, by a coup of force. Both are out to suppress Communism. But where Mussolini does this by the sheer enforcement of his absolute will, Pilsudski finds that the fascists and liberal elements in too strong an opposition to permit him to assert his desire for dictatorial power. Hence his failure to abolish parliament.

The capitalistic press is prone to interpret this weakness of the marshal as lenient and democratic idealism, and to prove that a dictatorship as everything Russia is not really beneficial to the restoration of Poland's prosperity.

It is therefore not surprising that Pilsudski's fighting spirit is proving aroused the opposition of the [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible] ...

3,000 Attend the Lenin Memorial Meetings in Detroit

(By A. Worker Correspondent.)

DETROIT, Mich.—Over 3,000 workers attended the two emergency Lenin memorial meetings here as a fitting answer to the efforts of the military authorities to stop the Lenin demonstration by cancelling the Armory a week before the huge meeting was scheduled. The Workers' Home and the Finnish Labor Temple were packed to the limit and hundreds of workers were turned away by the police who would not permit the sale of any more tickets.

The Workers Home meeting was opened by B. Baker, the district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party with the entire audience rising in silence to the memory of the working class fighters all over the world while the orchestra played the Revolutionary Funeral March, during this time the huge portrait of Lenin, painted for this occasion, was unveiled. The Young Pioneers and the Ukrainian Workers Chorus sang revolutionary songs at this meeting. Reg. berce Grecht, the well known Communist speaker and organizer was introduced as the first speaker and was followed by the representative of the Young Workers (Communist) League Comrade Walter Trumbull. Wm. Z. Foster, the principal speaker, was received with an enthusiastic ovation which continued throughout the meeting. Foster spoke of the far reaching influence of Leninism among the workers in the capitalist countries and the oppressed nationalities of China, Nicaragua, Mexico and other oppressed nationalities. The meeting was closed with the entire audience singing the International.

The Finnish Hall Meeting.

Simultaneously with the above meeting a huge demonstration was being held in the Finnish Labor Temple presided by Wm. Bohnen. Long before the opening hour the hall was filled to capacity and hundreds of workers were turned away. The Finnish Workers' band, the Finn Workers' chorus and John Anderson, tenor, furnished the revolutionary musical program at this meeting with the Young Pioneer Chorus as the outstanding attraction. Wm. Z. Foster, Rebecca Grecht and Walter Trumbull spoke at this meeting also.

Shock Utah Professors When Harvard Speaker Found To Be Weisbord

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 30.—Albert Weisbord invaded a capitalist stronghold when he appealed to the students of the University of Utah to join the workers in the class struggle.

University officials were busy today apologizing for Weisbord's revolutionary speech, which has aroused the ire of Salt Lake City's Babbits. President Thomas expected a "respectable" Harvard Law School graduate, when he granted permission to the liberal students of the university to hold a forum in one of the class rooms. "While the university believes in free speech," President Thomas said, "it certainly is opposed to the discussion of direct action in any form."

VICE PRESIDENT OF CAPMAKERS JOINS BOSSES

Chicago Local Demands His Resignation

CHICAGO, Ill. Jan. 30.—At the last meeting of the Cappakers Union, Local 5, it was officially announced that the general organizer of the western states, and member of the general executive board of the international union, Percy Ginsberg, had resigned from his position with the union, and accepted a position with the manufacturers' association. Hereafter he will be their official representative and general manager.

Rumors have been current for quite a while, that Ginsberg had connections with the bosses, and many previous demands had been made for his resignation. Yet because he was officially the manager of the district, no action could be brought to bear against him. His resignation will be considered at the next meeting of the board.

Already before the 1926 convention of the A. F. of L., the general executives had information, which should have barred Ginsberg from being eligible to go to Detroit. Nevertheless, he was endorsed as their regular, elected delegate.

Ginsberg later became so bold in his connections with the bosses, that the executive board was compelled to take action. A motion was carried, to demand his resignation.

Re-elect Building Council Officials

CHICAGO, (FP.)—Recognition of the success with which the Lardis attempt to smash the building trades unions has been conquered is seen in the re-election of President F. P. Sullivan and Secretary J. J. Conroy of the Chicago building trades council for 3-year terms.

Their principal achievement was the signing of an agreement with the leading Chicago contractors eliminating non-union work on all their jobs in departments where union craftsmen are affiliated with the council. This covers practically every craft except the carpenters.

Two Children Drown.

ELVIRA, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Two children are dead today from drowning despite the heroic efforts of a pet dog to drag them from the water. Kenneth Lovell, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lovell, of Chemung, and Robert Shaw, 6, son of Mr and Mrs. William Shaw, of Chemung, were playing beside Wynkoop Creek when they toppled into the water. The bodies were found after Mrs. Lovell saw the dog, dripping wet, barking wildly on the bank.

To Be Resurrected to Rescue "Senator" Save Insull Senator

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Frank L. Smith, here in Illinois of the Reed investigating committee exposures of traction money spent in the Republican primaries, and barred on that account from the seat to which he was elected, is contemplating a comeback.

According to those close to the "senator," the campaign will start in Illinois, where Sam Insull, the traction magnate is a power, and will be twofold. First, Smith will run in the primaries again, next April. Money is as good this year as last, and Smith has his hopes.

State Rights Again.

Second, Governor Len Small, his supporter, will appeal to the governors of the several states, for a united front in favor of "state rights" to send any man they please to the Senate, without having him passed upon by those already in "the most exclusive club in America."

Smith, go his friends say, will also be a candidate for reelection to whatever tribunal the Senate establishes for his trial, if and when it ever does that.

$900 a Year Pre-War Money for Government Employees; Ask Raise

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Pleading with congress to pass their bill establishing a minimum wage for federal employes at $1,500 a year, the National Federation of Federal Employes called on the senate to make $900 as measured in the purchasing power of pre-war money.

Luther Steward, president of the national organization, showed that more than 20 percent of the federal workers quit their jobs each year, and he points to the source of trouble. It lies in the failure of the civil service classification board to carry out the duty of wage-adjustment with which congress invested it in Sec. 12 of the classification law. Congress authorized the board to study and report to congress its conclusions as to just and reasonable readjustment of he rates of pay for federal workers. The board has done nothing, although the rest of living has steadily increased, and many classes of workers have complained of under-payment. Now the union calls upon congress for action without permitting further sabotage by the classification board.

Steward told the house civil service committee that the 217 locals of his union stand squarely behind the Welch (California) bill which would fix $1,500 as the minimum pay for full time work by adult employes.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—Forme minister of war Geseler today resigned from the democratic party in protest against the party's opposition to his accepting a portfolio in the new Marx cabinet.

LEGAL MURDER IS CHARGE OF SACCO, VANZETTI LAWYER

Court Amazed at Story Of Police Frame-Up

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 30.—"Murder itself," is the term applied by Sacco and Vanzetti's counsel, William G. Thompson, to the activities of the department of justice and the Massachusetts district attorney, in their efforts to convict the two Italian workers whose case is now in the hands of the Massachusetts Supreme Court here.

During the hearing before the court on Judge Thayer's denial of a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, the judges and a throng of distinguished people in the court room, were startled by the frank statement of Assistant District Attorney Dudley P. Ranney, that the stool-pigeon methods that had been practiced in this case, and the cooperation of the United States and local state police authorities in suppressing evidence was "one way of disposing of radicals they could not deport."

"Justice Exposed"

Ranney justified placing a spy in the cell next to Sacco and trying to get some information that could be used to send him to the electric chair. The district attorney also justified withholding parts of certain detectives' reports which would have proved the state's star witnesses unreliable and would have prevented information helpful to Sacco and Vanzetti.

The hearing before the State Supreme Court lasted several days and is the final attempt to gain a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanbetti who have been living in the shadow of the gallows for the past five years. There have been many other pleas for a new trial, as more and more new evidence was unearthed; and following the procuring of affidavits concerning the activities of the department of justice in the case, Judge Thayer, who had presided at the trial of these workers was again appealed to several months ago for a new trial.

Judge Hostile.

His violent prejudice in this case has been evident from the very beginning of the trial at which the men were convicted, and it had been shown during each hearing on the plea for a new trial. But it was not until his most recent denial of a trial, last September, that certain prominent citizens of Boston and one capitalist newspaper became aware of his obvious hostile attitude. His decision was followed by wide spread denunciation of his action, and this has led to an unusual interest in the appeal now heard by the State Supreme Court.

The hearing was concluded on Saturday and the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti rest in the hands of the judges. It may be weeks or months before they announce whether there is or is not to be a new trial granted. If it is refused, the men will be sentenced by Judge Thayer and there is not the slightest doubt that he will sentence them to death—as he has been tryine to do for so long.

Workers Persecuted.

In closing his argument before the court on Saturday, William C. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, referring to the actions of the police authorities said:

"If this is supposed to be justice, a fair deal, we show very little trust and confidence in our own government, and we go far toward justifying those who say it is a sham and ought to be abolished. If citizens of respectability were in these men's places, and anything had been done to them such as was done to these men at their trial, the court would be quick to remedy. Do our honors believe that it is legitimate cooperation for the department of justice to send two miserable aliens out of the world by way of the electric chair when they found they could not legally send them out of the country?

"That's murder itself."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. — Shipment of aircraft, either military or non-military, to Mexico, was prohibited today in an order issued to customs collectors, unless the shippers have a special export license from the state department. ## CURRENT EVENTS speculate for the May Day raids in Pittsburgh in 1922. Documents that came into Dunn's possession prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that John L. Lewis conspired with local Pennsylvania authorities and with the local representatives to have the raids made, which resulted in hundreds of workers being arrested and jailed. That a labor leader, no matter how reactionary, should stoop so low as to turn stoolpigeon and anti-radical bloodhound is almost incredible, but it is a fact. And Lewis is only one of many.

THE New Leader, weekly organ of a weak socialist party, is now out with the rest of the bureaucratic wolf pack calling for the suppression of the Communists at all costs. According to a capitalist paper, the reactionaries do not expect success in their efforts to drive the Communists out of the unions, so they are planning to use the federal government to crush the radical movement as Lewis used the government of the state of Pennsylvania in 1923. One would think that the socialists would, even if only for the sake of appearances, stop short of becoming an open government agency. But once renegads radicals set their feet on the slippery downward trail, there is no stopping this side of the enemy's camp.

WHILE Calvin Coolidge is slaying the dragon of "militarism" in his fight to block the congressional move for the building of three cruisers, he is dispatching warships and marines to China, threatening war on Mexico and occupying Nicaraguan territory. This Jekyll-Hyde policy will no doubt give Oswald Garrison Villard and other complacent liberals the opportunity to congratulate the president once more. Coolidge is simply of the opinion that Wall Street has enough warships just now to answer its requirements. On the other hand, the steel manufacturers and shipbuilders want to make a few honest dolla.s.

American Indian Fights Deportation Order; May Set Precedent In Case

PHILADELPHIA (FP). — Are American Indians born without the territorial boundaries of the United States aliens and subject to federal immigration laws? Judge Oliver B. Dickinson of the U. S. district court has this question to answer in the case of Paul Diabo, structural iron-worker, Mohawk Indian, who decided Indian born on a reservation in Quebec, Canada. He was deported from the United States last March, but was ordered by Six Nations, the Confederation of North American Indian tribes, to return and fight the case with the organization's aid.

In taking the case under advisement, Judge Dickinson indicated that he held the U. S. district attorney had to bear the burden of proof that an American Indian might be an alien. The statute, after the district attorney's argument, that the country is the Indian's as much as that of its present inhabitants and that the Indians are technically wards of the government. Six Nations takes the stand that the deportation of an American Indian from the United States is a breach of the Jay treaty.

Young Workers Raise Slogan of Withdrawing Forces From Nicaragua

By HERRLICH.

Young workers must organize and stop war between Mexico and the United States. Militarism is an inevitable phenomenon of capitalism and constitutes one of the strongest and most important branches in prolonging the domination of capital.

Latest events in Nicaragua and Mexico are of utmost importance to the American young workers, for it will be the youth that will be called upon to shed its blood in order to continue the hegomony of Wall Street in Central America and Mexico.

Borah Calls It Invasion.

Senator William Borah during the first outburst of enthusiasm which has now died down declared efforts are being made to get this country into a shameless cowardly war with Mexico.

The invasion of American marines in Nicaragua and the columnies in the capitalist press pertaining to the Mexican controversy show clearly that the American government (agent of Wall Street) will do all in its power to protect Doheny Sinclair and Standard Oil interests.

Young Would Be Soldiers.

There is only one power than can stop this war; that power is the American working class. The young workers are most immediately involved. You must raise the cry everywhere to stop this war. We refuse to shed our blood and murder workers of other countries in order to strength the enemies of labor.

The Young Workers League raises a slogan "Withdrawal of marines

Passaic Strikers Wait Long Time for Postponed Hearing

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 30.—In their celebration of the first anniversary of the biggest textile strike Passaic has ever had, the textile strikers did not forget their brothers incarcerated in jail since last September.

A delegation consisting of Mrs. Toth and Katherine Toth, mother and sister of one of the prisoners, Fannie Rudkowitz, of the Relief Office; Hollace Ransdall, secretary of the Joint Committee for Passaic Defense, William Sroka, John L. Kovacs and Cyril Briggs, strike publicity director, called on the four prisoners in the Bergen County jail at Hackensack yesterday. The prisoners are Thomas Regan, held in $15,000 bail; Adolf Wisnefski, $15,000; Joseph Toth, $15,000; and Paul Kovac, $15,000. Kovac, the one who suffered three broken ribs in the third degree ordeal to which the men were subjected at the time of their arrest, recently went out of his mind as a result, it is alleged of the torture inflicted upon him.

While the state seems determined to keep these men cooped up in jail it is evidently in no hurry to give them a trial. Dates have been set several times for trial and as often postponed and in the meantime, the authorities continued to make it difficult to furnish bail for the men by their refusal to accept any but cash bail.

Duluth Young Workers In Fine Lenin Meeting Despite Difficulties

Quite a successful Lenin-Liebknecht memorial meeting was held in Duluth on Jan. 23, under the auspices of the Young Workers League. Comrade Sam Poberasky, secretary of the league, spoke of the life of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, and explained the role of the Y. W. L. in the working class struggle.

Comrade Jay Lovestone, who had been scheduled to be the main speaker, was delayed, and in his absence, our district organizer, Comrade Talentire, made a speech, in which he explained the work and contribution of Lenin to the world revolution, and to the Russian revolution in particular. His words were well received and were interrupted many times with cheers and applause.

After the speech a substantial collection was taken. In general the meeting was very successful, and showed that the time is here to build a still stronger and larger membership of the party and the league in Duluth.—Sam Pobersky.

Date Set for Trial of Baking Magnate's Son Who Killed Sailor

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Federal Judge Bondy today set Feb. 7th as the date for the trial of the $30,000 damage suit against Walter S. Ward, brought by Mr and Mrs. Eldridge O. Peters, parents of Clarence Peters, who was slain by Ward.

Ward shot Peters to death in Westchester county in 1922. Tried, he was acquitted.

Last June Ward disappeared, but a few days ago he turned up at New Orleans and won a reconciliation with his father, the former baking magnate. Both are now in Havana, William Sroka, John L. Kovacs and Cyril Briggs, strike publicity director, called on the four prisoners in the Bergen County jail at Hackensack yesterday. The prisoners are Thomas Regan, held in $15,000 bail; Adolf Wisnefski, $15,000; Joseph Toth, $15,000; and Paul Kovac, $15,000. Kovac, the one who suffered three broken ribs in the third degree ordeal to which the men were subjected at the time of their arrest, recently went out of his mind as a result, it is alleged of the torture inflicted upon him.

SLAVE LABOR SHOWS FEW JOBS SOLD; DEFICIT IS LAID AT DOORS OF BIG BUSINESS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 7.—Chicago's parting victory blasts out thru to the country as the first city to have completely solved the problem of the unemployed. Mayor William E. Dever's triumphant boast that there are not any more unemployed men in Chicago is founded on a task raised the above headline on Monday, Halsted and South State Streets and on no other basis whatever. The job hunting is more convincing than what figures might indicate.

Average Two Men Per Job.

The last index of the Illinois Labor Department gives Chicago applicants for jobs at free employment bureaus as 178 to every 100 jobs available. This is for December. Officials at the Chicago office of the department, while they are reluctant to make any sort of estimate, even roughly, as to the actual number, say that every indication points to the fact that when December the number of jobs has materially decreased. In November, for example, the ratio was 167 to 100, showing a steady decline of jobs.

Keep On Tramping.

Building trades workers and mechanists to whom I have spoken tell of interminable tramping from building to building and shop to shop. Stockyards workers relate that there are more butchers out of work than since 1922. The state figures for factory employment show a drop of 14 per cent between November and December.

"Short covering and speculative buying, stimulated by cheerful stock market reports, has served temporarily as encouraging reports from other branches of American industry, brought about a good recovery in stock prices," says the last market report from the New York exchange.

The optimism of which sits very well with the coupon slippers but which cannot be shared by the unquestionably large lay-offs in the steel mills at Gary and South Chicago, a compliment of a general reduction in practically all the most branches of industry in this city.

PAPER BOX STRIKE PARALLELS PASSAIC

(By a Worker correspondent)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Another labor organization is being attacked. Another group of workers is waging a desperate struggle to maintain its union. Again organized employers, using hunger and cold as their weapons, are seeking to annihilate a labor organization that it has taken years to build up.

This time it is the paper box workers of New York City that are carrying on the struggle. For fifteen weeks they have fought against the mandate of their oppressors which would reduce them to the status of unorganized workers.

Would Crush Union

Fifteen weeks ago, the hundred and fifty paper box manufacturers of Greater New York determined that their employes give up their union. They themselves were bound together in a solid organization. They preferred to act as a unit, although they wanted their employes to act as individuals.

The workers did not yield to the demand, although they stood desperately in need of employment. They held to their union and struck for its maintenance.

Standards Low

Surely, these workers need a union if any workers do. It is very badly needed to build up the terribly low standards that prevail in this industry. The factories are housed in the most desolate part of Manhattan, along Greene and Mercer and Prince Streets, where old buildings stand that have been out of date for many years and are contemporaries of the most part of the town have long since been pulled down to make way for modern structures. In these dilapidated edifices of the middle of last century the paper box workers are huddled. Go down and look at them some day. A large part of the work is carried on in basements, for the rent of upper floors is not as cheap as the discarded, uninhabitable basements.

The misery of the basements is intensified by the fact that the heavy cut board must be carried up by the workers as there are no elevator facilities in 50 per cent of the shops.

In that dampness and darkness, the paper box workers spend their labor hours.

Workers Driven

The seasons vary in intensity and there is approximately eight months of each year part time employment. Always there is the most ballish driving of workers. The wages, the state department of labor reports, are next to the lowest of these paid in any industry. And sanitary conditions are indisputedly the worst.

Here we have truly a sweated industry, one of the last survivals of that hated race, the principal cure for which is organization.

A Record Passes

For fifteen bitter weeks the struggle has gone on. Picket lines have been maintained morning and evening, with both men and women appearing upon them. Young girls in their teens have braved the snow and the rain and cold in helping to keep them. They have been one of the most effective ways of demonstrating the strength of the strike. Policemen's clubs have been wielded upon unprotected heads for the crime of walking along the sidewalks and informing would-be workers that a strike was on. Four hundred pickets have been arrested, in almost every case for no legal offense. In nearly every case the person has been dismissed because he has committed no crime. Union and women have been beaten by the thugs employed by the manufacturers.

This has been another Passaic strike in fact except two details. The details are: 1. This is a strike to defend a union already formed, rather than one to establish a new union. 2. The police and judges of this town have been wise enough not to attack reporters, so the strike has not been given the newspaper publicity that the Passaic strike received.

In most other respects we have a Passaic strike here right in our midst.

Come quickly with your help. Contributions from your workshop. Get your friends to contribute. Get your union to contribute. In a desperate struggle like this, every dollar sent soon has twice its value. Help the paper box workers to win.

Steel Firm Nets Big Profits After Paying Miners' Union Scale

NEW YORK, (FP).—Paying the United Mine Workers scale to several thousand employes in its coal mines has not prevented Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. from making high profits. Its 1926 profits rose to $15,149,004 from $9,854,404 in 1925, says the annual report. And its 1926 common stock dividends climbed to $19.46 a share as compared to $10.30 in 1925.

During the same period Bethlehem Steel repudiated the Jacksonville wage agreement and reduced its miners' pay 23 per cent on the pretext that it could not operate its coal properties profitably at the union figure.

Jones & Laughlin coal is mined by the Vesta Coal Co., one of the three big concerns continuing to deal with the U. M. W. of A. in the Pittsburgh field. It does not recognise organized labor in its steel mills.

BRICKLAYERS' RELIEF INCREASING.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Old age relief and mortuary benefits paid to members by the Bricklayers, Plasterers and Masons' International Union in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926, were respectively $955,008 and $818,311, according to Secretary-Treasurer Gleeson. This was the highest total for each of the two funds that has yet been expended.

RELATED WAGE INCREASE TO DEVELOPMENT.

Carry Anti-Syndicalist Law Fight to State Legislature on Coast

By L. P. BINDAL

(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Indications are that a hard fight will be put up before the California legislature to repeal the criminal syndicalism law. The noted jurist and criminologist, Dr. George W. Kirchwey, has made a survey of this act for the American Civil Liberties Union, and he characterizes it as a "farce." So does Leon R. Yankwich, professor of law at the Loyola college and member of the Los Angeles bar. William Kent, former United States congressman, is also strong against the law, according to a statement in the South California Labor Press (A. F. of L.). The Open Forum, organ of the A. C. L. U. branch, and the liberal (sometimes almost radical) Los Angeles Record are both putting up a strong protest against the savagery of California.

The Sacco-Vanzetti United Front Defense Conference has held two meetings already this year, on January 9 and 16. The number of delegates has greatly increased, as many of the locals have voted to take more active part in the work to free these victims.

At a recent election the following officers were elected: T. B. Webber, president, George Timberlake, vice-president, Joseph Spisak, treasurer, Mike Shulman, secretary, and Dave Rapoport, assistant secretary.

Arrangements have been made to hold a big mass meeting in the near future.

Organizing Cab Drivers Union In Philadelphia In Spite of Discharges

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30 (FP).—Taxicab drivers of Philadelphia are seeking to build up a union. More than 30 men suspected of union sympathy have been fired, but the movement continues. The Yellow Taxi Co. now owned by Thomas B. Mitten interests, discharged 10 of these drivers, when they were seen reading copies of the Cab Driver's Bulletin.

The Cab Drivers Union demands call for a guaranteed wage of $4 a day; 10-hour day and 5-day week; time starting on arrival at garage; time and half for overtime; abolition of criminal identification—fingerprinting and photographing; installation of lockers and sanitary washrooms; no discrimination, and recognition of the union.

Mitten has lost much of his popularity in Philadelphia. Poor service on his Philadelphia Rapid Transit street car system is being criticised severely. Quaker City citizens, business groups and district associations are hoping that Mitten keeps the P. R. T. street cars few and far between, while pushing his Yellow cabs under everyone's nose. Mitten cabs solicit crowds waiting on corners for the long delayed Mitten trolleys.

Gifford Pinchot, before his term as governor expired, urged the Public Service Commission to make "an immediate inquiry into transit conditions in Philadelphia." Pinchot's regular Republican successor, John Fisher, has not yet called for a report.

Cab drivers boosting the union hope to forestall the famous "Mitten plan" of company unionism which Mitten is trying to extend into taxi service. Mitten has fought trade unions since 1911 when he broke a street railway workers' strike in Philadelphia. His son boasted recently that the father spent $6,000,000 breaking a Buffalo car strike which ended with the introduction of the company union.

The Mitten plan calls for employe stock ownership. But Robert W. Dunn, speaking before the Young Democracy Open Forum in Philadelphia, pointed out that though the workers owned a large minority of the common stock their share in the total outstanding securities of the company amounted to only about three percent and their share in the total earnings of the company was therefore far below what it was cracked up to be.

Discharge Telegraph Operators With the Speed-up on the Job

By SIDNEY TEPPER

(Worker Correspondent)

Hundreds of Morse telegraph operators are being discharged by the Western Union Telegraph Co. and many more put on a part time basis all over the United States, as a result of the speed-up system and "economy drive."

The men and women discharged or given indefinite furloughs have to live with the company between two and fifteen years.

For years these workers have slaved for low wages, long hours, single time for overtime after 9 hours, with the hope of having a permanent job. (During the war the government compelled the company to grant the 9 hour day and time and a half for overtime, in large offices only.)

The slave driving supervisors were always on the workers' necks asking for bigger records. The company spent millions of dollars to devise new speed up machinery. A general amusement arose through the telegraph workers. Hundreds joined the union of commercial telegraphers. The company being alarmed by the general restlessness of the workers sent stool pigeons to spy upon the men. Every union meeting was filled with stool pigeons who are ready to sell their fellow workers for a few dollars, higher job or a smile from an official. The most active workers were reported and fired.

A strike was called in 1918 but it was lost. There are three reasons why the strike was lost. (1) Union called the strike in one office only while the other wires unaffected. Scabs brought in from other places. (2) Stool pigeons demoralised the ranks and (3) many men were afraid to take their "steady jobs."

The Western Union alarmed by these events tooks measures to safeguard itself against their repetitions. They organized the fake company union and discharged anyone who was suspected of still belonging to the commercial telegraphers.

Of this company union and the other "welfare" measures we will write in future articles.

LABOR SECRETARY DAVIS CHANGES "HYMN OF HATE"

Never Favored Alien Bills, So He Says

The Connecticut Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers sees a direct connection between its very successful state conference held in New Haven on Sunday and a speech delivered in that city by Secretary of Labor Davis the following day.

Mr. Davis speaking over the radio denied emphatically that he had ever favored registration of aliens involving finger-printing or espionage, and claimed that he had in fact always strenuously opposed such proposed measures. He said he was merely advocating a voluntary registration system which would benefit the alien by making naturalization easier and simpler.

Seems To Be Change.

This statement was surprising to the Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers which has been fighting all anti-alien measures such as the various proposed registration bill. The council seems to remember very distinctly that a year ago the Secretary of Labor was backing the pernicious Aswall bill which not only calls for finger-printing but also for taxing for conscription at the will of the president, and for such a Prussian system of registry that it would result in constant spying upon a workers' every move and action.

Davis Yields.

The Secretary of Labor in his annual report, issued in December, stated that in view of the fact that so many people seemed to object to the proposals for compulsory registration—facts he had been brought up at every session of Congress since 1922—he was willing to try some scheme of voluntary registration of aliens. In other words he felt it necessary to yield to the tremendous pressure of public opinion against this attempted attack upon the foreign-born.

Inserting The Thin Edge

In line with this change in Mr. Davis' plans, Representative Holaday introduced a new bill, on January 10th of this year, calling upon Congress to set certain fees for a voluntary registration of aliens to be carried on. This is presumably for the purpose of aiding them in becoming naturalized.

But the Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers asks why there is need of passing a law if the registration is to be optional.

They feel confident that what will actually result is a demand for compulsory registration when the voluntary scheme has failed as it surely will. This is proposed to make aliens register—perhaps at the command of employers—the authorities can then say that those workers who did not register must be suspicious characters and therefore ought to be forced to register.

Whatever Mr. Davis may say at this time, the Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers is convinced that he disapproved proposals to introduce as soon as the public will stand for it—a compulsory system of registration of aliens. After that will come registration for all of us.

Mr. Davis in his New Haven speech: "I know that many of you here are opposed to the enrollment of aliens in the United States. I am unable to find reasons why I have proposed no espionage, no finger-printing, no other identification other than the fact of enrollment. Finger-printing measures have been advocated, but I have strenuously opposed them."

Council Gets Results.

The Connecticut Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers believes that nothing could have brought forth such a statement but its gathering of more than 330 delegates at a conference which opposed all such measures, and voted to continue to fight them as long as they were before Congress.

Sunday's conference, according to Miss Nina Samorodin, Secretary of the National organization, had representatives of every union, of central trades, of fraternal and religious organizations from 8 different cities.

Couldn't Break It Up.

"There were twenty delegates representing certain Workmen's Circle branches and the Socialists", says Miss Samorodin, "who came all prepared to break up the meeting. But after they had had a thoro hearing, they were flouted by the delegates, part of them withdrew, and the conference proceeded to a most successful conclusion."

If one council conferences could an influence Secretary of Labor Davis, a hundred councils if established thruout the country could no doubt crush out all attempts to persecute the foreign born worker with any more proposed registration and deportation measures in Congress. Write to the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers, 41 Union Square, New York, N. Y. for information about a council in your city.

The Manager's Corner

A POUND OF NEWSPRINT VS. A GRAIN OF NEWS

Soon Tolstoy once commented sarcastically upon the fact that certain issues of American newspapers weigh four pounds. The average Sunday paper weighs this much and sometimes more. This enormous load consists of all the trash which can be thrown together to stupify and confuse the minds of the workers, issues comic strips, cheap sob stories, social scrapp from the divorce courts and the domestic life of the idle rich; advice to the lovelorn, lurid murder tales, and similar insipid trappings which emanate in a poisonous cloud from the pages of the capitalist press. The careful reader of the news is forced to wade through this mass of intellectual garbage, to find here and there a shred of real news of social importance, usually not more than a grain of news to a pound of newsprint.

Within the six pages of The DAILY WORKER is crammed all the meat, in the way of news, that can be put into such a limited space. If you will scan the pages of The DAILY WORKER you will notice with what care the news is selected. Each item is chosen for its particular importance or genuine human interest. Each topic is developed with an eye to bringing out its social significance. Each article is written with but one thought in mind, that of its service to the workers.

The worker who is led to chose his newspaper by the flashy appeal of the capitalist press, by its glaring, but empty headlines, or by its rapid pictures, is like a child who responds solely to the immediate sense impression, and grasps at the brightest object which comes within his reach. In choosing a newspaper, cheap novelty alone should not be the standard, but rather the novelty of that which is intellectually stimulating and socially useful. A newspaper should furnish real food for thought

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Come Back for More.

Editor, DAILY WORKER: I was at the Bramhall Theatre at 27th Street and Lexington Avenue to see the play "The Difference in Gods". I was very well acted and the thought behind it was a very fine one. However, the seating capacity of the theatre amounts to 300 approximately, and only one-fourth or less was filled.

Any movie house is filled, no matter how stupid the picture may be. The prices in the movies rank anywhere between 25c and 65c, whereas the charge at the Bramhall Theatre is well within the reach of the workers—25c only; 25c to see a play superbly acted. But this is not all that I want to bring out: Butler Davenport, hero of plays and owner of the theatre, is the only one (except the Workers' Theatre) who offered a free seat to the paper box striker to see "The Bells." I'm sure any striker who saw it enjoyed it.

I beseech every worker who reads this paper to dig up but one quarter and go to the Bramhall Theatre instead of going to a nonsensical picture, and I'm sure you will come back for more. Comradely yours.

FLORENCE PROPKY.

An Appeal to Women

Dear Comrades: Reading The DAILY WORKER every day, your "challenge" letters have interested me very much, because they show how little the majority of your Party are doing to help Keep The DAILY WORKER.

If every member of your Party would have done his share, you would have gone "over the top" a long time ago. If the majority would have any interest in the paper or really realise that The DAILY WORKER was in a precarious condition, they would answer those "challenge" letters much faster.

Appeal to Women.

Although neither my wife nor I am a Party member, I would like to make a suggestion. On account of what my wife has done, the thought has come to me that if you make an appeal to the wives of the Party members and to women in general, to come to the rescue of The DAILY WORKER, the response would be surprising.

When the Passaic Relief Committee sent out an appeal for relief funds it was my wife who urged me to go out and collect funds for them. We raised $25.00.

We received another appeal from the same source. Again it was my wife who urged me and went with me to collect more money. With her help I raised another $25.00 and 150 pound of new and old clothing.

A Real Wife.

Then when you made an appeal to keep The DAILY WORKER in existence, and my wife read in the lists that I gave only $1.00 (as much as I had at that time), these are the exact words she used to me, "Is that all you gave? Why, what would we and all the other workers do if The DAILY WORKER stopped publication?"

She made me promise to send $5.00 immediately (the amount you will find enclosed), and to send another five as soon as possible (which I shall also do).

That's why I say, make an appeal to the women folks. They know what it means to fight for an existence, and they are the ones who will help save our DAILY.

If this letter will do any good, you may publish it with pleasure.

With Comrade Greetings.

MAX MILLER.

Cleveland, Ohio.

Long Live the Daily Worker in New York City.

Editor, DAILY WORKER: With unconfined joy, I add my voice in welcoming to New York, the only English language labor daily in America voicing the hopes and aspirations of the working class movement.

The arrival of The DAILY WORKER in New York will serve not only to dissolve the countless falsehoods spawned by the mendacious of capitalism, such as the New York Times and the rest, but will also counteract directly the vicious fabrications and fairy tales disseminated by the yellow socialist New Leader.

The first day out on New York's sea of struggle saw the sale of The DAILY WORKER rise to great and glorious heights and my newsdealer who often complained of left-overs, was more than glad to announce that all his dailies, fifteen in all, were sold out. In a feverish hunt thruout the lower Bronx, for a copy, I discovered much the same situation.

Comrades and fellow workers! Keep up the good work, and let the reactionaries know that our much heralded weakness and oft-reported "slow death" is only a fanciful dream.

Long live The DAILY WORKER in New York City. JOSEPH J. FADGUG.

The Lewis Machine Shows Its Inner Weakness.

The Lewis machine was defeated last Wednesday afternoon.

It did not lose permanent control of the convention, thanks to the organizational control which enables it to count votes as it pleases, but for almost two hours the rank and file speakers roared their disapproval of the machine proposal with respect to Section 25 of the constitution.

If there is such a thing as a spontaneous revolt, this is what it was that swept over Vice-President Murray, Van Bittner, Captain Percy Tetlow and other heavyweights of the administration.

Section 25 reads:

The board shall have power to levy and collect assessments when necessary but no assessment shall be collected for more than two months unless authorized by a referendum vote of the members.

The constitution committee had propcsed that the words "but no assessment shall be collected for more than two months unless authorized by a referendum vote of the membership." This deletion would have given the Lewis machine authority to levy and collect assessments at will.

Suddenly the convention was in an uproar. Bank and file delegates were shouting for the floor. Some of them got it and then the machine speakers tried to stem the tide. They could not. Murray tried to stop one young, rotund and good-natured looking delegate but was told to his face: "I represent my local union and I am going to speak." He did. So did many more.

The delegates from the anthracite were especially acrimonious. "Let us enforce the check-off and we won't have to worry about assessment. We are spending four or five hundred dollars every month in my local now collecting dues," said one speaker.

The well-known progressive leaders took no part in the fight. Apparently they were quite satisfied with the way things were going and wanted to see how much fighting spirit there was in the convention.

Finally Murray forced a vote.

There was a clear majority against the committee report but Murray declared it carried.

There were hundreds of demands for a roll call.

30 per cent. of the delegates must vote in favor to secure a roll call. Murray talked of the expense, etc., but when he called for a show of hands more than seven hundred miners' fists were raised—almost half of the delegates voted for it.

The machine tellers counted 498 and said it was not the required amount. Murray adjourned the convention.

As the delegates crowded thru the doors into the open air there was a steady murmur of curses and complaints.

"So this is what we get for supporting the constructive policies of those s——s of b——s," said one.

"I've never been a Howat man but by god—," said another.

"I didn't vote for Brophy but I hope he runs again, that's all," said a third.

Writing on January 26, we said:

"What the opposition . . . will accomplish if it catches the machine off guard for a moment is to defeat it by exposing its political weakness on the convention floor."

This has been done.

The whole convention has seen the machine cowering before a rank and file onslaught and forced, to save itself from disgraceful defeat, to thwart openly the expressed will of the rank and file.

Every honest delegate is drawing his own conclusions—and they are not complimentary to the Lewis machine.

There are two reasons for this sudden loss of control over the convention. They are:

(1) The issue was one on which the machine felt sure of victory and consequently neglected to stage the usual red-baiting scene.

(2) The granting of unlimited power to levy and collect assessments is a practical question which every delegate can understand at once.

If the left wing is able now to take the lead in a fight for reconsideration of a vote which every delegate knows was crooked the Lewis machine will be in a bad way. Its artificial majority from non-existent locals will enable it to count votes in its favor but something more than mechanical majorities are needed to preserve the political prestige of the machine during and after this convention.

That prestige was damaged badly on Thursday afternoon.

The Making of Mary Snesky

By C. RAZA SHERMAN

TWENTY-NINE years of toil and child-bearing have left their mark on Mary Snesky. Her shape, though she is scarcely forty-two, Mary comes from Poland, hardly speaks the English language, yet she has been in America since she was a child. She is big with large breasts and large hips. Her gray hair pulled tight back in a knot by a few rusty hair pins.

Into Child Slavery.

But Mary was young once, yes, even good looking. She came to Passaic, N. J. at the age of thirteen, healthy, robust, meaty, too big for her age. She might have gone to school, but being the oldest of a family of six, she had to get a job, and so her career in the Botany Mills began, working ten and twelve hours daily for $3 a week. This, however, did not discourage Mary. She did not think she would have to work for long, for soon she would marry John Mihoisoky, whom she had met on the steamer from Poland. Even night school was impossible for Mary to attend, since her father worked in the day while her mother worked on the night shift, making her the mother of the younger children.

Wearing Out at Seventeen.

When she became seventeen, she married John. By that time the robustness, the rosy cheeks and her strength began to give way, and where the red blood used to rush, patches of rouge hid the growing pallor.

One year of love and Mary gave birth to a little girl. She had to give up work. But the family had to live, the doctor's bills to be paid, baby's clothes, etc., and within a few months we find Mary back on the night shift in the Botany Mills, more worn than ever. Nineteen, only a young girl, and already she was broken with flat feet and rings under her eyes.

Gave to The Church.

Years dragged on—Mary and John worked. Their family increased. Mary loved her children, respected he husband, went to church every Sunday and on holidays, gave all the pennies she could to the church and waited for the good God to help her as he would all good people who trusted and believed in him.

By the time Helen, her oldest girl was thirteen, Mary had already four children, and John's earnings, $10 a week, did not suffice to support the family. Helen, like her mother, went into the Botany. Everything was now increased day by day. Mary's only thought was, "will the meagre earnings enable her to buy enough food for the family, to pay rent, gas bills, doctor's bills, and from time to time some clothing. But the mind go on—

In 1914 the world was turned out. Father Snesky, Mary's father, Liberal Bonds, Patriotism, with finally conscription in 1917, taking Mary's two sons to France to fight the Hun for the Stars and Stripes. The Hun Corpses, who are Germans, had suddenly turned patriots. Flags, flags all over. A star was hung up in the Forstmann-Huffmann plant for Mary's son, who was killed in the Marines. It was Peace on Earth and Good Will toward men. Then Armistice. Hurrah!! We had won. Peace! Peace. Peace and readjustment... Pre-war conditions... War tax. Wage cuts. Speed up systems. Production.

The money-hungry mill owners who had made tremendous profits out of the war, were without consideration for the workers. On Monday morning, October 9, 1924, a notice was posted to the effect of yet another 10% wage cut.

No Confidence In God.

This meant actual starvation, and Mary who in all her life had never complained and devoutly believed in God and trusted that he would help her, felt at last a hatred toward all those responsible for her miserable life. Mary felt her very life going. It was no more a question of a home, she she had dreamt of one ever since she was seventeen. No, she never could save enough to buy the first mortgage on a shack in Garfield. This time she began wondering how she would be able to pay the rent of the shack on Mattimore Street, where she now lived. It was not milk and cream and meat, but bread for her children! Bread!!

This wrong must not be done to the workers. The bosses have enough. Why doesn't the Merciful God punish them for treating the people like this?

Determines To Live.

The more she thought of it, the more determined her NO. That No became louder and louder. With fists clenched and teeth biting into her lips to the bleeding point, she had felt something had to be done. She will not starve, and more so, she will not let the children starve. Their life is miserable enough. But what shall she do?

Mary had never known the value of a union, in fact she was against it. The boss always told her that they were not good, and besides he would fire all the people who would dare to belong to a union, and the strikebreaker discouraged organization. But now some of the workers in Botany said, "We must organize," and she listened to such talk for the first ever.

Another is the insistence of Hindenburg that there be no tampering with the "armed forces of the nation." The reichswehr must continue — as heretofore — to admit only out and out monarchists and to train Fascists secretly. Sooner or later the workers in Germany will realize that at bottom the social democrats are working for the resumption of power by the reactionary Right. In 1918 the Socialists might have made as clean a sweep of things as the Bolsheviks had made in Russia. But they believed in democracy, in "freedom." Their only terror was against the Communists. The result is a regime of Hindenburg, Gessler, Hergt, Graef, Stresemann and Marx.

Nationalists Control Military and Courts.

To the nationalists have gone the two best weapons for the oppression of the working class. Graef, right and nationalist, is minister of justice. He takes over 4,000 political prisoners and can be expected to increase their number. While the democratic and social democrats supported the cabinet, a rigid regime of anti proletarian justice was maintained. Now a quiet reign of terror is ahead. Herr Walter Graef will be ably seconded by Dr. Oscar Hergt, leader of the nationalists, who, as minister of interior, will have the job of seeing "Ruhe und Ordnung" in the land. The workers are in for a period of reaction which should open the eyes of the social democratic rank and file.

The new Marx cabinet has only a flimsy majority. It may last a long time; it may fall within a very short period Marx can, on certain issues in internal politics, count on the bourgeois democrats and on the benevolent neutrality of the social-democrats.

As long as he sticks by the league of nations and a rapprochement with Poincare, Herman Mueller and Hilferding will let him do what he wants in internal politics. The social-democrats are now in "His Majesty's Hindenburg's opposition." They will be very polite. Of course, they would like to get into office to taste a few of the plums. But since this is further away than ever, they can be relied on to behave.

The Cabinet Hindenburg Wanted

By JURI VICTOR

The "democratic German Republic" now has its most reactionary cabinet. The republic, established in 1918 by the Noskes and Scheidemanns, who thus got the monarchists and junkers out of deep international hole, has moved steadily towards the right until today the ministerial combination may even make Wilhelm in Doorn feel better. It is all the work of that great strategian, Hindenburg, who, while the liberals in all countries were hailing him as the exponent of progressive political thought and republican patriotism, was busy preparing warm berths for his friends, monarchist nationalists. For doing lip service to the republic and for accepting Stresemann's Locarno policy, these representatives of the rich land owners and mining industrialists have obtained four portfolios in the new government, two of which are the best outposts for the oppression of the working class.

German political developments in the last two years tonild be made the finest, large-scale object lesson in the operations of democracy. In the Spring of 1925, Hindenburg, the candidate of the nationalists and people's party, was elected president on a frankly monarchist ticket against Marx, the candidate of the republicans, democrats, social democrats and centrists. Since then Marx has been Hindenburg's prime minister more than any other man.

Last summer 15,000,000 Germans, a majority of the electorate, voted for the expropriation without compensation of ex-royalty. This was 100% proof that the Reichstag did not represent the masses. It should have packed up and gone home. But Hindenburg wrote a letter, the cahinet shivered before the grand old man, and the princes continued to get their subsidies—with the help of the socialdemocrats. That reichstag, which acted contrary to the will of more than half the voters, still sits.

Last November the third Marx cabinet was formed to resign on account of the opposition to Gessler, minister of war, under whom the reichswehr is the hearth of anti-republican propaganda and the refuge of militarism and reaction. A majority of the reichstag voted against Gessler and the ministry had to quit. Today Gessler is back in the cabinet and a ... same reichstag which voted against him two months ago will now vote for him. One reason is the perfidy of the Catholic Centre.

Bosses Control Radio

"Free as the air" doesn't mean so much as it used to, since the invention of radio, telegraph and telephone have added a new use to the space above and around us, and a use that is by the nature of the cost of the apparatu required to exploit it, with few exceptions is limited to the possession of the rich and of governments.

Radio Telegraphy is said to have increased the difficulties of secret diplomacy, by enticing ambassadors and other political agents to employ a means of communication in which opponents can listen in, and by making it impossible to prevent small sending sets from being erected, which can distribute important information until traced down and sealed.

However, during the British General Strike it was discovered that all the radio sending apparatus was controlled by the employers or the government, and used for propaganda purposes by them. Also in America attempts to set up labor broadcasting stations are hindered by the fact that the best wave lengths, and the most powerful stations, are hogged by the great corporations.

Bunny Visits Soviet Russia

A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

The American magnate came among these Britishers with as much tact and grace as one of his long-horned steers from the southwestern plains. He wasn't going to put on any society flummery, he was an old cattle-puncher from Oklahoma, and if "Old Spats and Monocle," as he called Great Britain's leading oil magnate, didn't like him, by Jeec he could jump him! Bunny attended a banquet at which a group of the rivals sat down together, and it seemed to Bunny that Verne was more noisy and more slangy than even at his own dinner-table at the Monastery. There was method in it, the younger man suspected; Verne frightened these strangers with his wild western airs, and that was the proper mood for negotiations! They had needed our navy damn bad a few years ago, and had got it free of charge, but they weren't going to get it that way again, and Verne was the feller to tell them so. The next time, it would be the oil crowd's say about the battleships—and the same with the doliar, by Jees.

There was a new deal in American diplomacy since the war. The state department had taken charge of foreign investments made by our bankers, and told them where to go and where to stay away from. The bankers had to obey, because they never knew when they might need the help of the marines to collect their interest. What it meant in practice was that a few fighting men like Vernon Roscoe could go to foreign business men and say, let me in on this and give me a share of that, or you can whistle for the next loan from Wall Street. The procedure is known to all cattle men, they call it "horning in"; and after a few of the Britishers had been "horned in on," they learned what the little fellows had learned back home—who were the real masters of America!

Dad of course had no trace of interest in seeing the place where men had had their heads chopped off five hundred years ago; and Bunny tried it, and found that he didn't have much either. What Bunny wanted was to meet the men who were in danger of having their heads chopped off now. There was a great labor movement in England, with a well developed system of workers' education, supported by the old line leaders; also a bunch of young rebels making war on it because of its lack of clear revolutionary purpose. "The Young Student" had been exchanging with the "Plebs," and now Bunny went to see these rebels, and soon was up to his ears in the British struggle —a wonderful meeting at Albert Hall, and labor members of Parliament and other interesting people to meet.

A couple of papers published interviews with the young oil prince who had gone in for "radicalism," as the Americans called it. And this brought an agonized letter from Bertie. She had been begging them to come over to Paris and meet the best people but now, here was Bunny, six thousand miles away from home, still making his stinks! Couldn't he for God's sake stop to think what he was doing to his relatives? Eldon just about to get a promotion, and here his brother-in-law coming in and queering it all! You could see Bertie making a strong moral effort on paper, controlling herself and patiently explaining to her brother the difference between Europe and California. People really took the red peril seriously over here, and Bunny would find himself a complete social outcast. How could Eldon's superiors trust him in delicate matters of state policy, if they knew that members of his family were in sympathy with the murderous ruffians of Moscow?

Bunny replied that it was very sad indeed, but Bertie and her husband had better repudiate him and not see him, for he had no intention of failing to make acquaintance with the labor and Socialist movements of the countries he visited. Having got that off his chest, Bunny found it all good. Yes, Rachel Mannles was going to make a real editor—a lot better one than Bunny himself, he humbly decided. She had started a series of papers, called "Justice and the Student," discussing the problems of the younger generation. She saw it all so clearly, and was so dignified and persuasive in manner—not angry, as the young reds so easily get. Even Dad was impressed, yes, that was a clever girl; you wouldn't think it to look at her—but these Jews were always smart.

Also the labor press service was coming, with Dan Irving's Washington letter and other news from the oil scandal. And very soon Bunny saw what Verne had meant by predicting the collapse of the investigation. The whole power of attorney general's office had been turned against the insurgent senators, Barney Brockway, backed against the wall, was fighting for the life of himself and his "Ohio gang." Secret service agents had raided the offices of the senators conducting the investigation and rifled their papers; they were shaking up scandals against these men, sending women to try to "get" them, arranging a series of "frameups" in their home states—every trick they had rehearsed on the state department had taken charge of foreign investments made by our bankers, and told them where to go and where to stay away from. The bankers had to obey, because they never knew when they might need the help of the marines to collect their interest. What it meant in practice was that a few fighting men like Vernon Roscoe could go to foreign business men and say, let me in on this and give me a share of that, or you can whistle for the next loan from Wall Street. "Chicago."

The hit of the new plays is "Chicago," which has taken New York audiences by storm. It was written by a young newspaper women, Maurine Watkins, who was a "cub-reporter" at the famous Loeb-Leopold murder trial last year. Billed as a "satirical comedy," it is all of that and much more. In addition to giving an accurate description of contemporary events in Chicago, (or New York or Detroit) it is highly entertaining from the opening scene to the close of the play.

Roxie Hart, capably portrayed by Francine Larrimore, murders one of her "gentlemen friends," is arrested, brot to trial and acquitted. That is the plot in short, but as it is unwoven, we glimpse behind the scenes from the second the police sergeant places her under arrest until her ultimate release.

The preparation for the trial is a gem. Roxie's lawyer is shown telling her what to say on the witness stand. It is followed by a courtroom scene, attorney, shots are heard outside the court-room. A new murder case! All the reporters, photographers and "sob-sisters" are off to prepare a new line of dope for the great American reading public.

ers' Convention Dominated by Payroll Delegates, Hears Green, Bars Communists.

By JACK KENNEDY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS.—Black reaction reached the climax of its on the left-wing of the Miners' Union when Emperor Lewis through an amendment to the constitution Saturday bar- all members of the Workers Party from membership in the United Mine Workers.

Progressives fought stubbornly in the name of union democracy against the vicous provision aimed to eliminate all opposition to the treacherous alliance between union bureaucracy and employers, but the convention, thoroughly drilled by administration whips, followed Lewis' lead blindly. Although opposition to the amendment meant expulsion from the union and from the coal industry, nearly 40 delegates voted "No"

Opposition Rises.

Tom Gardish, Frank Vratarich and Michael Braidich took the platform against the new heresy hunt. Braidich, who "fought for democracy" in France in 1918, made an eloquent appeal for democracy in the union.

"Every man who opposes the administration from now on," Braidich warned, "will be branded as a Communist. The result will be that every member, fearing the loss of his job, will be afraid to express himself in the miners' union now stands in danger of expulsion.

"Every honest liberal has already been branded as a red, and the road is now left open for their complete elimination from the union."

Gardish wanted to know why the fascisti, virulent enemies of labor, who conducted energetic activities among Italian miners, were not also included in the revision of the constitution.

Also in the Unions.

Van Bittner, leader of the bandpicked delegation of non-union West Virginia, O. J. Owens, an Ohio machine leader, and Lewis, spoke for the amendment. Lewis complained bitterly that the Workers Party is not merely a political organism but fights also on the industrial field against employers and their agents in the unions.

Loot, Loot, Loot!

Emperor Lewis laid up no end of trouble for himself earlier in the day when his crowd pushed through another constitutional amendment, raising his salary to twelve thousand dollars. Even administration supporters warned him that he faces a revolt of the rank and file for his greed at a time when the miners' union confronts the most critical situation in its history. Nevertheless the machine, well oiled, rode on to its dangerous victory.

President Capellini of Anthracite District 1, brought down derisory jeers when he asserted Lewis did not want the raise and knew nothing of its proposal before the convention. President Fagan of western Pennsylvania wept because Lewis had to negotiate with operators' representatives getting fifty thousand a year. President Golden of Anthracite District Nine said Lewis had turned down a fifteen thousand dollar job as President of the John Mitchell Life Insurance Co., an alleged union outfit that profits from the anthracite workers.

Murray Wants His.

Fred Siders and Mike Marushock, Pennsylvania progressives, tackled the administration, but Vice-President Murray, who gets nine thousand dollars under the salary grab, fought for his share of the pork barrel by asking how miners seeking a raise from their bosses in the coming wage negotiations, could refuse a raise to their own officials!

From Fake Locals.

Ninety-one resolutions had been framed by the machine in favor of raising Lewis' salary to $15,000. Forty-three of them came from District 31, the dummy northern West Virginia district where every mine but one is non-union. There the Van Bittner machine had pushed through identical resolutions from dead locals in an effort to backfire. The progressives claim that international salaries, already princely, should be reduced rather than raised during this critical period in union history. Delegates were chuckling for the floor after (Continued on page 2)

CITES FACTS OF BETRAYAL OF 45,000 STRIKERS BY LEWIS MACHINE IN 1922

Charleroi, Pa., September 21, 1922

Mr. W. Z. Foster

Chicago Illinois.

Dear Friend Bill:

I was pleased to hear from you, and learn that you are still in the land of the living. I surely appreciate your interest in the battle I am engaged in for industrial freedom in the Connelsville Region where industrial slavery has been in existence for so long.

Bill it looks as though you have the right dope on this situation. and I as the only international organizer in the field. National Board Member O'Leary, and district Board Member Hynes along with two of the Pittsburg district organizers, make up the crew that are fighting this battle against the most powerful coal companies in the country. Our men are holding out remarkable. We are fighting with our backs to the wall. Without sufficient funds or help. I have appealed time and again for assistance, but to no avail. Five thousand miners and their families have been evicted from their homes, and fifteen thousand others have been served with eviction notices. Ten colonies are erected all over the region, and twenty-five hundred hired thugs and gunmen have been deputized by the Sheriff of Fayette County. Two-hundred State Police are scattered over the field. The jails are filled with striking miners. Six striking miners have been brutally murdered, and twenty-five others have been wounded. Hundreds more have been beaten up many of them crippled for life. Wholesale evictions are taking place every day. We need funds, and need them bad. Appeals have been sent all over the country for assistance by us, and upon this depends the very existence of the struggling men and women of the Connelsville Coke Region.

The recent settlement, by the district Officials of District #5 was a staggering blow to the miners of the Coke Region, more than signed for the large Hillman interests, in the old Pittsburg District and left out the Uneiyo mines of that company that we have organized solidly in the Connelsville field. This was the dominat blunder of the age. O'Leary and Hynes fought against this settlement, but the gang overwhelmed them. We were defeated by a special convention, and it will be some Convention. There will be Hell to pay. I find both International and District organizers throwing cold water on this very important situation. International Secretary William Green is the only National Official that has paid us a visit, notwithstanding that Vice-President Murray, who lives but forty miles from the seat of War cannot find time to visit our field. Still, I expect to be a candidate for district President, and believe me, there will be some fun. We have recieved the paltry sum of three thousand dollars from district 5-to help carry on the strike, with forty--five thousand men involved.

I must now draw to a close, for Gods sake if you can help us, do so, we need shelter food and clothing, children are without shoes, and unable to go to school. Wishing you every success, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

William Feeney

P.S. Bill I hope you are able to keep out of jail and that some of those so called Labor Leaders will take your place behind those Bars where they belong. Bill I am sweating tired and sick and disgusted at the treatment we are receiving I shall write you a long letter when we get it settled so we can look back on it as a vacation.

HIGH SPOTS IN WILLIAM FEENEY'S LETTER TO WILLIAM Z. FOSTER, WRITTEN AT THE TIME 17 COMMUNISTS WERE IN JAIL UNDER THE MICHIGAN CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM LAW

. . . IT LOOKS AS THOUGH YOU HAD THE RIGHT DOPE on this situation as I am the only international organizer in the field . . . We are fighting with our backs to the wall. Without sufficient funds or help . . . I have appealed time and again for assistance but to no avail. . . . THE RECENT SETTLEMENT . . . WAS A STAGGERING BLOW TO THE MINERS of the coke region, when they signed for the large Hillman interests . . . and LEFT OUT THE TWELVE MINES WE HAVE ORGANIZED SOLIDLY. . . . O'Leary and Hynes fought against the settlement BUT THE GANG OVERWHELMED THEM. . . . I find both INTERNATIONAL AND DISTRICT ORGANIZERS THROWING COLD WATER on this very important situation. . . . VICE-PRESIDENT MURRAY, WHO LIVES BUT FORTY MILES AWAY, CANNOT FIND TIME TO VISIT THE FIELD. . . .

FOR GOD'S SAKE IF YOU CAN HELP US, DO SO, WE NEED SHELTER, FOOD AND CLOTHING, CHILDREN ARE WITHOUT CLOTHES. . . . I hope . . . that some of THE SO-CALLED LABOR LEADERS WILL TAKE YOUR PLACE BEHIND THE BARS WHERE THEY BELONG. . . .

Some Questions For President Lewis to Answe

(1) $309,764.57 were expended for salaries and expenses of officers and organizers from June 1 to Dec. 1, 1926, according to the report submitted by Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy to this Convention.

His report also shows that from September to January of this year, the UMWA LOST 18,000 members, when coal production was at its high point due to the British strike shortage.

IN VIEW OF THESE FACTS, PRESIDENT LEWIS, PLEASE TELL THE MEMBERSHIP WHAT YOUR ORGANIZERS WERE DOING THEIR LAST SIX MONTHS.

(2) 273,307—119,854 in the anthracite, 153,453 in the bituminous fields—is the total dues paying membership of the UMWA shown by the secretary's convention report.

In 1924 the UMWA paid per capita tax to the American Federation of Labor on 402,700 members.

These figures show a net loss of 129,393 members since 1924.

From 1924 to 1927 the secretary's report shows that an average of more than $500,000 per year has been spent on salaries of officials and organizers, publicity, etc.

Sickened by Coldblooded Betrayal, Feeney Writes to Foster Pleading For Help

Says "Socalled Labor Leaders" Should Be "Behind the Bars, Where They Belong."

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

Vice President Phil Murray has charged in this convention and President Lewis and William Green have charged at other times that William Foster, William Dunne and other Communists were responsible for the loss of the strike in the Western Pennsylvania Connellsville field in 1922.

The proof that these officials lied is contained in the letter over the signature of William Feeney, international organizer, published on this page, placing the blame squarely on the Lewis machine.

FEENEY WROTE FOSTER

This letter was written to William Z. Foster in reply to a letter offering all possible assistance in the terrible struggle the miners and their families were waging at that time.

In response to appeals from this source and from the miners themselves, and in the absence of any kind of relief for the strikers after an agreement had been signed by the Lewis machine with the Hillman Company leaving the strikers to shift for themselves, Communist members of the trade unions in Pittsburgh took the initiative in organizing the Miners' Relief Committee. This committee, which was a non-partisan organization, raised money and collected food and clothing for the Connellsville strikers. It was practically their sole means of support and a public statement was made of all contributions received and expended.

Feeney is still on the Lewis payroll and he may find it convenient to deny that he wrote this letter. But his signature, and the note in his own handwriting make this impossible. The original is in a safe place and can be examined by anyone honestly desirous of convincing himself of its genuine character.

Just a few words in connection with the proof of the betrayal of the 45,000 miners in the coking coal fields. John L. Lewis, William Green and Philip Murray have, as part of their stock-in-trade which they peddle to the capitalist press and other enemies of labor in this country, with Ellis Searles, editor of the Mine Workers journal as their go-between, constantly accused Communists of defeating the miners in the coke fields.

LETTER EXPLAINS DEFEAT

Their purpose, to anyone who reads Feeney's letter, is obvious. They make their charges to cover up one of the most disgraceful incidents in the history of the American labor movement.

These officials deserted these brave men and women, who fought all thru the strike side by side with the union and continued the struggle for months after they had been betrayed, and then, to silence criticism inside the UMWA, have tried to blame the loss of the strike on the Communists who made house-to-house canvasses in the stronghold of the steel trust for relief of the miners, who threw into the relief campaign the whole strength of their party organization.

EXPOSE THEM!

Communists have learned the value of patience but patience ceases to be a virtue when it aids "so-called labor leaders" to hide their anti-labor policies and tactics from the membership of the union.

It was the desertion of the Connellsville miners that discredited the UMWA in the coke fields and in all of Western Pennsylvania—not the Communists. The Communists urged and still urge loyalty to the union but the miners reply: "The Lewis machine sold us out in 1922."

THERE ARE MORE DOCUMENTS!

We now ask President Lewis and his henchmen, in the name of all American union men and women who are sick to death of trickery and corruption in the labor movement:

What was your reward for leaving these 45,000 miners, their wives and families, to the mercy of the steel trust and its 2,500 gunmen and 200 State Cossacks in Fayette County?

Farrington has been driven from the union because certain documents proved his connection with the Peabody Coal Company.

But corruption and operators' influence in the UMWA have not vanished with Farrington.

There is still corruption and THERE ARE OTHER DOCUMENTS.

Feeney's letter is only one of many.

Fake delegations, slugging of progressive unionists and loud yelps about "Communist influence" do not answer adequately enough to satisfy workers, such documents as Feeney's letter to Foster.

ELLIS SEARLES

JOHN L. LEWIS' $25,000 BABY

By JAY LOVESTONE

The very bottom, the nadir, of fraud and terrorism to date employed by our reactionary labor leaders to dominate the trade unions is to be found in the sessions of the convention of the United Mine Workers of America now being held in Indianapolis.

The outstanding features of this convention coming at the most critical moment confronting the miners, are:

(1). An reckless padding of the convention with hundreds of delegates from like-sky, non-existent locals. In the case of district 31, West Virginia, the Lewis machine has packed there with delegates from practically every two tax-paying members. No wonder that there have come from this delegation more than a score of resolutions proposing that Lewis' official annual salary be doubled be raised to fifteen or twenty thousand dollars.

(2). Wholesale fraud in the recent election campaign in the union.

According to the official report made by Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy to the convention, there are now approximately 273,000 dues-paying members in the union. Lewis would have us believe that nearly 225,000 miners participated in the voting for international officers just closed. That so large a proportion of the total membership participated in the voting or that so big a total vote was cast is obviously impossible. It is just as obviously impossible and a fake that Lewis got as many votes as he claims. It is, of course, obviously impossible that Lewis has magnified Brophy's vote. Every miner knows that Lewis' generosity stops at John L. Lewis himself and goes no further. The fraud perpetrated by Lewis & Co. in re-electing themselves to office is plain and clear even to the blindest.

(4). An unrestrained use of force, violence and terrorism against the progressives.

The repeated cowardly assaults on Powers Hapgood, one of the most outstanding leaders of the progressives at the convention, in spite of the Lewis machine thugs.

(4). Widespread, wholesale disfranchisement of progressive delegates. Here the cases of Alexander Howat, Powers Hapgood and Pat Toohey stand out clearest as most flagrant types of such wanton recklessness by the reactionary machine against the most constructive elements in the union. In the cases of Howat and Hapgood the Lewis machine did not even amass enough guts to report their disfranchisement to the convention. That Lewis wouldn't take a chance even with his padded delegations in these instances is the best proof of the raw deal he is handing out.

(5). Flagrant misrepresentation, lying and bogey-raising in order to becloud the real, pressing issues before the union.

As usual, the threadbare bogey of Communism is being continuously dragged before the convention. Red scares galore are being manufactured by those labor lieutenants of American imperialism now infesting the U. M. W. of A. The sole purpose of this red-baiting is to misinform, mislead, cajole and terrorize the delegates so that they will not get wise to the black crimes committed by Lewis and Co., to the serious hardships to which this union-wrecking crew has forced the United Mine Workers of America.

But when Lewis' raises the red scares he lies, and he knows he lies.

Here are some facts which we challenge Lewis and Co. to disprove:

(1). In the late summer months of 1923 the Lewis machine published a series of articles supposed to be an exposure of "nefarious Communist activities."

(2). Ellis Searles, editor of the U. M. W. of A. Journal, bought these articles from a discredited representative of a notorious open-shop lobbying agency in Washington, D. C.

(3.) Ellis Searles contracted to pay for this open shop hunk $25,000 in good, cold cash coming out of the treasury of the United Mine Workers of America, coming out of the pockets of the hard - pressed, underpaid miners.

(4). When Lewis heard of Searles' agreement to buy this hunk at the fancy price of $25,000 he was as sore as a boiled pup. He knew that the whole "exposure" was a fraud from A to Z. Lewis, then, did not think that that stuff was worth so much cash.

(5). Lewis then rushed Van Bittner, one of his most trusted lackeys, to Washington with orders to have Searles call off the whole deal, with instructions not to invest such a big sum of money in such stinkpot lies, but to spend a much smaller sum for the same purpose.

(6). When Van Bittner arrived in Washington he found that Searles had already closed the deal and signed the contract with the discredited open shop lobbyist. Van Bittner had come too late to stop Searles from throwing into the sewer this sum of $25,000 belonging to the members of the miners' union. Mr. Searles had already signed and sealed the agreement to deliver to the open shop agent the $25,000 from the treasury of the United Mine Workers of America, for this ridiculous "red exposure."

(7). Van Bittner immediately reported this situation to his boss Mr. Lewis.

(8). Lewis was now faced with two accomplished facts. First, Searles had already bought and paid for this fake anti-Communist dope. Second, he himself knew and knew darned well that the whole "exposure" was worthless, unfounded and just plain rot. For instance, the open-shoppers' "revelations" charged that I had then just come back from Soviet Russia and brought more than a million dollars of Soviet gold in the United States. The fact is that it was not until nearly two years after this $25,000 "exposure" that I had been in Soviet Russia for the first time. Then, of course, it is unfortunately untrue that I never in my life saw or heard the slightest sign of this phantom Moscow million.

(9) Having been fooled into this very bad bargain through Searles' stupidity Lewis decided to make the best of it. Between repudiating open-shop lies against Communist and militant workers and making an unwarranted vicious attack against the Communists and progressives, Lewis, as was to be expected, choose to stand with the open shoppers. Lewis decided to use the open-shop brush which he all the time knew fully well to be a plain hash of lies. The columns of the U. M. W. of A. Journal were soon reeking with this anti-labor filth bought from the open shoppers for $25,000 of miners' money.

(10). Lewis, proclaiming his sincerity in the matter, then palmed off on the miners in particular and on the workers in general this open shop propaganda, tho he knew darned well that it was a fake from beginning to end.

MORAL:

(11) We maintain that in all these accusations against and denunciations of the Communists at this convention, Lewis and his black clique lie and they know they lie—just as they lied in September 1924 and knew they lied when they criminally squandered the mine workers' $250,000 on the lemon of an "exposure" of Communists, by an open shop agency.

(12) In 1923 the vicious open-shop attacks by Lewis and his ilky against some of our most loyal and militant workers, the Communists, cost the miners $25,000. Today, in 1927, such attacks by Lewis and his ily against the Communists and progressives are just as much inspired and supplied by open shop agencies as in 1923. But today such attacks are much more costly from every point of view to the union.

(13) Will some honest miner please tell Lewis in his swell hotel that he can only go back a chance on being slugged by the machine's thugs—and ask Mr. Lewis why he doesn't spend the union's money he is wasting on attacking militant workers to organize the unorganized. At the convention Mr. Lewis is talking so much about his interest in organizing West Virginia. Here is a chance for Mr. Lewis to show that he means what he says this time for a change.

But to expect anything constructive for the labor movement from Lewis and his henchmen is the worst of stupidity.

We challenge Mr. Lewis to deny the above facts.

Lewis dares not answer. He cannot answer.

We are hopeful. We are sure that the miners will yet find a way to clean Lewis and Co. out of their splendid fighting organization which has been and must militant traditions in the American trade union movement.

MASSES OF MINE WORKERS TO REPUDIATE LEWIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 30.—The miners' convention enters its second week here with fundamental problems as far from solution as ever. No program has been worked out for the organization of West Virginia, the key to the union's critical condition.

The Lewis gang with its fraudulent record of losing 200,000 members to the union in two years, has a firmer grip than ever on the machinery thanks to its stuffing of the convention with payroll delegates from dead or moribund locals. The progressives, with their practical program to save the union, have been savagely assaulted and beaten down by ruthless machine tactics.

Emperor Lewis has cut the heart out of the Miners' Union by banning the most militant elements from membership. In a black attack on the miners' best fighters, he has carried out the dictates of the National Civic Federation, the National Chamber of Commerce and their servants in the A. F. of L. bureaucracy.

What Emperor Lewis has ushered the rank and file into open warfare by depriving them of all voice in the union's financial affairs. From now on they are required to stand by while the administration plunders their pockets to build up Lewis' personal machine of a hundred organizers averaging $5,000 a year. Even such a cautious progressive as John Hindermarsh declares the miners will not tolerate such unlimited autocracy and will fight against it.

The fight in the mine workers has now crystallized itself into a struggle for democracy in the union against the dangerous centralization imposed by Emperor Lewis. The second struggle will be for more autonomy in the districts. The Miners' Union was great when it drew its strength from a score of powerful dynamic district organizations. Now with Lewis dominating every district with his own high-paid international representatives, undermining union strength, expelling left wingers and deliberately taking over entire districts which disagree with him, the Miners' Union is being sapped at its roots.

Progressives are rallying for a desperate fight to save the union from extinction in the central competitive field. They see that Lewis has succeeded in breaking the union in West Virginia and the south. Now they are witnessing his steady progress in weakening the union dangerously in Pennsylvania, with Ohio the next struggle to fall. During this week they will fight stubbornly and with all the resistance a powerful minority can exert to save the union.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—China views with suspicion the action of the powers, particularly Great Britain, in sending large detachments of troops to China to protect foreign lives, and, according to the Chinese officials of Shanghai, will not withdraw until the Nationalist government is overthrown. AFTER HIS TROOPS DOMINATE BY OVER TEN PER CENT. OF THE POPULATION, CHIANG KAI-SHEK, AT LAST ACCEPTS THE FACTS!

Communist OFFICIALS WHO BEAT UP HAPGOOD

Reactionary Appalled at Progressive Ideas

By JACK KENNEDY.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 30—Progressives may be slugged at will by Emperor Lewis' plug-uglies. Open assassination has been given them by Judge William Faust of the local bench.

He told three high administrative officials, who beat up Powers Hapgood last night in a hotel room Sunday before last, that they were justified. He dismissed all charges, including one against Joe Angelo for gun-toting, on the ground that murderous assaults on progressives are "internal union fights."

Patton and Turnbianer, Hapgood's other assailants, denounced him to the court as a radical and a friend of the Soviet Union. Hapgood in a 30 minute speech, told the court that in his world-wide tour of the mining industry, he had found that in Russia "alone do the coal diggers enjoy the six hour day, safety regulations and decent working conditions." The court jammed with interested spectators, listened with rapt attention to the young miner's comparison of American double shifts of children underground, of widespread unemployment, low wages and wretched working conditions with standards in the Soviet Union.

Judge Faust saw in Hapgood's speech only justification for the payrollers' charge that he was "preaching communism," and turning to them, commended them warmly for their "resentment." Evan Angelo, with a gun in his pocket when he attacked Hapgood, was freed although in many states assault under such circumstances results in penitentiary sentence.

Lewis Jams Thru His Policy of Expulsion

Bittner's plea for the salary grab when Emperor Lewis quelled the demonstration against him by introducing Green, former secretary of the miners' union.

Begs Operators to Be Fair.

Green denounced the violation of the Jacksonville agreement by the operators in West Virginia and Pennsylvania as the most glaring more of anarchy and disorder since the beginning of the Declaration of Independence. "We maintain our dignified position and honor our obligations," he added, and called upon the operators to do likewise. He restated the A. F. of L. position that workers' wages are dependent, not on their degree of organization, but on their willingness toward self exploitation through more intensive productivity and efficiency. He cautiously advocated a five day week when public opinion accepts it but failed to commit himself on the five-day week and six-hour day in the coal industry.

"Be Conservative."

Advising the anthracite miners to be satisfied with their watched five year agreement, Green passed on to a condemnation of Communism. "We will drive the Communists out of the needle trades in New York," he shouted, "just as the United Mine Workers will deal with them here. Hitherto they have carried the battle to us but I intend to reverse the order and carry the battle to them until they are wiped out of the labor movement. Administration delegates were worked to a frenzy by Green's melodramatic appeal for the extermination of the left wing. A howling turbulent mass rose to acclaim him. Adjournment followed with payrollers clustering on the platform to shake the big boy's hand.

Grab Succeeds.

After this, the fight went on. When the vote came, the opposition roar rose as loud as that of the administration, but in a demand for a roll call, the tellers counted only 262 votes, less than the required number. The salary grab became an accomplished fact.

Blame Late Secretary Of State Knox for Nicaragua Intervention

WASHINGTON (FP). — Scandal touched the name of the late Secretary of State Knox and Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, formerly stationed at Mexico City but accredited to Rome, when testimony as to the seizure of American armed intervention in Nicaragua in 1909 was given before the Senate foreign relations subcommittee on Jan. 26, by Thos. P. Moffatt.

Moffatt was American consul to Nicaragua when Knox was overthrowing liberal presidents and setting up Adolfo Diaz as dictator at the official record of the calling of American warships to the coast of Nicaragua to overawe the liberal majority. His name frequently appeared.

Moffatt, promoted to the Nicaraguan-American Mixed Claims Commission, was ousted by Franklin M. Gardner, a political henchman of Knox, secretary of legation at Managua and recently chief of the division of Mexican affairs in the state department.

Labor's Inactivity Ally of Employer Vengeance on Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE Massachusetts supreme court has taken the appeal of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti for a new trial under advisement. It promises to bring in a decision within a month.

Attorney William G. Thompson told Judge Webster Thayer, at Dedham, Mass., that the case is so simple it ought to be possible to reach a decision in five minutes. Thayer took several months to deny the new trial demanded. Now the state supreme court says it needs a month. For what? Perhaps to hand down another false, vicious document excusing the putting to death of these two militant workers.

Thompson brought before the supreme court of Massachusetts an array of additional facts to prove the frame-up against Sacco and Vanzetti. It was again shown that the prosecution in the name of the "commonwealth of Massachusetts," in league with the murder agents of the department of justice, did everything possible to hide all evidence that would tend to prove the innocence of these Italian workers. It is very evident that this "suppressed evidence" would have "wrecked the state's case," which is the big reason why the judicial wing of capitalism in Massachusetts is fighting so energetically against the granting of a new trial. It has succeeded for nearly seven years, during all of which time both Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered all the tortures of the capitalist dungeons in which they have been incarcerated.

In addition to the endless parade of witnesses who have already been marched before the Massachusetts courts, testifying to the innocence of both Sacco and Vanzetti and the baseless charges against them, there now comes a Pinkerton detective Henry Hellyer, now in the service of the Travellers Insurance Co. The Pinkertons are supposed to be the hardest boiled of them all. The Pinkertons were the first aggregation of human bloodhounds that open shop employers set upon trade unionists. They are a vile aggregation, shown to not only in the Moyer-Haywood-Petitbone case, when these officials of the Western Federation of Miners were placed on trial for their lives in Idaho, but in many a labor struggle in many sections of the land. They introduced spies into the trade unions on a large scale to disrupt and destroy the unity of the workers.

This Pinkerton was loyal to the traditions of the private detective agency he serves in helping to "frame" Sacco and Vanzetti. Every fact, every word that might help to save the lives of these workers was carefully concealed. Some of these facts are now coming to light after more than six years. Some of the truth that was concealed, as brought out by Attorney Thompson before the Massachusetts supreme court, was as follows:

That several of the government's identification witnesses in his (Hellyer, the Pinkerton) presence had previously identified a certain criminal as the man they afterward identified as Sacco.

That two women brought by him (Hellyer) to the district attorney not only had declined to identify Sacco and Vanzetti, but had given a description of the driver of the murder car absolutely excluding the possibility that it was Vanzetti, as claimed by the district attorney.

"That Captain Harry Procter (then head of the state police) had informed the district attorney the crime was committed by professional criminals and that in his opinion Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent."

The "professional criminals" mentioned, the court was advised, were members of the infamous Morelli gang of Providence, Rhode Island.

These facts are sufficient in themselves to reveal the real nature of the frame-up against Sacco and Vanzetti that has the approval of the Coolidge regime in Washington in that the capitalist government refuses, thru its attorney-general, John Garibaldi Sargent, to reveal the contents of files of the department of justice containing all the facts damning this case as one of the worst frame-ups in the whole history of the employers' war against the working class.

I have never seen Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, who has just sentenced nearly a score of garment strikers to jail and prison. But I imagine he is the same type of employers' judicial lackey as Judge Thayer up at Dedham, Massachusetts. Rosalsky does the dirty work of clothing bosses, while Thayer is the lickspittle of the shoe and textile barons, both just as servile and slimy. There is no doubt that there are Rosalskys on the Massachusetts supreme court bench. They wouldn't be there if they were not the obedient creatures of the master class.

It is claimed that this offal of humanity, clothed with the authority of the capitalist law, has a so-called "code of honor." Attorney Thompson, in reviewing the nature of the frame-up, advised the Massachusetts high court that:

"The canon of the American Bar Association is plain on this point. It reads, 'The primary duty of a lawyer engaged in public prosecution is not to convict, but to see that justice is done. Suppressing facts or secreting evidence which might be of assistance to the accused is highly reprehensible.'"

But that is evidently intended merely for consumption by the gullible. It doesn't apply to workers, whether defendants before Thayer, in Massachusetts, the unspeakable Rosalsky, in New York, or the infamous "Dennie Sullivan, in Chicago. For workers there is only one question on the lips of the capitalist courts and that is, "How can they be railroaded the quickest and easiest to jail, to prison or the death chair?"

Assistant District Attorney Dudley P. Ranney, who seeks the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, declares that use of underhand methods by the police are necessary and justifiable "as one way of disposing of radicals who they could not deport." There speaks the capitalist "justice" that is seeking to murder our two comrades.

When the working class begins to realize this condition under the capitalist system, then there will be hope for Sacco and Vanzetti, thru the aroused mass protest of labor, and for the prisoners of the class war here in New York and in other sections of the country. If it is not aroused in time Sacco and Vanzetti will die, the victims alike of working class inactivity as well as ruling class determination to rid itself, even by judicial murder of its most courageous foes.

CONVENTION SIDELIGHTS

No free speech in the Miners' Journal. This is the ukase of the Lewish crowd. A mild resolution asking journal space for discussion of political and economic ideas held by the minority was condemning the paper's practice of chucking critical letters into the waste basket was defeated. John W. Hindmarsh denounced the policy of the journal as so exclusively Lewis organ, containing long eulogies in the recent campaign while Brophy was unable to get the simplest statement in its pages. On the other hand Lewis extolled editor Ellis Searles of red scare fame as a Christian gentleman and a man of high ideals and unsullied character.

Lewis snorted against requests from the anthracite miners that the international enforce the check-off clause in the 1926 agreement. It's a dead letter, they claim.

The resolutions committee substituted a pious expression of opposition to child labor in place of a vigorous demand for an anti-child labor appropriation in the union to carry on unremitting warfare against the curse.

The machine permitted the demand that Dominick Venturato and Charlie Cialini, case war prisoners in Moundsville penitentiary, West Virginia, be freed. The resolution passed unanimously.

The international executive board will consider the request of Indiana strip miners for special representation on the board.

A modest request that the anthracite agreement of 1926 be allowed to come on the floor for discussion was— Well, you know what the Lewis crowd would do about that!

• • •

President Sigman of the International Ladies Garment Workers sent warm fraternal greetings to Emperor Lewis. Two of a feather!

Reports of delegates to the International Miners Federation congress as revive the wretched conditions in Europe, and the superior conditions here due to the "inspired leadership of that great citizen and labor leader, John L. Le. . . . etc."

• • •

The United Mine Workers officials have created a united front with the Fraternal Order of Moose for old age pensions. The committee "reported progress."

President Fishwick of Illinois is a frank sort of fellow. Says he: "What God damn it anyway, there isn't any veteran's or immortality anywhere. Why expect it in the Miners Journal?" Frank Borch, retaliated by asking what's the use of holding the convention. Sh. Fi. that's no use—keep the Journal. The next step is no free speech in the convention, already partially achieved, he declared.

Vice-president Philip Murray read the Coal Miner, the left wing paper in the Illinois Union. He talked for a half an hour, recounting how "a certain individual of a so and so organization" got Frank Keeney fired from it. He professed to see horns on Albert Coyle, editor of the Labor Age Review Journal and Wm. Z. Foster Smith, a labor editor, in connection with the Coal Miner.

Lewis gave delegates a breathing spell by reading a 2,500 word statement on the unfair freight rate structure which favors non-union fields against the union districts. He charged the Interstate Commerce Commission with favoritism to railroads. Progress who, twice, and why, he did not explain.

KELLOGG OFFERS CHINESE PARLEY; NOT RECOGNITION

Borah Approves New Nationalistic Spirit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. — Conflicting reports are current here as to the exact meaning of Kellogg's memorandum on the Chinese situation. Kellogg speaks of being willing to negotiate with representatives of the various factions, knowing quite well that oil and water mix better than could the elements supporting Chang Tso Lin, the former Manchurian bandit and the revolutionary Cantonese forces through the kuomintang party.

No Encouragement.

Kellogg refuses to recognize the Cantonese government which controls over two-thirds of China, the only power that is capable of unifying the nation. Despite the outward appearance of friendliness to China these characterizes the document, the fact remains that Kellogg offers no practical encouragement to the Chinese revolutionists outside of his refusal to make a united front with Great Britain in crushing the movement.

Withdrawal of Warships.

At the same time it is reported that the state department is in full agreement with Senator Borah's demand that the United States withdraw its warships from Chinese waters and that Americans leave China at once.

One excuse given by the state department for its refusal to recognize the Cantonese government is the fear that the northern forces would then begin to commit outrages on Americans.

Coming Into Their Own.

"The most magnificent scene in the world is to see a great people, after years of turmoil and strife and oppression by outside powers coming into their own," said Borah. "The nationalistic spirit, in my judgment, is uniting these people and I look to see them ultimately accomplish their complete redemption as a great power and take their rightful place among the family of nations. I thoroughly sympathize with what they are doing.

"But I see every indication upon the part of the Chinese at the present time to protect the lives and property of foreigners to the utmost of their ability. The only thing, which, in my judgment, will change that program will be a revolution in which the sending of troops and marines to China with a view of crushing this spirit through."

Entitled To Tariff Autonomy.

"China is entitled to be rid of the old entangled, unjust and one lateral treaties. She is entitled to enjoy tariff autonomy. She is entitled in my opinion to the exercise of extraterritorial rights. I venture to express the belief that she will achieve these things. If the nations do not assist, do not voluntarily aid in bringing it about they will likely see the same thing accomplished through the decree of the Chinese people.

"The United States should not hesitate to announce her own policy, if it be necessary to do so. Our interest and the interest of justice demand a free and disemballed China and our policy should look to that achievement."

A message from Calcutta announced that the second battalion of the Durham light infantry sailed from there today for Shanghai.

Girl Textile Workers Display Solidarity

CARBONDALE, Pa., (FP). — Twenty girls who have been working overtime for the Carbondale Mills, Inc., won a two-day strike for reinstatement of a girl worker discharged when family illness called her home. The girl strikers resisted efforts of a company agent to bring them back until their fellow worker was admitted. They complained that their load had been working beyond the legal limit of hours. A town police officer is credited with mediating the dispute between the girls and the silk goods manufacturer.

...IS SUPPLIED BY BANKERS' RULE

Wheeler Makes Stinging Attack on Kellogg

WASHINGTON— (FP) —In a speech filled with stinging reproof to President Coolidge and the State Department for their hypocrisy in "getting the sovereignty of Nicaragua", Sen. Wheeler of Montana, exposed on Jan. 30 the bitter bondage to which American policy has reduced this little republic.

He dealt with the wholesale graft that has marked the banker-State Department domination of Nicaragua for the past 17 years. Cost of operating the national railroad, for instance, increased from $50,000 a year to $700,000 a year, while the property rusted and rotted away. Customs duties doubled. Every strategic post, fiscal and military, he said, is in the hands of State Department appointees. And the figures quoted by President Coolidge to prove that Nicaragua had reduced her debt under the bankar-marine protectorate, he showed, were utterly false.

Wheeler quoted the Baltimore Sun's suggestion that the time has come to "make an end to mealy-mouthed talk about not ambarrassing the President and upholding the diplomatic arm".

Rule of Bankers.

"I think", said the Montana Senator, "that every American who loves his country should be interested in the tactics of this administration and some past administrations in their attempts to force upon our sister republics the rule of a few bankars in New York.

"Who is there in this body who is not ashamed of the treatment we have accorded to Haiti and Santo Domingo? The Senate has an opportunity to do the people of this country a great service; an opportunity to expose all the considerations involved in this question and know which if not decided directly here and now, will mean war with all its hellish consequences.

"While we wait out of deference to the President, brave-spirited men are being killed in Nicaragua because they resist tyranny just as our forefathers resisted it in 1776. Other men are dying because armed forces of the United States have established a blockade which ,even shut off medical supplies; and, while we wait, certain banking interests are working day and night to force a war with Mexico. If one drop of American blood is shed in Nicaragua, it will forever be a stain upon the hands of this administration. The people of this country want no war with Mexico".

Kellogg Has The Creeps.

Wheeler explained Sec'y Kellogg's pretense that Mexico is spreading bolshevism in Nicaragua by reminding the Senate that "a coup d'etat took place out in Minnesota some years ago when Governor Ferguson took part in it, and ever since that coup d'etat, which elevated Mr. Kellogg to the position of Secretary of State, he has been on the warpath under every sagebush throughout the entire length and breadth of this continent." This reference to the defeat of Kellogg for re-election to the Senate, in 1922, was greeted with laughter.

Proof was presented by Wheeler that a Chamorrist paper in Nicaragua quoted the American minister, Dennis, as pledging the support of the American government to Adolfo Diaz, 17 days before Chamorro carried out the "election" of Diaz as president of the militarist government at Managua last November.

Argentina Senator Denounces Landing of Troops In Nicaragua

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 30.—Senator Justo, leader of the socialist group in the senate last night branded the landing of United States troops in Nicaragua as "imeprerisms and antidemocratic" and offered a motion asking for all information in the government's hands on the situation in Nicaragua.

Senator Justo's motion was referred to the committee of constitutional business for study.

Justo cautioned the people of Argentine of allowing themselves to become the prey of the Wall Street eagles by allowing heir natural riches to fall into the bankers' hands. Ayvor Angler, a radical and other senators supported Justo, declaring that the Argentina should prepare herself against action by the United States government similar to that taken in Nicaragua.

MEXICAN ENVOY IS LEAVING FOR UNITED STATES

Will Discuss Financial and Political Matters

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 30.—Fresh from a series of conferences with President Calles and taking final personal instructions relative to how far the Mexican government is prepared to go for the purpose of adjusting the differences with Washington, Alberto Pani, minister of finance and former foreign minister, is slated to leave within a few days on a combined diplomatic and financial mission to the United States.

Los Angeles, New York and Washington are included in the itinerary of Mexico's governmental financier whose visit to the United States is expected to have a most decisive bearing not only on the republic's internal affairs, but also on the relations between Washington and Mexico City.

To Talk To Bankers.

As the representative of President Calles, relative to Mexico's program which involves the widely discussed project for arbitrating international differences. Pani will be in a position to discuss frankly with American financiers in New York and politicians in Washington his country's situation and what course of action should be pursued for the solution of its problems, internal and international.

To Confer With Obregon.

While in the southwest, Pani is expected to confer with former president Obregon in whose cabinet he served as foreign minister.

After leaving his family in Los Angeles, Pani will proceed to the Atlantic coast for a conference with New York bankers.

Pani was originally slated to be Mexican minister to Paris after leaving his present cabinet position, but as the result of developments in recent weeks, he is proceeding first to the United States for negotiations, after which he will probably return to Mexico City to report on the results he has achieved.

THE LEFT WING PROTESTS

Bonafide Delegates Wild About Plan for Salary Grab; Dilution of Constitution; Barring of Howat

By WM. F. DUNNE

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 30.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor was brought into the Miners Convention here this afternoon to stave off threatened defeat of the gang's proposal to raise John L. Lewis' salary to twelve thousand dollars a year.

Fought to a standstile by indignant delegates yesterday on the proposal to give Lewis unlimited power to levy assessments on the members, the administration advanced today to push through the big salary grab.

Green's entry was staged for the salary fight. The machine postponed convening for an hour this morning and rushed adjournment extra early, convening late in the afternoon to time the new constitutional amendment with Green's arrival. John Hindmarsh was in the midst of a slashing attack on the proposition to raise the emperor's salary while West Virginia miners were begging for enough to eat when Green entered. "The president's salary is now four times as great as the average miners wage," he resumed. "Why increase it now fifty per cent just when the officials are pleading the need for more money by unlimited assessments for strike relieve?

This action means war in the ranks of the mine workers. The rank and file will not tolerate this concentration of autocratic authority and enormous wage increases."

Just as Van Bittner concluded at appeal for the $12,000 salary on the ground of Lewis' "wonderful record achievement," Green was given floor.

"You will make no mistake if follow your leaders," he decl. "Why do you believe they would tray you? Why do you distrust th. They should not be abused, the been enough of that."

Green urged a war on the left wi in preparation for the big battle tomorrow to expel all members of th Workers' Party from the union.

LEFT WING SEES SIGMAN SELLING OUT TO JOBBERS

Demands He Make Known Real Agreement

Information that a sell-out to the dress jobbers as disastrous to the interests of the workers as the sell-out to the sub-manufacturers which Morris Sigman is now hastily attempting to camouflage, has been accomplished by the International, was received by left wing leaders today.

Challenging Sigman to publish the agreement with both jobbers and submanufacturers in full, C. S. Zimmerman, manager of the dress division in the Joint Board, charged that Sigman as given away to the jobbers two provisions of the old agreement so that this agreement virtually sanctions the open shop.

Yielding To Boss.

He declared that according to the agreement recently negotiated. Jobbers who gave out work to non-union shops would not be fined, as heretofore, and that non-union shops would be permitted to finish whatever work they had begun, whereas the union has had power to force its discontinuance at any process.

"These two changes in the old agreement make it plain that Sigman was not telling the truth when he declared in his meeting on Wednesday that the agreement with the jobbers had not been changed," Zimmerman said.

Fooling Workers.

"In the same way he is attempting to fool the workers as to the provisions of the agreement he has made with the manufacturers. He does not announce what is a fact, that he has given up to the employers the extra pay for legal holidays that fall on Saturday and that the guaranteed minimum wage scales for piece workers have been practically abolished. These facts he keeps from the workers. He tries to make them think he has won a victory in a provision that piece workers do not have to finish a garment until the price has been settled, while all piece workers know that this was a provision of the agreement for many years.

By careful phrasing which he hopes the workers will not understand, he tries to hide the fact that the trial period of one week has been extended to two weeks. The "mutual consent of the worker and the employer to extend the trial period" is necessary, but where is the worker out of a job who will not consent to lengthening his trial period if the employer demands it? The abolishing of the labor bureau is another concession granted to the employers by Mr. Sigman.

Demands Full Text.

"After all these evasions and attempts at concealment on the part of Mr. Sigman of the agreements he has made, the workers are unable to believe that the real truth about the agreements has been found out yet. We challenge Mr. Sigman to publish the real agreements in full details."

New Cabinet to Bring Kaiser Closer Throne

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Reports are circulated here, that the ex-kaiser, now an exile at Doorn, Hooland, is only awaiting the installment of the new cabinet by Chancellor Marx, to prepare for his return to Germany. It is expected that such a move would not be opposed by the president, Marshal Hindenburg, but that it would cause considerable turmoil among the republicans. The Communists vigorously oppose everything leading towards restoration. The new Marx cabinet is to be made up mostly of ...ts and ...

SORKIN CROWD INTRIGUE WITH NEWARK BOSSES

But Fail to Oust Left Wing of Furriers

(Special To The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 30.—Unsuccessful in their attempt last Thursday, to take over Local 25, of the Fur Workers' Union, with the assistance of the Hall police force the right wing controlled general executive board of the Furriers union, yesterday adopted a new method of attack.

Stab In The Back.

It sent a letter to the local bosses' association known as the Consolidated Dressing Corp. instructing them not to recognize the regularly elected officials of the local union.

When business agent M. Langer, who is the right wingers were not able to oust, heard about the letter move on the part of Sachtman, Sorkin and Co., he immediately called up three of the largest shops in town and asked them what action they would take on the matter.

Boss Yields.

At first, they said they would not recognize the left wing officials, who have the support of the overwhelming majority of the members of the union, but when Langer told them that if that was their opinion, he would call strikes in their shops, to show the actual feelings of the workers.

The bosses then retreated and up to the present time the left wing administration is still carrying out all the work of the organization.

3,000 Attend the Lenin Memorial Meetings in Detroit

(By A Worker Correspondent.)

DETROIT, Mich.—Over 3,000 workers attended the two emergency Lenin memorial meetings here as a fitting answer to the efforts of the military authorities to stop the Lenin demonstration by cancelling the armory a week before the first meeting was scheduled. The Workers' Home and the Finnish Labor Temple were packed to the limit and hundreds of workers were turned away by the police who would not permit the sale of any more tickets.

The Workers Home meeting was opened by B. Baker, the district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party with the entire audience rising in silence to the memory of the working class fighter all over the world while the orchestra played the Revolutionary Funeral March, during this time the huge portrait of Lenin, decked for this occasion, was unveiled. The Young Pioneers and the Ukrainian Workers Chorus sang revolutionary songs at this meeting. Rebecca Grecht, the well known Communist speaker and organizer was introduced as the first speaker and was followed by the representative of the Young Workers (Communist) League Comrade Walter Trumbul. Wm. Z. Foster, the principal speaker, was received with an enthusiastic ovation which prevailed throughout the meeting. Foster spoke of the far reaching influence of Leninism among the workers in the capitalist countries and the oppressed peoples of China, Nicaragua, Mexico and other oppressed nationalities. The meeting was closed with the entire audience singing the Internationale.

The Finnish Hall Meeting.

Simultaneously with the above meeting a huge demonstration was being held in the Finnish Labor Temple presided by Wm. Bergstrom. An hour before the opening hour the hall was filled to capacity and hundreds of workers were turned away. The Finnish Workers band, the Finish Workers' chorus and John Anderson, tenor, furnished the revolutionary musical program at this meeting with the Young Pioneer Chorus as the outstanding attraction. Wm. Z. Foster, Rebecca Grecht and Walter Trumbul spoke at this meeting also.

Shock Utah Professors When Harvard Speaker Found To Be Weisbord

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 30.—Albert Weisbord, invaded by capitalist stronghold when he appealed to the students of the University of Utah to join the workers in the class struggle.

University officials were busy today apologizing for Weisbord's revolutionary speech, which has aroused the ire of Salt Lake City's Babbits. President Thomas expected a "respectable" Harvard Law School graduate, when he granted permission to the liberal students of the university to hold a forum in one of the class rooms. "While the university believes in free speech," President Thomas said, "it certainly is opposed to the discussion of direct action in any form."

VICE PRESIDENT OF CAPMAKERS JOINS BOSSES

Chicago Local Demands His Resignation

CHICAGO, Ill. Jan. 30.—At the last meeting of the Capmakers Union, Local 5, it was officially announced that the general organizer of the western states, and member of the general executive board of the international union, Percy Ginsberg, had resigned from his position with the union, and accepted a position with the manufacturers' association. Hereafter he will be their official representative and general manager.

Rumors have been current for quite a while, that Ginsberg had connections with the bosses, and many previous demands had been made for his resignation. Yet because he was officially the manager of the district, no action could be brought to bear against him. His resignation will be considered at the next meeting of the board.

Already before the 1926 convention of the A. F. of L., the general executives had information, which should have barred Ginsberg from being eligible to go to Detroit. Nevertheless, he was endorsed as their regular elected delegate.

Ginsberg later became so bold in his connections with the bosses, that the executive board was compelled to take action. A motion was carried, to demand his resignation

Re-elect Building Council Officials

CHICAGO, (FP.)—Recognition of the success with which the Landis attempt to smash the building trades unions has been conquered is seen in the re-election of President F. P. Sullivan and Secretary J. J. Conroy of the Chicago building trades council for 3-year terms.

Their principal achievement was the signing of an agreement with the leading Chicago contractors eliminating non-union work on all their jobs in departments where union craftsmen are affiliated with the council. This covers practically every craft except the carpenters.

Two Children Drown.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Two children are dead today from drowning despite the heroic efforts of a set dog to drag them from the water. Kenneth Lorell, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lorell, of Chemung, and Bobby Shaw, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Shaw, of Chemung, were playing beside Wynkoop Creek when they tumbled into the water. The bodies were found after Mrs. Lorell saw the dog, dripping wet, barking excitedly on the bank.

To Be Resurrected to Rescue "Senator" Save Insull Senator

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Frank L. Smith, hero in Illinois of the Reed investigating committee exposures of traction money spent in the Republican primaries and harred on that account from the seat to which he was elected, is contemplating a comeback.

According to those close to the "senator," the campaign will start in Illinois, where Sam Insull, the traction magnate is a power, and will be twofold. First, Smith will run in the primaries again, next April. Money is as good this year as last, and Smith has his hopes.

State Rights Again.

Second, Governor Len Small, his supporter, will appeal to the governors of the several states, for a united front in favor of "state rights" to send any man they please to the Senate, without having him passed upon by those already in "the most exclusive club in America."

Smith, so his friends say, will also bring a hundred witnesses to harp ever tribunal the Senate establishes for his trial, if and when it ever does that.

$900 a Year Pre-War Money for Government Employes; Ask Raise

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Pending with congress to pass their bill establishing a minimum wage for federal employes at $1,500 a year, the National Federation of Federal Employes explains that this means only $900 as measured in the purchasing power of pre-war money.

Luther Steward, president of the national organization, showed that more than 20 percent of the federal workers quit their jobs each year, and he points to the source of trouble. It lies in the failure of the civil service classification board to carry out the duty of wage-adjustment with which congress invested it in Sec. 12 of the classification law. Congress authorized the board to study and report to congress its conclusions as to just and reasonable readjustment of horate of pay for federal workers. The board has done nothing, although the cost of living has steadily increased, and many classes of workers have complained of under-payment. Now the union calls upon congress to take action without permitting further sabotage by the classification board.

Steward told the house civil service committee that the 217 locals of his union stand squarely behind the Welch (California) bill which would fix $1,800 as the minimum pay for full time work by adult employes.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—Former minister of war Geseler today resigned from the democratic party in protest against his party's opposition to his accepting a portfolio in the new Marx cabinet.

LEGAL MURDER IS CHARGE OF SACCO, VANZETTI LAWYER

Court Amazed at Story Of Police Frame-Up

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 30.—"Murder itself," is the term applied by Sacco and Vanzetti's counsel, William C. Thompson, to the activities of the department of justice and the Massachusetts district attorney, in their efforts to convict the two Italian workers whose case is now in the hands of the Massachusetts Supreme Court here.

During the hearing before the court on Judge Thayer's denial of a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, the judges and a throng of distinguished people in the court room, were startled by the frank statement of Assistant District Attorney Dudley P. Ranney, that the stool-pigeon methods that had been practiced in this case, and the cooperation of the United States and local state police authorities in suppressing evidence was "one way of disposing of radicals they could not deport."

"Justice Exposed"

Ranney justified placing a spy in the cell next to Sacco and Lopez to get some information that could be used to send him to the electric chair. The district attorney also justified withholding parts of certain detectives' reports which would have proved the state's star witnesses unreliable and would have presented information helpful to Sacco and Vanzetti.

The hearing before the State Supreme Court lasted several days and is the final attempt to gain a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti who have been living in the shadow of the gallows for the past five years. There have been many other pleas for a new trial as more and more new evidence was unearthed, and following the presenting of affidavits concerning the activities of the department of justice in the case, Judge Thayer, who had presided at the trial of these workers, was again appealed to several months ago for a new trial.

Judge Hostile

His evident prejudice in the case has been evident from the very beginning of the trial at which the two were convicted, and it had been shown during each hearing on the plea for a new trial. But it was not until his death early in the month of July last September, that certain prominent citizens of Boston and one reputable newspaper became aware of his violently hostile attitude. His death was followed by wide spread denunciation of his action, and this led to an unusual interest in the appeal now heard by the State Supreme Court.

The hearing was concluded on Saturday, and the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti rests in the hands of the judges. It may be weeks or months before they announce whether they or is or is not to be a new trial granted. If it is refused, the two will be sentenced by Judge Thayer and there is not the slightest doubt that he will sentence them to death as he has been trying to do for so long.

Workers Persecuted

In closing his argument before the court on Saturday, William C. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, referring to the actions of the police authorities said:

"If this is supposed to be justice, a far deal, we show very little trust and confidence in our own government, and we go far toward justifying those who say it is a sham and ought to be abolished. If citizens of respectability here in these men's places, and anything had been done to them such as was done to these men at their trial, the court would be quick to remedy it. I can hardly believe that it is legitimate cooperation for the department of justice to send two miserable aliens out of the world by way of the electric chair when they found they could not legally send them out of the country."

"That's murder itself."

Boston Workers School Asks Lithuanians and Italians to New Class

BOSTON, Mass. — The Boston Workers School announces the opening of another English class to be held in South Boston for the Lithuanian and Italian comrades of that district. The class will meet Monday night, January 31st at 8 p. m. with Comrade Phyllis Feingston in room 1 of the Lithuanian Citizen Club, 376 Broadway, South Boston, Mass.

The charge will be $1.00 for the course. Those who have not yet registered may do so at the first session.

Aircraft Shipments Barred.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 — Shipment of aircraft, either military or non-military, to Mexico, was prohibited today in an order issued to customs collectors, unless the shippers have a special export license from the state department. Previously, non-military aircraft exported without license. The state department ordered a change in the policy.

CURRENT EVENTS

sponsible for the May Day raids in Pittsburgh in 1923. Documents that came into Dunn's possession prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that John L. Lewis conspired with local Pennsylvania authorities and with the local representatives to have the raids made, which resulted in hundreds of workers being arrested and jailed. That a labor leader, no matter how reactionary, should stoop so low as to turn stoolpigeon and anti-radical bloodhound is almost incredible, but it is a fact. And Lewis is only one of many.

THE New Leader, weekly organ of the weak socialist party, is now out with the cost of the bureaucratic wolf pack calling for the suppression of the Communists at all costs. According to a capitalist paper, the reactionaries do not expect success in their efforts to drive the Communists out of the unions, so they are planning to use the federal government to crush the radical movement as Lewis used the government of the state of Pennsylvania in 1923. One would think that the socialists would, even if only for the sake of appearances, stop short of becoming an open government agency. But once renegade radicals set their feet on the slippery downward trask, there is no stopping this side of the enemy's camp.

WHILE Calvin Coolidge is slaying the dragon of "militarism" in his fight to block the congressional move for the building of three cruisers, he is dispatching warships and marines to China, threatening war on Mexico and occupying Nicaraguan territory. This Jekyll-Hyde policy will no doubt give Oswald Garrison Villard and other complacent liberals the opportunity to congratulate the president once more. Coolidge is simply of the opinion that Wall Street has enough warships just now to answer its requirements. On the other hand, the steel manufacturers and shipbuilders want to make a few more dollars.

American Indian Fights Deportation Order; May Set Precedent In Case

PHILADELPHIA (FP).—An American Indian, a citizen of the territorial boundaries of the United States always and subject to federal jurisdiction, was ordered by Judge Dickinson of the U. S. district court has this question to answer in the case of Paul Diabo, structural ironworker of North American Indian tribe, in dian born on a reservation in Quebec, Canada. He was deported from the United States last March, but was induced by Six Nations, the federation of North American Indian tribes, to return and fight the case with the organizations and

In taking the case under advisement Judge Dickinson indicated that he held the U. S. district attorney had to bear the burden of proof that an American Indian might be an alien. The judge stated, after the district attorney's argument, that the country is the Indian's as much or that of its present inhabitants and that the Indians are technically wards of the government. Six Nations takes the stand that the deportation of an American Indian from the United States is a breach of the Jay treaty.

Young Workers Raise Slogan of Withdrawing Forces From Nicaragua

By MEHRLICH.

Young workers must organize and stop war between Mexico and the United States. Militarism is an inevitable phenomenon of capitalism and constitutes one of the strongest and most important branches in prolonging the domination of capital.

Latest events in Nicaragua and Mexico are of utmost importance to the American young workers, for it will be the youth that will be called upon to shed its blood in order to continue the hegemony of Wall Street in Central America and Mexico.

Borah Calls It Invasion.

Senator William Borah during the first outburst of enthusiasm which has now died down declared efforts are being made to get this country into a shameless cowardly war with Mexico.

The invasion of American marines in Nicaragua and the colonization of the capitalist press pertaining to the Mexican controversy show clearly that the American government (agent of Wall Street) will do all in it's power to protect Doheny Sinclair and Standard Oil interests.

Young Would Be Soldiers.

There is only one power than can stop this war; that power is the American working class. The young workers are most immediately involved. You must raise the cry everywhere to stop this war. We refuse to shed our blood and murder workers of other countries in order to strength the enemies of labor.

The Young Workers League raises slogan "Withdrawal of marines from Nicaragua. No War with Mexico."

The young workers of the United States greet the peasants and workers of Mexico and Nicaragua and unite with them in the fight to overthrow the yoke of American imperialism. Join the Young Workers League and say with us, "Down with American imperialism."

Duluth Young Workers In Fine Lenin Meeting Despite Difficulties

Quite a successful Lenin-Liebknecht memorial meeting was held in Duluth on Jan. 23, under the auspices of the Young Workers League. Comrade Sam Polsersky, secretary of the league, spoke of the life of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, and explained the role of the Y. W. L. in the working class struggle.

Comrade Jay Lovestone, who had been scheduled to be the main speaker, was delayed, and in his absence, our district organizer, Comrade Tallentire, made a speech, in which he explained the work and contribution of Lenin toward the world revolution, and to the Russian revolution in particular. This words were well received and were interrupted many times with cheers and applause.

After the speech a substantial collection was taken. In general the meeting was very successful, and showed that the time is here to build a still stronger and larger membership of the party and the league in Duluth.—Sam Polsersky.

Passaic Strikers Wait Long Time for Postponed Hearing

PASSAIC, N. J., Jan. 30. In their celebration of the first anniversary of the biggest textile strike Passaic has ever had, the textile strikers did not forget their brothers incarcerated in jail since last September.

A delegation, consisting of Mrs. Tom and Katherine Toth, mother and sister of one of the prisoners, Fannie Rudkovitz, of the Relief Office, Hollace Randell, secretary of the Joint Committee for Passaic Defense, William Sroka, John L. Kovacs and Cyril Briggs, strike publicity director, called on the four prisoners in the Bergen county jail at Hackensack yesterday. The prisoners are as follows: Thomas Regan, held in $15,000 bail, Adolf Wisnefski, $15,000; Joseph Tuth, $15,000; and Paul Kovoc, $15,000. Kovacs is the one who suffered three broken ribs in the third degree ordeal to which the men were subjected at the time of their arrest. He recently went out of his mind as a result, it is alleged of the torture inflicted upon him.

While the state seems determined to keep these men cooped up in jail it is evidently in no hurry to give them a trial. Dates have been set several times for trial and as often postponed. In the meantime, the authorities continued to make it difficult to furnish bail for the men by their refusal to accept any but cash bail.

Date Set for Trial of Baking Magnate's Son Who Killed Sailor

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Federal Judge Rinds Coxe set Feb. 7th as the date for the trial of the $35,000 damage suit against Walter S. Ward, brought by Mrs. and Mrs. Eldridge O. Peters, parents of Florence Peters, who was slain by Ward.

Ward sent letters to guests in Westchester county in 1922. Tried, he was acquitted.

Last June Ward disappeared, but a few days ago he turned up at Nogales, and was arrested. Reconciliation with his father, the former baking magnate, both are now in Havana. Young Ward determined to reside there permanently, despite the fact that he is outside the states, the trial of the suit will progress at the date

Gold, Strikeleader, Calls For a Showdown

It is a great satisfaction to know that there is in the United States at least one daily newspaper in the English language that has its columns open for real labor news and that champions the cause of the workers in their daily struggles with the employers for a decent livelihood.

The enemies of the working class are powerful. Their strength lies in the control of the means of production which they maintain through their control of the governmental agencies, and control of the schools, colleges and press. They thus enslave the workers not only economically but also mentally.

But the workers' revolt against their enslavement is growing, and cannot be stopped by the direct agencies of the capitalist class. The ruling class therefore resorts to the control of the workers' organizations—trade unions; the ruling class seeks to control trade union leaders. To a great extent the employers have succeeded in this direction. The present situation in the needle trade unions demonstrates how so-called trade union leaders worked hand-in-hand with the employers. The betrayal of the Sigmans, Dubinskys and Schachtmans, and the blessing on this betrayal by the A. F. of L. officials show to what extent the bosses have succeeded in using labor leaders in their efforts to destroy the only economic weapon of the workers, the trade unions.

We must unmask such leaders, and fight the fight of all upon their machinery. No daily newspaper in the English language, other than the "Daily Worker" can serve the workers in their struggles with the bosses and in their efforts to rid their unions of the disguised agents of the bosses. No other newspaper can help them build their unions and their power.

I therefore greet the first New York issue of the "Daily Worker" and trust New York workers are fortunate in the addition of this mighty weapon which will help them to organize and make them more successful in their daily struggles, and which will bring them nearer to their final goal, economic emancipation.—

CHICAGO SLAVE MARKET SHOWS FEW JOBS SOLD; OPTIMISM IS ALL IN RANKS OF BIG BUSINESS

By WERNER LAWSE.
(Special To The Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 26.—As January's parting wintry blasts cut thru to the bones of the thousands of Chicago's unemployed the problem of the jobless is seen to be more critical than it has been since the winter of 1921. There are no jobs to be had, with thousands of men and women on the streets. A look round the slave markets on Madison, Halsted and South State Streets and an ear for idle, endless job hunting is more convincing than what figures might be available.

About Two Men for Job.

The last index of the Illinois Labor Department gives Chicago applicants for jobs at free employment bureaus as 172 to every 100 jobs available. This is for December. Officials at the Chicago office of the department, while they are reluctant to make any sort of estimate, roughly, as to the actual number, say that every indication points to the fact that since December the number of jobs has materially decreased. In November, for example, the ratio was 167 to 100, showing a steady decline of jobs.

Keep On Tramping.

Building trades workers and machinists to whom I have spoken tell of interminable tramping from building to building and shop to shop. Stockyards workers relate that there are more butchers out of work than since 1922. The state figures for factory employment show a drop of 1.4 per cent between November and December.

"Short covering and speculative buying, stimulated by cheerful steel earnings' report and the equally encouraging reports from other branches of American industry, brought about a good recovery in stock prices," says the last weekly report from the New York exchange.

The optimism of which sits very well with the coupon clippers but which cannot be shared by the unquestioningly large lay-offs in the steel mills at Gary and South Chicago, a compliment of a general cessation of production in most branches of industry in this city.

PAPER BOX STRIKE PARALLELS PASSAIC

(By a Worker correspondent)

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Another labor organization is being attacked. Another group of workers is waging a desperate struggle to maintain its union. Again organized employers, using hunger and cold as their weapons, are seeking to annihilate a labor organization that it has taken years to build up.

This time it is the paper box workers of New York City that are carrying on the struggle. For fifteen weeks they have fought against the mandate of their oppressors which would reduce them to the status of unorganized workers.

Would Crush Union

Fifteen weeks ago, the hundred and fifty paper box manufacturers of Greater New York determined that their employes give up their union. They themselves were bound together in a solid organization. They preferred to act as a unit, although they wanted their employes to act as individuals.

The workers did not yield to the demand, although they stood desperately in need of employment. They held to their union and struck for its maintenance.

Standards Low

Surely, they workers need a union if any workers do. It is very much needed to build up the terribly low standards that prevail in this industry. The factories are housed in the most dilapidated buildings of Manhattan along Gregne and Mercer and Prince Streets, where old buildings stand that have been out of date for many years and whose conveniences since most part of the town have long since been pulled down to make way for modern structures. In these dilapidated edifices of the garment district centrny the paper box workers are huddled. Go down and look at them some day. A large part of the work is performed on the floors for the rent of upper floors is not as cheap as the discarded, uninhabitable basements.

The misery of the basements is intensified by the fact that the heavy cut board must be carried up by the workers as there are no elevator facilities in 50 per cent of the shops.

In that dampness and darkness, the paper box workers spend their labor hours.

Workers Driven

The seasons vary in intensity and there is approximately eight months of each year part time employment. Always there is the most hellish driving of workers. The wages, the state department of labor reports, are next to the lowest of those paid in any industry. And sanitary conditions are indisputedly the worst.

Here we have truly a sweated industry, one of the last survivals of that hated race, the principal emre for which is organization.

A Second Passaic

For fifteen long weeks the struggle has gone on. Picket lines have been maintained morning and evening, with both men and women appearing upon them. Young girls in their teens have braved the snow and the rain and cold in helping to keep them. They have been one of the most effective ways of demonstrating the strength of the strike. Policemen's clubs have been wielded upon unprotected heads in the offense of walking along the sidewalks and informing would-be workers that a strike was on. Four hundred pickets have been arrested. In almost every case for no legal offense. In nearly every case the person has been dismissed because he has committed no crime. Union men and women have been beaten by the thugs employed by the manufacturers.

This has been another Passaic strike in all except two details. The details are: This is a strike to defend a union already formed, rather than one to establish a new union. 2. The police and hired strong-arm men have been sufficiently not to attack reporters, so the strike has not been given the newspaper publicity that the Passaic strike received.

In many respects we have a Passaic strike here right in our midst.

Come quickly with your help. Contribute from your own pocketbook. Get your friends to contribute. Get your union to contribute. In a desperate struggle like this, every dollar sent soon has twice its value. Help the paper box workers to win.

Steel Firm Nets Big Profits After Paying Miners' Union Scale

NEW YORK, (FP).—Paying the United Mine Workers scale to several thousand employes in its coal mines has not prevented Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., from making high profits. Its 1926 profits rose to $15,149,094 from $9,854,494 in 1925, says the annual report. And its 1926 common stock dividends climbed to $19.46 a share as compared to $10.30 in 1925.

During the same period Bethlehem Steel repudiated the Jacksonville wage agreement and reduced its miners' pay 23 per cent on the pretext that it could not operate its coal properties profitably at the union figure.

Jones & Laughlin coal is mined by the Vesta Coal Co., one of the three big concerns continuing to deal with the U. M. W. of A. in the Pittsburgh field. It does not recognize organized labor in its steel mills.

BRICKLAYERS' RELIEF INCREASING.

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Old age relief and mortuary benefits paid to members by the Bricklayers, Plasterers and Masons' International Union in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926, were respectively $958,606 and $318,311, according to Secretary-Treasurer Gleeson. This was the highest total for each of the two funds that has yet been expended.

ELMIRA, N. Y. (F. P.).—At the tail end of other roads the Erie Railroad has come forward with small wage increases to its shopmen. The road granted 2 and 3-4 cents an hour more pay, retroactive to January 1, 1927.

Carry Anti-Syndicalist Law Fight to State Legislature on Coast

By L. P. RINDAL

(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Indications are that a hard fight will be put up before the California legislature to repeal the criminal syndicalism law. The noted jurist and criminologist, Dr. George W. Kirchwey, has made a survey of this act for the American Civil Liberties Union, and he characterizes it as a "farce." So does Leon R. Yankwich, professor of law at Loyola college and member of the Los Angeles bar. William Kent, former United States congressman, is also strong against the law, according to a statement in the South California Labor Press (A. F. of L.). The Open Forum, organ of the A. C. L. U. branch, and the liberal (sometimes almost radical) Los Angeles Record are both putting up a strong protest against the savagery of California.

The Sacco-Vanzetti United Front Defense Conference has held two meetings already this year, on January 9 and 16. The number of delegates has greatly increased, as many craft locals have voted to take more active part in the work to free these workers.

At a recent election the following officers were elected: T. B. Webber, president; George Timberlake, vice-president; Angelo Spinazi, treasurer; Mike Shelman, secretary, and Dave Rapoport, assistant secretary.

Arrangements have been made to hold a big mass meeting in the near future.

Organizing Cab Drivers Union In Philadelphia In Spite of Discharges

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30 (FP).—Taxicab drivers of Philadelphia are seeking to build up a union. More than 30 men suspected of union sympathy have been fired, but the movement continues. The Yellow Taxi Co. now owned by Thomas R. Mitten interests, discharged 10 of these drivers, when they were seen reading copies of the Cab Driver's Bulletin.

The Cab Drivers Union demands call for a guaranteed wage of $4 a day; 8-hour day and 6-day week; time starting on arrival at garage; time and half for overtime; abolition of criminal identification—fingerprinting and photographing; installation of lockers and sanitary washrooms; no discrimination, and recognition of the union.

Mitten has lost much of his popularity in Philadelphia. Poor service on his Philadelphia Rapid Transit street car system is being criticized severely. Quaker City citizens, business groups and district associations are howling that Mitten keeps the P. R. T. street cars few and far between, while pushing his Yellow cabs under everyone's nose. Mitten cabs solicit crowds waiting on corners for the long delayed Mitten trolleys.

Clifford Pinchot, before his term as governor expired, urged the Public Service Commission to make an immediate inquiry into transit conditions in Philadelphia." Pinchot's regular Republican successor, John Fisher, has not yet called for a report.

Cab drivers boasting the union hope to forestall the famous "Mitten plan" of company unionism which Mitten is trying to extend into taxi service. Mitten has fought trade unions since 1911 when he broke a street railway workers' strike in Philadelphia. His son boasted recently that the father spent $3,000,000 breaking a Buffalo car strike, which ended with the introduction of the company union.

The Mitten plan calls for employe stock ownership. But Robert W. Dunn, speaking before the Young Democracy Open Forum in Philadelphia, pointed out that though the workers owned a large minority of the common stock their share in the total outstanding securities of the company amounted to only about three percent and their share in the total earnings of the company was therefore far below what it was cracked up to be.

Discharge Telegraph Operators With the Speed-up on the Job

By SIDNEY TEPPER
(Worker Correspondent)

Hundreds of Morse telegraph operators are being discharged by the Western Union Telegraph Co. and many more put on a part time basis all over the United States, as a result of the speed-up system and "economy drive."

The men and women discharged or given indefinite furloughs have been with the company between two and fifteen years.

For years these workers have slaved for low wages, long hours, slugtime for overtime after 9 hours, with the hope of having a permanent job. (During the war the government compelled the company to grant the 8-hour day and time and a half for overtime, in large offices only.)

The slave driving supervisors were always on the workers' necks, asking for bigger records. The company spent millions of dollars to devise new speed up machinery. A general discontent swept through the telegraphers. Attempts followed to form a union of commercial telegraphers. The company being alarmed by the general restlessness of the workers sent stool pigeons to spy upon the men. Every union meeting was filled with stool pigeons who are ready to sell their fellow workers for a few dollars, bought job or a smile from an official. The most active workers were reported and fired.

A strike was called in 1918 but it was lost. There are three reasons why the strike was lost. (1) Union called the strike in one office only while the other were unaffected. Scabs brought in from other places. (2) Stool pigeons demoralized the ranks and (3) many men were afraid to lose their "steady jobs."

The Western Union alarmed by these events tooks measures to safeguard itself against their repetitions. They organized the fake company union and discharged anyone who was suspected of still belonging to the commercial telegraphers.

Of this company union and the new "welfare" measures we will write in future articles.

LABOR SECRETARY DAVIS CHANGES "HYMN OF HATE"

Never Favored Alien Bills, So He Says

The Connecticut Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers sees a direct connection between its very successful state conference held in New Haven on Sunday and a speech delivered in that city by Secretary of Labor Davis the following day.

Mr. Davis speaking over the radio denied emphatically that he had ever favored registration of aliens involving finger-printing or espionage, and claimed that he had in fact always emphatically opposed such proposed measures. He said he was merely advocating a voluntary registration system which would benefit the alien by making naturalization easier and simpler.

Seems To Be Change.

This statement was surprising to the Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers which has been fighting all anti-alien measures such as the various proposed registration bill. The council seems to remember very distinctly that a year ago the Secretary of Labor was backing the pernicious Aswell bill which not only calls for finger-printing but also for taxing for conscription at the will of the president, and for such a Fascist system of registry that it would result in constant spying upon a workers' every move and action.

Davis Yields.

The Secretary of Labor in his annual report, issued in December, stated that in view of the fact that so many people seemed to object to the proposals for compulsory registration such as had been brought up in every session of Congress since 1922—he was willing to try some scheme of voluntary registration of aliens. In other words he felt it necessary to yield to the tremendous pressure of public opinion against this attempted attack upon the foreign-born.

Inserting The Thin Edge.

In line with this change in Mr. Davis' plans, Representative Holaday introduced a new bill, on January 10th of this year, calling upon Congress to set certain dates for voluntary registration of aliens to be carried on. This is presumably for the purpose of aiding them in becoming naturalized.

But the Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers asks why there is need of passing a law if the registration is to be optional.

"We are convinced that what will actually result is a demand for compulsory registration when the voluntary scheme has failed as it surely will. A certain proportion of aliens register—perhaps at the command of employers—the authorities can then say that those workers who did not register must be suspicious characters and therefore ought to be forced to register.

Whatever Mr. Davis may say at this time, the Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers is convinced that the latter—and proposes to introduce as soon as the public will stand for it—a compulsory system of registration of aliens. After that will come registration for all of us.

Mr. Davis said in his New Haven speech: "I know that many of you here are opposed to the enrollment of aliens in the United Stats. I am unable to fathom why. I have proposed no espionage, no finger-printing, no other identifieation other than the fact of enrollment. Finger-printing measures have been advocated, but I have strenuously opposed them".

Council Gets Results.

The Connecticut Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers believes that nothing could have brought forth such a statement as Mr. Davis' gathering of more than 350 delegates at a conference which opposed all such measures, and voted to continue to fight them as long as they were forced to.

Sunday's conference, according to Miss Nina Samorodin, Secretary of the National organization, had representatives of every union, of central bodies, of fraternal and religious organizations from 8 different cities.

Couldn't Break It Up.

"There were twenty delegates, representing certain Workman's Circle branches and the Socialists", says Miss Samorodin, "who came all prepared to break up the meeting. But after they had had a thoro hearing, they were flouted by the delegates, part of them withdrew, and the conference proceeded to a most successful conclusion."

If one council difference could so influence Secretary of Labor Davis, a hundred councils if established thruout the country could no doubt crush out all attempts to persecute the foreign born workers with any more proposed registration and deportation measures in Congress. Write to the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers, 41 Union Square, New York, N. Y. for information about a council in your city.

The Manager's Corner

A POUND OF NEWSPRINT VS. A GRAIN OF NEWS

Leon Trotsky once commented sarcastically upon the fact that certain issues of American newspapers weigh four pounds. The average Sunday paper weighs this much and sometimes more. This enormous load consists of all the trash which can be thrown together to stupify and confuse the minds of the workers, inane comic strips, cheap sob stories, social sewage from the divorce courts and the domestic life of the idle rich, advice to the lovelorn, lurid murder tales, and similar insipid vaporings which emanate in a poisonous cloud from the pages of the capitalist press. The care-full reader of the news is forced to wade through this mass of intellectual garbage, to find here and there a shred of real news of social importance, usually not more than a grain of news to a pound of newsprint.

Within the six pages of The DAILY WORKER is crammed all the meat, in the way of news, that can be put into such a limited space. If you will scan the pages of The DAILY WORKER you will notice with what care the news is selected. Each item is chosen for its particular importance or genuine human interest. Each topic is developed with an eye to bringing out its social significance. Each article is written with but one thought in mind, that of service to the workers.

The worker who is led to chose his newspaper by flashy appeal of the capitalist press, by its glaring, but empty headlines, or by its vapid pictures, is like a child who responds solely to the immediate sense impression, and grasps at the brightest object which comes within his reach. In choosing a newspaper, cheap novelty alone should not be the standard, but rather the novelty of that which is intellectually stimulating and socially useful. A newspaper should furnish real food for thought.

—BERT MILLER.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Come Back for More.

Editor, DAILY WORKER: I was at the Bramhall Theatre at 21th Street and Lexington Avenue to see the play "The Difference in Gods". It was very well acted and the thought behind it was a very fine one. However, the seating capacity of the theatre amounts to 300 approximately, and only one-fourth or less was filled.

Any movie house is filled, no matter how stupid the picture may be. The prices in the movies rank anywhere between 25c and 65c, whereas the charge at the Bramhall Theatre is well within the reach of the worker—25c only; 25c to see a play superbly acted. But this is not all that I want to bring out. Butler Davenport, hero of plays and owner of the theatre is the only one (except the Workers' Theatre) who offered a free seat to the paper box striker to see "The Bells." I'm sure any striker would as wit enjoyed it.

I believe every worker who reads this paper to dig up but one quarter and go to the Bramhall Theatre instead of going to a nonsensical picture, and I'm sure you will come back for more.

FLORENCE PROFKY.

An Appeal to Women

Dear Comrades: Reading The DAILY WORKER every day, your "challenge" letters have interested me very much, because they show how little the majority of your Party are doing to help Keep The DAILY WORKER.

If every member of your Party would have done his share, you would have gone "over the top" a long time ago. If the majority would have any interest in the paper or really realize that The DAILY WORKER was in a precarious condition, they would answer those "challenge" letters much faster.

Appeal to Women

Although neither my wife nor I am a Party member, I would like to make a suggestion. On account of what my wife has done, the thought has come to me that if you make an appeal to the wives of the Party members and to women in general, to come to the rescue of The DAILY WORKER, the response would be surprising.

When the Passaic Relief Committee sent out an appeal for relief funds it was my wife who urged me to go out and collect funds for them. We raised $25.00.

We received another appeal from the same source. Again it was my wife who urged me and went with me to collect more money. With her help I raised another $28.00 and 250 pounds of new and old clothing.

A Real Wife.

Then when you made an appeal to keep The DAILY WORKER in existence, and my wife read in the letters that I gave only $4.00 (as much as I had at that time), these are the exact words she used to me, "Is that all you gave? Why, what would we and all the other workers do if The DAILY WORKER stopped publication?"

She made me promise to send $5.00 immediately (the amount you will find enclosed), and to send an other five as soon as possible (which I shall also do).

That's why I say, make an appeal to the women folks. They know what it means to fight for an existence and they are the ones who will help save our DAILY.

If this letter will do any good you may publish it with pleasure.

With Comrade Greetings
MAX MILLER

Long Live the Daily Worker in New York City.

Editor, DAILY WORKER: With unconfined joy, I add my voice in welcoming to New York, the only English language labor daily in America voicing the hopes and aspirations of the working class movement.

The arrival of The DAILY WORKER in New York will serve not only to dissolve the countless falsehoods spawned by the managers of capitalism, such as the New York Times and the rest, but will also counteract directly the vicious fabrications and fairy tales disseminated by the yellow socialist New Leader.

The first day out on New York's sea of struggle saw the sale of The DAILY WORKER rise to great and glorious heights and my newsdealer who often complained of left-overs, was more than glad to announce that all his dailies, fifteen in all, were sold out. In a feverish hunt thruout the lower Bronx, for a copy, I discovered much the same situation.

Comrades and fellow workers! Keep up the good work, and let the reactionaries know that our much heralded weakness and oft-reported "slow death" is only a fanciful dream.

Long live The DAILY WORKER in New York City.—JOSEPH J. PADGUG.

BRITISH UNION REJECTS LONG HOURS.

NEW YORK, (FP).—The United Textile Factory Workers Association of Great Britain has refected the demand of employers that working hours be increased, say Manchester dispatches to New York textile journals. The union is asking parliament to amend the factory laws and make 48 hours the legal limit. The proposed amendment is interpreted as a bid wat overtime.

STRIKE FOR UNION SHOP

TILTON, N. J., Jan. 29. Two hundred members of the United Textile Workers, employed in the Elm Mill here are struck and tied up the shop when an attempt was made to establish a non-union shop by having John Perthel, weaver, withdraw from the union, and continue at work. This scheme was tried once before, four years ago, by the same man. A short strike resulted in the company giving him orders to join the union.

The Lewis Machine Shows Its Inner Weakness.

The Lewis machine was defeated last Wednesday afternoon. It did not lose permanent control of the convention, thanks to its traditional control which enables it to count votes as it but for almost two hours the rank and file speakers [illegible] disapproval of the machine proposal with respect to [illegible] of the constitution.

[illegible] to such a thing as a spontaneous revolt, this is what [illegible] Vice-President Murray, Van Bittner, Capt. [illegible] Tether and other heavyweights of the administration.

Section 25 reads:

The board shall have power to levy and collect assessments when necessary but no assessment shall be collected for more than two months unless authorized by a referendum vote of the members.

The constitution committee had proposed that the words "no assessment shall be collected for more than two months unless authorized by a referendum vote of the membership." This change would have given the Lewis machine authority to levy and collect assessments at will.

Evidently the opposition was in an uproar. Rank and file delegates were shouting for the floor. Some of them got it and when the machine speakers tried to stem the tide. They could not. Murray tried to stop one young, rotund and good-natured looking delegate but was told to his face: "I represent my local union and I am going to speak." He did. So did many more.

The delegates from the anthracite were especially acrimonious. "Let us enforce the check-off and we won't have to worry about assessment. We are spending four or five hundred dollars every month in my local now collecting dues," said one speaker.

The well-known progressive leaders took no part in the fight. Apparently they were quite satisfied with the way things were going and wanted to see how much fighting spirit there was in the convention.

Finally Murray forced a vote.

There was a clear majority against the committee report but Murray declared it carried.

There were hundreds of demands for a roll call.

30 per cent. of the delegates must vote in favor to secure a roll call. Murray talked of the expense, etc., but when he called for a show of hands more than seven hundred miners' fists were raised—almost half of the delegates voted for it.

The machine tellers counted 498 and said it was not the required amount. Murray adjourned the convention.

As the delegates crowded thru the doors into the open air there was a steady murmur of curses and complaints.

"So this is what we get for supporting the constructive policies of those s——s of b——e," said one.

"I've never been a Howat man but by god—," said another.

"I didn't vote for Brophy but I hope he runs again, that's all," said a third.

Writing on January 26, we said:

"What the opposition . . . will accomplish if it catches the machine off guard for a moment is to defeat it by exposing its political weakness on the convention floor."

This has been done.

The whole convention has seen the machine cowering before a rank and file onslaught and forced, to save itself from disgraceful defeat, to thwart openly the expressed will of the rank and file.

Every honest delegate is drawing his own conclusions—and they are not complimentary to the Lewis machine.

There are two reasons for this sudden loss of control over the convention. They are:

(1) The issue was one on which the machine felt sure of victory and consequently neglected to stage the usual red-baiting scene.

(2) The granting of unlimited power to levy and collect assessments is a practical question which every delegate can understand at once.

If the left wing is able now to take the lead in a fight for reconsideration of a vote which every delegate knows was crooked the Lewis machine will be in a bad way. Its artificial majority from non-existent locals will enable it to count votes in its favor but something more than mechanical majorities are needed to preserve the political prestige of the machine during and after this convention.

That prestige was damaged badly on Thursday afternoon.

The worst has come in China. The Chinese priests have organized into a union, adopted a wage scale and declared that they will not say another darned prayer until the bosses accede to their demands. It's about time the American religious trusts should begin evacuating their missionaries.

China cannot be fooled by Great Britain's specious peace message. The Cantonese declare they cannot understand why Britain needs 20,000 troops to conduct negotiations anywhere except on a battlefield. We have suspicion that the Chinese will not be caught with their spurs off.

Mary Green Tells Story of Her Life

Mary Green, born in Poland, barely speaks the English language, yet she has been in America since she was a child. She is big with large bones and muscles. Her coarse hair pulled tight back in a knot by a few rusty hair pins.

Into Child Slavery.

But Mary was young in years, yes, even good looking. She came to Passaic, N. J. at the age of thirteen, healthy, robust, almost too big for her age. She might have gone to school, but being the eldest of a family of six, she had to get a job, and so her career in the Botany Mills began, working ten and twelve hours daily for $3 a week. This, however, did not discourage Mary. She did not think she would have to work for long, for soon she would marry John Miklosky, whom she had met on the steamer from Poland. Even night school was impossible for Mary to attend, since her father worked in the day while her mother worked on the night shift, making her the mother of the younger children.

Wearing Out at Seventeen.

When she became seventeen, she married John. By that time the robustness, the rosy cheeks and her strength began to give way, and where the red blood used to rush, patches of rouge hid the growing pallor.

One year of love and Mary gave birth to a little girl. She had to keep up work. But the family had to live, the doctor's bills to be paid, baby's clothes, etc., and within a few months we find Mary back on the night shift in the Botany Mills more worn than ever. Nineteen, only a young girl, and already she was broken with flat feet and rings under her eyes.

Gave to The Church.

Years dragged on—Mary and John worked. Their family increased. Mary loved her children, respected he husband, went to church every Sunday and on holidays, gave all the pennies she could to the church and waited for the good God to help her as he would all good people who trusted and believed in him.

By the time Helen, her oldest girl was thirteen, Mary had already six children, and John's earnings, $10 a week, did not suffice to support the family. Helen, like her mother, went into the Botany. Suffering and misery increased day by day. Mary's only thought was, "will the meagre earnings enable her to buy enough food for the family, to pay rent, gas bills, [illegible] two [illegible] to fight the Hun for the Stars and Stripes. The Miklosky's, who are Germans, had suddenly developed patriotism. Flags, flags all over. A star was hung up in the Forstmann-Huffmann plant for Mary's son who was killed in the Marines. It was Peace on Earth and Good Will toward men. Then Armistice. Hurrah!! We had won. Peace! Peace. Peace and readjustment!... Pre-war conditions... War tax. Wage cuts. Speed up systems. Profiteering.

The money-hungry mill owners who had made tremendous profits out of the war, were without consideration for the workers. On Monday morning, October 9, 1924, a notice was posted to the effect of yet another 10% wage cut.

No Confidence In God.

This meant actual starvation, and Mary who in all her life had never complained and devoutly believed in God and trusted that he would help her, felt at last a hatred toward all those responsible for her miserable life. Mary felt her very life going. It was no more a question of a home, she she had dreamt of one ever since she was seventeen. No, she never could save enough to buy the first mortgage on a shack in Garfield. This time she began wondering how she would be able to pay the rent of the shack on Mattimore Street, where she now lived. It was not milk and cream and meat, but bread for her children! Bread!

This wrong must not be done to the workers. The bosses have enough. Why doesn't the Merciful God punish them for treating the people like this?

Determines To Live.

The more she thought of it, the more determined her NO. That No became louder and louder. With fists clenched and teeth biting into her lips to the bleeding point, she had felt something had to be done. She will not starve, and more so, she will not let the children starve. Their life is miserable enough But what shall she do?

Mary had never known the value of a union, in fact she was against it. The boss always told her that they were not good, and besides he would fire all the people who would dare to belong to a union, and even the priest discouraged organization. But now some of the workers in Botany said, "We must organize," and she listened to such talk for the first

The Cabinet Hindenburg Wanted

By JURI VICTOR

The "democratic German Republic" now has its most reactionary cabinet. The republic, established in 1918 by the Noskes and Scheidemanns, who thus got the monarchists and junkers out of a deep international hole, has moved steadily towards the right until today the ministerial combination may even make Wilhelm in Doorn feel better. It is all the work of that great aristocrat, Hindenburg, who, while the liberals in all countries were hailing him as the exponent of progressive political thought and republican patriotism, was busy preparing warm berths for his friends, monarchist nationalists. For doing lip service to the republic and for accepting Stresemann's Locarno policy, these representatives of the rich land owners and mining industrialists have obtained four portfolios in the new government, two of which are the best support for the oppression of the working class.

German political developments in the last two years could be made the finest, large-scale object lesson in the operation of democracy. In the spring of 1925, Hindenburg, the candidate of the nationalists and people's party, was the first president on a frankly monarchist ticket against Marx, the candidate of the republicans, democrats, social democrats and centrists. Since then Marx has been Hindenburg's prime minister more than any other man.

Last summer 15,000,000 Germans, a majority of the electorate, voted for the expropriation without compensation of ex-royalty. This was 100% proof that the Reichstag did not represent the masses. It should have packed up and gone home. But Hindenburg wrote a letter, the cabinet shivered before the grand old man, and the princes continued to get their subsidies—with the help of the social democrats. That referendum, which acted contrary to the will of more than half the voters, still sits.

Last November the third Marx cabinet was forced to resign on account of the opposition to Gessler, minister of war, under whom the reichswehr, by the hearty of anti-republican propaganda and the spread of militarism and reaction. A majority of the reichstag voted against Gessler and the ministry had to quit. Today Gessler is back in the cabinet and a [illegible] same reichstag which voted against him two months ago will now vote for him. One reason is the perfidy of the Catholic Centre.

Bosses Control Radio

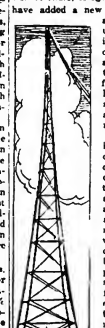
"Free as the air" doesn't mean so much as it used to, since the invention of radio, telegraph and telephone have added a new use to the space above and around us, and a use that is by the nature of the cost of the apparatu required to exploit it, with few exceptions limited to the possession of the rich and of governments.



Radio Telegraphy is said to have increased the difficulties of secret diplomacy, by enticing ambassadors and other political agents to employ a means of communication in which opponents can listen in, and by making it impossible to prevent small sending sets from being erected which can distribute important information [illegible] the radio sending apparatus was controlled by the [illegible] government, and used [illegible] purposes by them. Also [illegible] attempts to set up [illegible] sending stations are hindered [illegible] fact that the best wave lengths, the most powerful stations, are reserved for the great corporations.

Another is the insistence of Hindenburg that there be no tampering with the "armed forces of the nation." The reichswehr must continue — as heretofore — to admit only out and out monarchists and to train Fascists secretly. Sooner or later the workers in Germany will realize that at bottom the social democrats are to blame for the resumption of power by the reactionary Right. In 1918 the Socialists might have made as clean a sweep of things as the Bolsheviks had made in Russia. But they believed in democracy, in "freedom." Their only terror was against the Communists. The result is a regime of Hindenburg, Gessler, Hergt, Graef, Stresemann and Marx

Nationalists Control Military and Courts.

To the nationalists have gone the two best weapons for the oppression of the working class. Graef, right wing nationalist, is minister of justice. He takes over 4,000 political prisoners and can be expected to increase their number. While the democrats and social democrats supported the cabinet, a rigid regime of anti-proletarian justice was maintained. Now a quiet reign of terror is ahead. Herr Walter Graef will be ably seconded by Dr. Oscar Hergt, leader of the nationalists, who, as minister of interior, will have the job of restoring "Ruhe and Ordnung" in the land. The workers are in for a period of reaction which should open the eyes of the social democratic rank and file.

The new Marx cabinet has only a flimsy majority. It may last a long time; it may fall within a very short period. Marx can, on certain issues, count on the support of the bour[illegible] [illegible] the benev[illegible] [illegible] democ[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [
